(b) The draft statute of the fund places the ultimate responsibility for appointing the managers of the fund with the fund's general meeting. This meeting would comprise representatives of the fund's shareholders: the European investment bank, the European Community and financial institutions from member states. The EIB and the EC would hold the majority of the share capital, and their representatives at the meeting would be accountable to the EIB's board of governors, and the ECOFIN Council, respectively.

(c) The draft statute envisages that day-to-day management would be in the hands of a financial committee. This would have three members, one of whom would be a representative of the EIB, one a representative of the EC, and one a representative of the financial institutions. No nomination to this committee can be made until the fund is established.

Child Nutrition

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations he has received from the National Children's Home in regard to child nutrition; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received a letter from the N.C.H. Action for Children. A reply will be sent in due course.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Prime Minister how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in 10 Downing street and (b) in the Cabinet Office.

The Prime Minister: There are five paper shredding machines in 10 Downing street, and five in the Cabinet Office.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Radioactive Wastes (Dumping)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place document A/C1/48/L.17 on prohibition of dumping of radioactive wastes, presented to the United Nations General Assembly in 1993, in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The document has been placed in the Library.

Indonesia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he knew about the proposed sale of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia when he visited Jakarta in April 1993; and whether this was discussed.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs was aware of the proposed sale of Hawk aircraft when he visited Jakarta in April 1993. It was referred to during that visit.

UN Register of Conventional Arms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will use the description of item column to give details of model type of the equipment, when making the United Kingdom's 1993 return to the UN register of conventional arms.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are no plans to do so. This is not currently a requirement of the UN arms register.

Military Equipment Embargoes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries currently subject to embargoes on the export of British military equipment, when in each case the embargo was imposed and which equipment is covered.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We observe embargoes imposed by the United Nations on Iraq, imposed in 1991; Libya, 1992; Somalia, 1993; Liberia, 1992; Haiti, 1993; South Africa, 1977; and former Yugoslavia, 1991. The scope of United Nations embargoes is not defined; decisions on their application are made at national discretion on a case-by-case basis. We apply all these embargoes to all military equipment.

We also observe embargoes imposed by the European Union on China, 1989; Syria, 1986; Burma, 1991; and Zaire, 1993. We apply the embargoes on Burma, Zaire and Syria to all military equipment. We apply the embargo on China to weapons and any equipment which could be used for internal repression.

We also observe a voluntary embargo agreed by the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe on Armenia and Azerbaijan, 1992, which we consider applies to all military equipment.

In addition, as a matter of declared national policy we refuse to supply military equipment to Argentina, since 1982, and to Israel, since 1982—in the case of Israel, we decided in 1983 to allow the export of electronic and small non-lethal components provided they did not form part of equipment due to be put into service with the Israeli armed forces in Lebanon.

In the case of Iran, there have been restrictions since 1979. Stricter guidelines were introduced in 1984 relating to the export of all defence-related equipment. Following a review of export licensing criteria for Iran announced by the President of the Board of Trade in December 1992, new guidelines were announced to Parliament in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs' statement of 1 March 1993.

In the case of the United Nations embargoes on Iraq, Libya, Somalia, Liberia, Haiti and the former Yugoslavia, the Government have introduced Orders in Council under the United Nations Act 1946. In all other cases, controls are effected under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1992, and its predecessors.

Export licences have been issued in respect of equipment for United Nations and EC peacekeeping activities and for the protection of those undertaking humanitarian and media work, for example, journalists in former Yugoslavia.

Biodiversity Action Plan

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the reason for not including the British Indian ocean territory and the Great Chagos Bank Atoll in the areas covered by the biodiversity action plan published on 25 January.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: It was decided that given the special circumstances of the British Indian ocean territory —BIOT—it would not be appropriate for the islands to be included in the national plan for biodiversity.

Access to Diego Garcia is restricted because of the defence facility on the island. Nevertheless, legislative and other measures have been implemented to protect the territory's environment. BIOT has a conservation consultant who is developing a comprehensive programme for the territory and has close links with the charity, the Friends of the Chagos, an organisation concerned with the conservation of the Chagos archipelago.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The framework documents of the Natural Resources Institute and the Wilton Park executive agency set out the responsibilities delegated to the respective chief executives. They will normally be responsible for answering questions on those matters for which they are responsible.

UNESCO

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards renewed membership of UNESCO; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are continuing to keep this matter under close review, but for the moment have taken no decision on whether to rejoin UNESCO.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Goodlad: There is one paper shredding machine in the private office and an estimated 548 machines in the Department's home and overseas offices.

United Nations

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the United Kingdom's annual contribution to the funding of the United Nations in each of the last four years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Details of the United Kingdom's contributions to the United Nations regular budget over the past four years are as follows:

1992—$49,437,654
1993—$51,229,662
1994—$51,067,778—provisional

Sheikh Riaz Ahmad

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what substantive reply he has received from the French authorities concerning Sheikh Riaz Ahmad who was refused leave to enter France in December 1992; how many representations he has now made to the French authorities; how many replies he has now received from the French authorities; what further action he intends to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British embassy has yet to receive a satisfactory explanation as to why Mr. Ahmed was refused entry to France. The embassy has sent eight notes verbales to the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs to which it has received four replies, none of which was regarded as satisfactory. On 11 January 1994 the consul-general called at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to discuss Mr. Ahmed's case further. The Ministry agreed to look into the matter again.

I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as I have anything further to report.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards a cut-off convention for fissile materials available for nuclear warhead manufacture.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We supported the United Nations General Assembly resolution last year which called for the negotiation of a convention prohibiting the production of plutonium and highly enriched uranium for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices. Although we shall wish to consider very carefully the implications of such a convention for our nuclear deterrent, we recognise the potentially valuable contribution which a multilateral convention could make to non-proliferation. On 1 February, the conference on disarmament appointed a special co-ordinator to seek the views of its member states on the most appropriate arrangements for a cut-off convention.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 424, what has been the total amount received from the United Nations for Britian's contribution of troops, equipment and expertise to the UNPROFOR mission in former Yugoslavia in each year since the operation began.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: UNPROFOR Croatia—UNPROFOR I—began in February 1992, UNPROFOR Bosnia-Hercegovina Command—UNPROFOR II—in September 1992.

United Nations reimbursements for UNPROFOR I in the financial year 1992-93 totalled £191,663·25. Reimbursements for UNPROFOR I and II in the financial year 1993-94 to date now total £17,120,698·94.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 425, if he will list the payments made to his Department by the United Nations in respect of UNPROFOR in the last three financial years covering (a) military observers, (b) military contingents, (c) other costs pertaining to contingents, (d) civilian police monitors, (e) civilian staff costs, (f) international contractual personnel salaries, (g) engineering salaries and material, (h) helicopter operations, (i) fixed-wing aircraft, (j) aircrew subsistence allowance, (k) ground handling, (l) transport operations, (m) other equipment, (n) supplies and services, (o) integrated management information systems, (p) support for peacekeeping mission and (q) technological; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces explained in his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 424, United Nations reimbursements to date have been made up of standard rate payments for troop costs and rations only. UNPROFOR Croatia—UNPROFOR I—began in February 1992 and UNPROFOR Bosnia-Hercegovina Command—UNPROFOR II—in September 1992. UNPROFOR II was only brought on to United Nations assessed contribution funding from 1 April 1993. The MoD Operation Hanwood withdrew from Croatia in September 1993. United Nations reimbursements have therefore been made in the financial years 1992-93 and 1993-94 to date as follows:

Financial Year 1992-93
UNPROFOR I progress payments for troop costs for the period to 31 July 1992
July 1992	117,726·45
February 1993	73,936·80
Total	191,663·25
Financial Year 1993-94 to date
UNPROFOR I balance of refunds due for troop costs March to July 1992
May 1993	131,899·88

UNPROFOR I troop costs for the month of August 1992 June 1993	216,526·76
UNPROFOR I troop costs for the months of September and October 1992 July 1993	414,643·55
UNPROFOR I troop costs for the month of November 1992 August 1993	190,521·39
UNPROFOR I troop costs for the month of December 1992 September 1993	179,233·43
UNPROFOR I troop costs for the months of January to March 1993 October 1993	535,084·08
UNPROFOR I and II progress payments for troop costs April to June 1993 November 1993	5,419,567·12
UNPROFOR II rations for the period April to June 1993 November 1993	1,038,928·80
UNPROFOR II rations for the period July to September 1993 December 1993	974,359·39
UNPROFOR I and II progress payment for troop costs for July to September 1993 December 1993	5,112,072·48
UNPROFOR II progress payment for troop costs for October 1993 January 1994	1,578,704·56
UNPROFOR II progress payment for troop costs for November 1993 February 1994	1,329,157·50
Total	17,120,698·94

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Laws (Employment)

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which EC countries have laws criminalising employers for employing workers who do not have permission to work under the immigration laws of the country; and for each country how long such legislation has been in existence.

Mr. Charles Wardle: From the information readily available we understand that most member states of the EC have penalties which involve fines and/or imprisonment for employers who employ foreign nationals who do not have the requisite permission to work. Information as to how long such legislation has been in existence is not available.

Committal Proceedings

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusion he has reached on the Royal Commission on criminal justice's recommendations regarding committal proceedings.

Mr. Howard: The Government have accepted the arguments put forward by the Royal Commission and agreed that committal proceedings should be abolished.

"Old style" or "full" committals are a costly and cumbersome process. They are open to abuse by the defence, particularly where the witness is also a victim. The much larger number of so-called "paper " committals are largely a formality, serving little purpose.

Abolishing committals would reduce, in most cases, the time taken by pre-trial procedures and should allow savings to be made in court and legal aid costs.

In place of committal hearings, we propose there should be a procedure allowing cases to be transferred to the Crown court administratively. This would apply in all indictable-only cases, and in triable either-way cases once a decision on mode of trial has been reached in the magistrates court.

As recommended by the royal commission, there would still be a procedure under which the defence could argue that there was no case to answer in advance of trial at the Crown court.

Under the proposed new "transfer for trial" procedure, such an application would in most cases be considered by the magistrates on the papers. But the court would have a discretion to admit oral argument by the defence on application.

Again as recommended by the royal commission, no witnesses would be called to give evidence in these proceedings. This means there will be no question of vulnerable witnesses being requested to give evidence twice.

A new clause will shortly be tabled as an addition to the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill, which, if approved, will give effect to these proposals.

Police Performance Targets

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those police forces which had and had not (a) published targets and indicators of performances and (b) published target times for answering telephone calls and responding to incidents requiring rapid reaction by July 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information is not centrally available. Police forces will be expected to publish performance indicators and targets for 1993-94 during the course of 1994-95. Local authorities will also be publishing the Audit Commission performance indicators.

Immigration

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the current waiting time for interview in relation to settlement applications from spouses or fiances or fiancees in Pakistan;

(2) what is the current waiting time for interviews in relation to settlement applications from spouses or fiances or fiancees in India.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is published in table 10 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin Issue 33/93 "Control of Immigration: Statistics—First and Second Quarters 1993", a copy of which is in the Library. Statistics for the third and fourth quarters of 1993 will be published in April.

Overseas Electors

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens living overseas have applied to be registered to vote in elections in each parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on the number of British citizens overseas applying to register as overseas electors is not collected centrally. Information on the number of overseas electors included in the 1993-94 register for each constituency was published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in "Electoral Statistics 1993"—EL No. 20—copies of which are in the Library. Figures for the 1994-95 register will be published in the summer.

Taylforth Libel Case

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Metropolitan Commissioner on the release to The Sun newspaper of the facts of the arrest and caution which were the subject of the recent Taylforth libel case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand from the Commissioner that a reporter from The Sun telephoned the Metropolitan police press bureau seeking confirmation of the details of an incident on 17 June 1992 on a slip road of the A1. The press bureau confirmed that an incident had occurred, but did not volunteer the names of the persons involved.

Proxy Voting

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make the application form to vote by post or proxy due to disability or physical incapacity available in braille.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no plans to do so.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance is issued to chief constables on the reporting of criminal activity on police command and control systems and in published rates of recorded crime;

(2) whether each police force throughout England and Wales uses the same criteria in recording criminal activity on police command and control systems and in the publishing of statistics of recorded crime.

Mr. Maclean: Statistics of recorded crime are based on rules for classification and counting which are standard for all the police forces in England and Wales. A comprehensive set of counting rules is used by police forces in order to maintain the consistency of recording multiple, continuous and repeated offences. Although these rules are issued centrally, many decisions still have to be taken locally about the recording and counting of criminal incidents.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the report of a crime on a police command and control system which is reported for information only is included in the published crime statistics.

Mr. Maclean: The recording process starts when someone reports to the police that an offence has been committed or when the police observe or discover an offence. The police make an initial examination of the facts to determine if there is prima facie evidence that an offence has been committed; if so, a crime report will be made out and if that offence is deemed "notifiable", it will be included in the Home Office crime statistics.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the reporting of a series of criminal acts as a continuous crime on a police command and control system is recorded as a single crime in published crime statistics.

Mr. Maclean: Notifiable offences deemed by the police to be of a continuous nature, in accordance with Home Office instructions, will be notified to the Home Office as a single offence and published as such.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the report of a crime on a police command and control system as tampering is recorded in the published crime statistics.

Mr. Maclean: The recording of "tampering" offences is dependent on the interpretation of the circumstances surrounding each individual incident. An offence regarded as being attempted theft of/from a vehicle is a "notifiable" offence and would be published in the crime statistics. However, an offence deemed to be interference with a motor vehicle is not "notifiable" and would not be shown in the crime statistics.

Fire Fighting, Cleveland

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to make a decision on the provision of fire fighting services in Cleveland.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In the light of advice which my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has received from the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council and from Her Majesty's chief inspector of fire services, he proposes when local government in Cleveland is reorganised, to establish a combined fire authority for Cleveland. The combined authority will take over the functions under the Fire Services Act 1947 which are currently exercised by Cleveland county council, and will consist of members drawn from the four unitary authorities which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment proposes to establish in the Cleveland area when the county council is abolished.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimnbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Howard: The amounts are as follows:

1990-91	3,408,180·95
1991-92	2,771,581·37
1992-93	2,850,542·04

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February 1994, Official Report, column 611.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon;

(2) which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Howard: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Mandatory Life Sentences

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures he follows before he decides what tariff period should be set for persons sentenced to mandatory life imprisonment.

Mr. Howard: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I gave on 27 July 1993, Official Report, column 863, in response to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence).

Metropolitan Police

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the priorities of the Metropolitan police for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The priorities of the Metropolitan police for 1994-95 are:

(i) to deliver the standards defined in the Metropolitan police service charter;
(ii) to increase the number of notifiable offences solved to 190,000;
(iii) to increase the detection rate for burglary to a minimum of 15 per cent.;
(iv) to improve performance against terrorism;
(v) to improve performance against the criminal use of firearms; and
(vi) to improve policing performance and quality of service by restructuring the Metropolitan police service.

Details of each of the priorities and the way in which they address the key objectives for policing I announced on 3 December, Official Report, columns 786-87, are set out in a corporate strategy document which the Commissioner is, with my approval, issuing today. I am sending copies today to all right hon. and hon. Members whose constituencies fall wholly or partly within the Metropolitan police district and I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list for each division of the Metropolitan police the establishment number by rank and the number of people in post by rank at the latest available date;

(2) if he will list (a) the sectors created in each division of the Metropolitan police, (b) the establishment level by rank for each sector, and (c) the number of people in post by rank in each sector, at the latest available date.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand from the Commissioner that information in the form requested is not held centrally. The table shows the figures for police officers in post by rank at area level as at 31 December 1993.

Informers

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what payments have been made by the City of London police to Mr. Totterington-Jarvis for information supplied by him; and over what period he was acting as an informer.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The use of informants is an operational matter and entirely the responsibility of the chief officer of the police force concerned.

Racial Incidents

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when data will be available on the number of racial incidents recorded by each police force in England and Wales for 1993.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In common with other statistics, information on reported racial incidents is now provided by police forces on a financial year basis. Information on the number of racial incidents reported to police forces in England and Wales for the year April 1993 to March 1994 will be available in mid-April.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures his Department has adopted to monitor the incidence of racial harassment and racial attacks in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Every police force in England and Wales is required to monitor the occurrence of racially motivated incidents using a standard definition agreed with the Association of Chief Police Officers, and taking account of Home Office guidance on ethnic classification issued as Home Office circular 70 of 1992. Data are supplied annually to the Home Office via HM inspectorate of constabulary.

Since April 1993, as part of the national package of core performance indicators for the police, each force will be expected to publish annual data on the total number of reported racial incidents in the force area, and the percentage of these in which further investigative action was taken. This information will be used by HM inspectorate of constabulary to monitor police performance.

In addition, the British crime surveys of 1988 and 1992 asked ethnic minority victims of crime about racial motivation. A paper on ethnic minorities' experience of crime, including the incidence of racial motivation, is due to be published shortly. The inter-departmental racial attacks group will be considering the latest available data on racial incidents as part of its continuing work programme.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of homicides in 1992 in which racial motivation was a factor.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available. The police are required to make returns of each known homicide to the Home Office, but are not specifically requested to note whether they consider racial motivation to be a factor.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that no future licences will be awarded under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 which would allow ex-pets to be used in research.

Mr. Charles Wardle: All applications for the use of animals in scientific procedures are considered on their merits, and against the criteria and constraints set out in the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. The Act contains strict provisions to guard against the possibility of stray or stolen dogs and cats being used in experiments.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that his Department will not grant licences for research on Dartmoor ponies; and what account he has taken of article 7(3) of directive 86/609 in considering this matter.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A blanket prohibition would not be appropriate. All applications for the use of animals in scientific procedures are considered on their merits, and against the criteria and constraints contained in the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, which is operated in accordance with the requirements of directive 86/609.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to ban the import of wild-caught primates for the use in scientific experiments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Substantial progress has been made in reducing the use of wild-caught primates in British laboratories. The Animal Procedures Committee is considering the practical problems in the way of eliminating such use altogether, and I look forward to receiving its advice in due course.

Prison Statistics

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 574, what is the expected date of publication of "Prison Statistics, England and Wales 1992".

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Publication of "Prison Statistics, England and Wales 1992" is now planned for June 1994. Summary information was published in March 1993 in Home Office statistical bulletin 7/93 "The Prison Population in 1992".

Young Offenders

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the second report of the Children's Society and Advisory Committee on Young Offenders, "A False Sense of Security", since it was published on 25 November 1993; and what proposals he has for action on the findings and recommendations of that report.

Mr. Maclean: The report made 20 recommendations. They were aimed at preventing and reducing youth crime, improving the youth justice system, dealing with persistent offenders and protecting the public from serious offenders. They have all been carefully considered. In brief, the Government's response is as follows:

we have longsupported both community-based crime prevention initiatives—including youth crime prevention panels which directly involve young people themselves—and also local inter-agency co-operation in the juvenile justice system;

we were already taking action in relation to some of the committee's concerns, such as making funding available for bail support schemes and setting time limits for the stages in court proceedings;

we agree that the report has made some useful comments on improving the effectiveness of community supervision programmes; this is an objective of the review of national standards—announced by my right hon. and learned Friend on 6 October 1993—for such programmes;

we think that the report places a proper emphasis on the need for independently inspected high standards of care in secure accommodation for children and for throughcare programmes aimed at rehabilitating such children: we intend that those standards and those objectives should apply in relation to the new secure training centres;

we think that the independent sector can play a part in the provision of secure accommodation for young people;

we do not accept the report's recommendation that plans for secure training centres should not be implemented.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Howard: In the Home Secretary's private office there are three shredding machines. The other information sought is not centrally recorded and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Killings

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many murders, how many unlawful killings and how many cases of manslaughter were committed in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many killings were committed by people found to have been of diminished responsibility.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is published in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1992"—Cm 2410—chapter 4 and table 4.2.

A copy of this publication is in the Library.

Criminals (Employment Status)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the employment status of persons convicted of crimes in England and Wales in the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The information readily available is given in the table and is taken from a special data collection exercise undertaken in a small number of courts to monitor the implementation of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. The statistics are subject to sampling error and may not be representative of all courts in England and Wales. They will also reflect changes in employment status from the date of arrest. Some research studies on this issue were listed in my reply to the hon. Member on 1 February, Official Report, column 650.

Deportations

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been deported from the United Kingdom in each of the last three years; and what was the nationality of each person who has been deported.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 27 January 1994]: The information requested is given in the table.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Murdered Service Men (France)

31. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what discussions he has had with his German counterpart on the prosecution of those responsible for the murder of British service men in France in 1940.

The Attorney-General: None. The issue is one for the prosecuting authorities in Germany which have received full co-operation from the Ministry of Defence and our police.

Group Libel

32. Mr. Booth: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received on group libel.

The Attorney-General: In March 1992 the then Attorney-General and the Lord Chancellor received a copy of a report on group defamation from the board of deputies of British Jews.

Prosecution Costs

33. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Attorney-General to what extent the cost of prosecution is taken into account when the Crown Prosecution Service decides whether to prosecute.

The Attorney-General: Cost is not a specific factor to be taken into account in the decision whether or not to prosecute. However, as the code for Crown prosecutors makes clear at sections 8(i) and (viii), it may be considered in relation to offences where the penalty is likely to be merely nominal or the guilt of the defendant minimal in relation to that of the principle offenders.

Crown Prosecution Service

34. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases were committed to Crown court for trial by the Crown Prosecution Service in 1993; and how many resulted in a conviction.

The Attorney-General: During the period January to September 1993, 76,404 defendants were committed for trial in the Crown court in cases where the Crown Prosecution Service had conduct of the prosecution and, over the same period, 60,758 convictions were recorded.

35. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Attorney-General to what extent the public interest is considered by the Crown Prosecution Service when a decision to prosecute is made.

The Attorney-General: The decision to prosecute is based, first, on whether there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction. Only if there is such evidence is the public interest considered.

36. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Attorney-General whether a record is kept by him of the reasons for discontinuance of prosecution by the Crown Prosecution Service; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: No central record of the reasons for discontinuance of prosecutions is maintained. The Crown Prosecution Service conducted a survey in November 1993 on all cases discontinued by them in that month and I refer my hon. Friend to my written answer to him on 26 January 1994, Official Report, column 246.

Fraud

37. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Attorney-General what further proposals he has to improve the effectiveness of the prosecution in cases of financial fraud.

The Attorney-General: The review of the handling of serious fraud cases which I anounced in October is due to be completed at the end of this month. It will then be considered by the Law Officers and the two directors.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Attorney-General how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

The Attorney-General: There are no paper shredding machines in my private office.

In the Departments for which I am responsible the numbers are as follows:

	Number
The Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers	1
The Treasury Solicitor's Department	13
The Crown Prosecution Service	84
The Serious Fraud Office	3

SOCIAL SECURITY

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide figures for the amount his Department has been reimbursed by the Department of Social Security in respect of statutory sick pay provision for each of the past three years.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table.

Statutory sick pay recovered

1990-91	5,783,839
1991-92	4,589,107
1992-93	4,378,963

Income Support

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons without accommodation were income support recipients in England at May 1992 and at the latest available date, breaking down the figures by age and by employment status.

Mr. Burt: The figures for May 1992 are not available. Since publication of these statistics for May 1991, collation of income support information in local benefit offices is no longer undertaken by clerical means but by the income support computer system. However, although all main functions are in place, work is incomplete on some functions less central to everyday operation. This includes the process to retrieve information on claimants without an address. Steps are being taken to introduce an appropriate retrieval process from the May 1994 statistical inquiry, information from which is expected to be available in early 1995.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) families with children are in receipt of income support and (b) how many children are living on income support in the Greenock and Port Glasgow area; and what were the comparable figures for 1979.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Mr. Michael Bichard to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 4 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about families in receipt of income support in the Greenock and port Glasgow area.

The complete range of information you requested is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. This is because statistics which reflect the number of families with children are not collected locally on a routine basis. Children are treated as dependants of their parents and their needs are included within their parents claim.

However, I am able to provide information for Scotland as a whole and this is outlined below. The data has been obtained from the Supplementary Benefit Annual Statistical Enquiry for 1979 and the Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry for February 1993 (These are the latest available figures and are based on a 1% sample of cases).

Year	Families with children	Number of children
1979	55,000	109,000

I hope that this reply is helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households, from data taken from the annual statistical inquiry, in 1991, 1992 and 1993, are having weekly deductions made from their income support as appropriate, for (a) electricity and (b) gas of (i) under £2 per week and (ii) in each £1 band above £2 per week up to £40 per week.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the tables:

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of invalidity benefit (a) under the age of 35, (b) between 35 and 45, (c) between 45 and 55 and (d) over 55 years, receive both an additional pension and an occupational pension; and how many of these in each age group are (i) women and (ii) men.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Invalidity Benefit claimants receiving Additional Pension as at 4 April 1992—latest date information is available

Age	Total	Men	Women
Under 35	112,000	56,000	56,000

2. Sample too small to breakdown under 45 age group further.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average amount of (a) additional pension and (b) occupational pension paid to invalidity benefit claimants who are (i) men and (ii) women.

Mr. Scott: As at 4 April 1992, the latest date for which information is available, average amounts of additional pension and occupational pension paid to invalidity benefit claimants was as follows:

	Additional pension [1] £	Occupational pension [2] £
Men	15·21	65
Women	8·13	65

[1] Based on a 1 per cent. sample of invalidity benefit claimants in Great Britain.
[2] Estimated using data from the family expenditure surveys. Estimate subject to significant margins of error.

Deregulation

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which organisations were consulted by his Department, on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Hague: Each of the task force recommendations agreed or agreed in principle by the Government have been or will be the subject of appropriate consultation with interested parties.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was, in each year since 1991, (a) the number and (b) the percentage of claimants of sickness and invalidity benefit in (i) the north of England and (ii) in the United Kingdom who had transferred from unemployment benefit; and what was the numbers of claimants of unemployment benefit in each standard region who in each year since 1991, ceased claiming unemployment benefit and were not returned to either work, income support or other benefits.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not available.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the subjects on which his Department or its predecessors formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Scott: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out (a) the list of tendering organisations, (b) the successful organisation, (c) the value of the contract and (d) the criteria used for determining the successful organisation, in relation to the provision of health screening for Benefits Agency staff at their headquarters at Quarry house, Leeds.

Mr. Burt: The health screening exercise currently being carried out at Quarry house, Leeds, is part of a three-year DSS nationwide health screening programme due to be completed by March 1994.

For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is not possible to provide a list of the tendering organisations, but they comprised four private sector health care providers and one national health service regional health authority[1].

The successful tenderer was the British United Provident Association—BUPA.

The Department is contractually obliged to pay for each screening carried out on volunteer personnel, aged 35 and over. BUPA's success in encouraging take-up therefore dictated the final cost, which will total almost £3 million.

The criteria used to determine the successful tenderer were:

(i) financial stability;
(ii) overall approach to quality to ensure integrity of service;
(iii) logistical planning;
(iv) quality of mobile units;
(v) previous experience of similar programmes;
(vi) capacity to meet the Department's specification;
(vii) overall value for money within a predetermined budget.

[1] The NHS regional health authority withdrew its bid as it could not provide fully equipped and self-contained mobile screening units.

Child Benefits

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the combined value of child dependency addition and child benefit for the child of a widow or invalidity pensioner at current and April 1993 prices and as a percentage of average earnings in November 1979 and at each subsequent uprating date.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables:

[1] The figures apply to both widows and invalidity pensioners.

[2] Rounded to the nearest 10p.

Private Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to ensure that employers take back into occupational schemes staff who have been wrongly advised to transfer to a private pension.

Mr. Hague: Whether employees who have transferred out of an occupational pension scheme are allowed to rejoin the scheme is for the trustees of individual schemes to decide in the light of their scheme's rules.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no paper shredding machines in his private office. The information for his Department is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Maternity Pay

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to announce the changes to statutory maternity pay required by the EC pregnancy directive.

Mr. Hague: We have analysed the responses to the consultation document and will be making an announcement shortly.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the cost of the various leaflets produced by the Child Support Agency explaining the child maintenance scheme.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Peter L. Pike, dated 31 January 1994:

Dear Mr. Pike

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for details about the cost of the leaflets produced by the Child Support Agency.

To date, the total cost of the first editions and, if appropriate, reprints of the leaflets published by the Agency has been £769,716·23. I have provided a breakdown of the figures on the attached Annex.

I hope that you find this information useful.

Yours sincerely.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

6. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations he has held with the Sports Council with regard to the effective distribution of national lottery moneys.

Mr. Sproat: My Department is in regular contact with the Sports Council to discuss matters relating to the distribution of national lottery funds. I shall soon be formally consulting the chairman of the Sports Council on directions under section 26 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 regarding matters to be taken into account when distributing lottery proceeds.

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many organisations have expressed an interest in running the national lottery.

Mr. Sproat: I understand that the director general has received seven letters of intent. Although I cannot give details of these, I can confirm that six organisations have made public their intention to bid for the main licence to run the lottery. These are:

Camelot Group plc
Games for Good Causes plc
The Great British Lottery Company
N. M. Rothschild
Rainbow UK Ltd.
The UK Lottery Foundation

I understand that the director general will make public the list of those who have bid after tenders have been returned on 14 February.

25. Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will meet representatives of the Sports Council to discuss distribution of national lottery moneys.

Mr. Sproat: In accordance with my statutory obligations, I will be consulting all the distributing bodies, including the Sports Council, on the directions I intend to issue to them under section 26 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993. I will consider whether to meet the Sports Council as part of that process.

News Accuracy

22. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received about the accuracy of news film reports on television and pictures in newspapers.

Mr. Brooke: I am not aware of any recent representations about the accuracy of news or film reports on television, but I do receive representations from time to time about pictures in newspapers.

Tourism

21. Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to bring public funding of tourism promotion in England up to the levels per tourist head awarded to other parts of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sproat: We have no such plans. My right hon. Friend will continue to set the level of tourism funding in England according to his judgment of relative spending needs and priorities in England. The levels of spending in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are matters for the respective Secretaries of State.

23. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to reduce the current deficit on tourism.

Mr. Sproat: The long-term growth in the number of United Kingdom residents going abroad for their holidays is a consequence of increasing affluence and improved travel services. My Department will continue to support the work of the British Tourist Authority and the English tourist board in ensuring that both overseas residents and our own citizens are aware of what this country has to offer.

26. Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to promote tourism in London and the south-east.

Mr. Sproat: The south-east, especially London, is one of the country's most important destinations for both domestic and overseas visitors. It is the role of the tourism industry, with support from the English tourist board and the regional tourist boards, to maximise the visitor potential. The British Tourist Authority features the south-east, and particularly London, strongly in its overseas promotion activities.

The London tourist board has created a London visitors council to strengthen the input of its commercial members to the work of London First.

On 14 January we launched a royal parks competition asking for ideas and designs for refurbishing the Marble arch area including Speakers' corner. This area has international importance with hundreds of thousands of people visiting it each year.

On 28 January, I announced plans to encourage more public events within the royal parks. The royal parks will soon be unveiling its largest ever programme of summer entertainment. To complement this, I intend to encourage medium to large-scale events that would add to the public's enjoyment of the royal parks, while not detracting from their unique character.

D-Day (50th Anniversary)

24. Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions he has had with the Southern tourist board about celebrating the 50th anniversary of D-day; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: My officials and I have been in regular contact with the Southern tourist board about the organisation and promotion of D-day commemoration events in the south of England, and will continue to do so.

Arts Council

27. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the progress of his monitoring of the Arts Council's efficiency.

Mr. Brooke: I refer to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) on 26 November 1993, Official Report, columns 211-12.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what further representations he has had about the level of Government grant to the Arts Council.

Mr. Brooke: My Department continues to receive a number of representations about the level of Government support for the arts.

Grant Write-offs

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what criteria his Department uses in deciding whether to write off a particular grant.

Mr. Sproat: In accordance with the criteria set out in "Government Accounting", a grant is written off by my Department only after a most careful appraisal of the facts, if there is no feasible alternative and once all reasonable action has been taken to effect recovery.

Royal Palaces

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the total cost of maintenance and running costs of the royal palaces in each of the last five years; and how much his Department has received for each of those years from the royal household to assist with those costs.

Mr. Brooke: The cost of maintaining the occupied royal palaces has been as follows:

	£ million
1988-89	19·7
1989-90	17·2
1990-91	22·5
1991-92	24·0
1992-93	21·9

As part of the bargain struck with successive sovereigns, all surplus revenue from the Crown estates is surrendered to the Exchequer. This income is around £70 million a year.

ITV Company Mergers

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the consequences for viewers and for employees of the recent merger of ITV companies.

Mr. Brooke: Changes in ownership do not alter the provisions of the Broadcasting Act 1990 and the terms of the Indepedent Television Commission licences. These should ensure original programmes nationally as well as regional programmes and production.

"News At Ten"

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of the Independent Television Commission over proposals to alter the timing of "News at Ten".

Mr. Brooke: None. The chairman of the Independent Television Commission is well aware of the views of Parliament on this issue.

Sports Council

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Sports Council to discuss the public funding for athletics.

Mr. Brooke: I have no plans to meet the chairman of the Sports Council to discuss the funding of athletics. Financial support for individual sports is a matter for the Sports Council to determine in accordance with its own policies and priorities.

British Library

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish the report of his Department's consultants Kennedy and Donkin into the British Library project; if he expects the completion date for the project set to be adhered to; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Construction of the first phase of the project is substantially complete. A start has been made on the final phase of construction, and its structural frame is 75 per cent. complete. This completion phase is on schedule and I do expect the building to be completed in 1996 as planned.

The handover of the first phase of the building to the library has been delayed, first by problems with the bookshelving and more recently by problems with the electrical wiring. The bookshelving problem has been overcome, at the contractors' expense, and the installation is now complete. The essence of the wiring problem is that inspections have revealed installed low voltage wiring with damaged insulation. Plans for rectifying the faults in the installation of the wiring are being agreed with the contractor concerned.

I do not propose to publish the Department's report commissioned from the consultants Kennedy and Donkin. It is a contractually sensitive document.

English Heritage

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage for how many of English Heritage's properties there have so far been negotiations concerning the transfer of their management to local authorities.

Mr. Brooke: Since the publication of its forward strategy in October 1992, English Heritage has held negotiations for the alternative management of 102 sites, of which 46 would involve the transfer of management to local authorities. Of these, 40 are currently the subject of active discussion with 28 local authorities and one agreement has been completed. For the remaining five, interest has either been withdrawn or negotiations are in abeyance. Prior to October 1992, English Heritage had reached agreement with local authorities over some form of local management for 11 properties.

Elstree Film Studios

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action he proposes to safeguard the future of Elstree film studios in Hertfordshire.

Mr. Brooke: There is nothing I can usefully add to the answer I gave on 6 December to a question on the same subject by my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton), Official Report, column 2.

HEALTH

Consultancies

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the (a) accountancy firms and (b) merchant banks to which her Department awarded private consultancy work in 1992 and 1993, together with a list of the consultancies concerned and the amount paid.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has employed the following accountancy firms in 1992 or 1993 for consultancy work:

Coopers Lybrand Deloit
Ernst and Young
KPMG
Price Waterhouse
Robson Rhodes
Touche Ross

We are unable to list the consultancies concerned and the amounts paid as this would breach contractual agreements and jeopardise future value for money.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which occasions since 1979 her Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if she will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Sackville: It is not possible to list the use of external consultants back to 1979 and to list them giving details of purpose and cost would require commercial in confidence information to be made public in a way that would breach contractual agreements and jeopardise future value for money. We can however state that the use of external consultants in the Department must be justified under one of the following headings:

(i) Specialist skills required that do not exist in the Department,
(ii) Specialist skills exist but they are needed for higher priority objectives,
(iii) Where management have taken a decision to contract out the work,
(iv) Where impartiality is fundamental to the success of the project.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which occasions since 1990 her Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if she will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Sackville: There have been numerous occasions since 1990 that the Department has found the need to employ the assistance of external consultants. Detailed information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Birth Defects

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will investigate the number of children in the Northern region who have been born with missing or defective limbs over the last 10 years;

(2) how many children have been born with missing or defective limbs in the Northern region in each year since 1989; and if she will list the village or town of each child.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Number of children born with missing or deformed limbs[1]—ICDs 775.0-755.9—notified to office of population of censuses and surveys in each year 1983 to 1992 for the Northern RHA and individual DHAs

Note: Prior to 1990 all malformations, however minor, were reportable to OPCS. In January 1990 an exclusion list was introduced. As a result minor malformations of the toe, coded to ICD 755.6 were no longer notifiable.

To protect the confidentiality of individuals we are unable to provide information on a single village or town.

Grantham and Kesteven Hospital

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has received relating to nursing and medical staffing levels at Grantham and Kesteven hospital in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Data on staffing levels at this level of detail are not available centrally.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time consultant paediatricians are currently employed at the Grantham and Kesteven hospital; and how many were employed at the time of the Beverley Allitt case.

Dr. Mawhinney: Data on medical staff at local level are not available centrally.

Clinical Complaints Procedure

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each year since 1990 for each hospital in England, by department, how many complaints have been pursued and have succeeded under the clinical complaints procedure.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information held centrally about complaints is categorised as follows:

—by region.
—whether a complaint is about a hospital or community service.
—whether wholly or partly clinical or other.
—whether the complaint was investigated by health authority officers or referred for further investigation.

The information is available in the booklet "Written complaints by or on behalf of patients, England", copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Prostate Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many men died from cancer of the prostate in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Numbers of deaths from cancer of the prostate—ICD 185[1]—for England and Wales, 1988-1992

	Number
1988	7,458
1989	7,861
1990	8,098
1991	8,570
1992	8,735

[1] International Classification of Disease, Ninth Revision.

Private Patients

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the private patient income of trust hospitals in each year since 1990-91.

Mr. Sackville: Information on private patient income of National Health Service trust hospitals for 1991-92 and 1992-93 will be placed in the Library. There are no figures for 1990-91 as NHS trusts did not exist in that year. The overall increase in private patient income for trusts is partially due to the increased number of trusts in 1992-93. The income raised is used to improve services for all patients.

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) general practitioner fundholders, (b) general practitioner fundholding practitioners and (c) general practitioners were involved in fundholdings in the first, second, third and fourth wave by (i) region and (ii) FHSA.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information given in the tables is the number of fundholding units, and numbers of the practices and general practitioners who make up these units in the first, second and third waves by region. Fourth wave figures are not yet available and information at family health services authority level is not collected centrally.

Market Testing

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice she has issued in respect of what comprises acceptable levels of detail in any specification issued in respect of national health service contracts subject to market testing; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what guidance she has issued in respect of market testing in the national health service;

(3) if she will list her criteria for ensuring that procedures used in respect of the contract tendering procedure for market testing are of an acceptable standard;

(4) to whom she has delegated responsibility to ensure compliance of contracts let under national health service market testing guidance; and in what circumstances she may intervene.

Mr. Sackville: Guidance to the national health service was first issued in June 1993 under cover of executive letter EL(93)55. This document "Market Testing in the NHS Revised Guidance" sets out the standards expected. Additional guidance was issued in November 1993 as an attachment to a letter to all chief executives who are responsible for market testing. Both documents are available in the Library.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will publish full details of the arbitration procedure to be used in respect of disputed contracts let under the national health service market testing guidance;

(2) what action she has taken to ensure the justice of the arbitration procedure in respect of national health service market testing contract procedures.

Mr. Sackville: "Market Testing in the National Health Service Revised Guidance" issued in June 1993 provides a disputes and complaints procedure. In addition, the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 section 4(3) provides for the determination of any dispute in an NHS contract by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Bjork-Shiley Heart Valve

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department became aware of the United States Food and Drug Administration's (a) suspension and (b) withdrawal of the export licence for the Bjork-Shiley 70 deg convexo-concave valve.

Mr. Sackville: The first departmental record indicating the suspension and subsequent withdrawal of export permission is dated 15 January 1985.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been fitted with (a) a 60 deg convexo-concave heart valve and (b) a 70 deg convexo-concave heart valve since 1980.

Mr. Sackville: Approximately 5,000 60 deg Bjork-Shiley convexo-concave heart valves and 42 70 deg Bjork-Shiley convexo-concave heart valves.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients fitted with (a) 60 deg convexo-concave valves and (b) 70 deg convexo-concave valves have had them replaced.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the replacement of Bjork-Shiley heart valves is not held centrally. However, a Bjork-Shiley convexo-concave heart valve registry has recently been established and it will be possible to obtain data on future valve replacements.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she first became aware of faults in the Bjork-Shiley heart valve; and what action was taken.

Mr. Sackville: The Department was informed of the possibility of the failure of a small proportion of Bjork-Shiley convexo-concave heart valves in May 1982. The Department reviewed the information provided by the manufacturer and ensured that the action taken in identifying and withdrawing this group of valves was consistent with the extent of the problem as perceived at the time.

Pacemaker Leads

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the source of the information in her answer of 4 November, Official Report, column 452, that 235 pacemaker leads have been replaced;

(2) who runs the national pacemaker database and register;

(3) pursuant to her answer of 2 December, Official Report, column 700, what is the explanation for the different figures for the number of pacemaker leads fitted in that answer and in the answer given on 4 November 1993, Official Report, column 452.

Mr. Sackville: The figure of 235 replacement pacemaker leads was obtained from the national pacemaker database—NPD—which is managed by Dr. A. F. Rickards, consultant cardiologist, at the Royal Brompton heart and lung hospital.

The NPD is continually being updated and the figures referred to on 2 December 1993 reflect the updated situation.

Pacemakers and Heart Valves

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which companies manufacture (a) pacemakers and (b) artificial heart valves currently in use in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sackville: According to information held by the national pacemaker database, pacemaker manufacturers with products currently in use in the United Kingdom are: Biotec; Biotronik GmbH & Co; Cardiac Pacemakers Inc.; ELA Medical; Intermedics Inc.; Medico Italia SRL; Medtronic Inc.; Osypka; Siemens; Sorin Biomedica SPA; Telectronics Inc.; Vitatron Medical BV.

According to information held by the United Kingdom heart valve registry, the following companies currently supply heart valves to the United Kingdom:

Aortech Ltd.
ATS Medical Ltd.
Baxter Healthcare
Carbomedics Inc.
Manley Western Ltd.
Medtronic Inc.
Cambridge Biomedical Ltd.
Sorin Biomedica
St. Jude Medical Tissuemed Ltd.

Anophthalmia

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the conclusions of the research into the distribution of anophthalmia referred to in her answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) of 20 May 1993, Official Report, column 259.

Dr. Mawhinney: The study commissioned by the Department into the incidence of anophthalmia began on 1 January 1994 and is due to be completed by 30 September 1995. The Department of Health would usually expect the results of research it has commissioned to be published either as a separate scientific report or in a scientific journal.

Clothier Inquiry

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she intends to publish the report of the Clothier inquiry; and if she will make a statement;

(2) if she has received the report of the Clothier inquiry.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 2 February, Official Report, columns 718-19.

NHS Contracts

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances she is able to call in cases of national health service contracts subjected to arbitration for her further consideration.

Mr. Sackville: There is provision within the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 section 4(3) for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to act to determine cases where a dispute arises within a national health service contract.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those national health service contracts worth over £140,000, where the arbitration procedure has been invoked.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not required centrally to monitor market testing in the national health service and is therefore not collected.

Smoking

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of (a) men and (b) women in the United Kingdom aged (i) 15 to 20 years, (ii) 20 to 25 years, (iii) 25 to 30 years, (iv) 30 to 35 years, (v) 35 to 40 years, (vi) 40 to 45 years, (vii) 45 to 50 years, (viii) 50 to 55 years and (ix) 55 years and over smoke.

Mr. Sackville: The available information is shown in the table.

Cigarette smoking among adults aged 16 and over Great Britain 1992

Age	Men	Women
16-19	29	25
20-24	39	37
25-34	34	34
35-49	32	30
50-59	28	29
60 and over	21	19

Notes:
1. Data published in General Household Survey 1992—OPCS.
2. Cigarette smokers are those respondents who affirmed that "they smoked cigarettes at all nowadays".

Information relating to Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is being taken to achieve the targets on smoking set out in "The Health of the Nation" White Paper; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We are publishing today "Smoke-Free for Health—An Action Plan to achieve the Health of the Nation targets on Smoking". Copies are available in the Library.

The action plan sets out the Government's comprehensive approach to reducing smoking, involving a range of inter-related measures, including action on price, health education, tackling parental influence and controls on tobacco advertising and promotion. As part of this wide-ranging programme, the Government will open negotiations with the tobacco industry to strengthen the existing voluntary agreement on tobacco advertising and promotion.

NHS Procurement

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to incorporate the EC services directive in respect of public procurement of national health service-related services.

Mr. Sackville: The Management Executive has incorporated advice on the EC services directive in their advice "Market Testing in the NHS Revised Guidance" published in June 1993, copies of which are available in the Library.

Medical Devices (Faults)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how her Department, through the medical devices directorate, assesses the effects of faults in medical devices.

Mr. Sackville: Adverse incidents related to medical devices are reported to the national reporting and investigation centre. Scientific and technical experts fro the medical devices directorate investigate these incidents, taking advice from medical and nursing advisors and, where necessary, from relevant specialists in academia and the Health Service.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the United States Food and Drug Administration regarding faulty medical devices.

Mr. Sackville: Officers of the medical devices directorate are in frequent contact with their counterparts in the United States Food and Drug Administration. This includes discussion of faulty medical devices where necessary.

Pacemakers

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 59-60, which of the 17 pacemaker technical notes and one hazard circular issued by the medical devices directorate relate to specific manufacturers; and what are the names of the manufacturers.

Mr. Sackville: One hazard circular and 16 of the 17 pacemaker technical notes issued by the medical devices directorate relate to specific manufacturers. The names of these manufacturers are: Cardiac Pacemakers Inc; Intermedics Inc; Medtronic Inc; Siemens; Sorin Biomedica SPA; Telectronics Inc; and Vitatron Medical BV.

Deregulation

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations were consulted by her Department, on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Sackville: Each of the task force recommendations agreed or agreed in principle by the Government have been or will be the subject of appropriate consultation with interested parties.

Cash Limits

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes are proposed to the cash limits and the running costs of her Department for 1993-94.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for class XII, vote 3—Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England—will be reduced by £1,255,000, from £1,437,247,000 to £1,435,992,000. This reduction allows for transfers of £493,000—£484,000 running costs —to class XIII, vote 4—Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services—for accommodation and word processing; £886,000 to class XII, vote 1—Hospital, community health, family health services (part) and related services, England—£318,000 to class XIV, vote 14—Hospital, community health, family health (part) and other services, Scotland—£148,000 to class XV, vote 8—Hospital, community health, family health services (part) and related services, Wales—and £80,000 for the Department of Health and Social Services, Northern Ireland for work of the national health service estate management and health building agency; and £10,000 to class III, vote 5—Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food: departmental research, advisory services and administration—for the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes. The overall decrease is partially offset by transfers of £348,000 from class XIII, vote 4—Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services—for security functions and £332,000—£326,000 running costs—from class VII, vote 6—Department of the Environment: property holdings and other services to Government—for maintenance charges.

The Department's gross running cost limit will be increased by £180,000 from £253,084,000 to £253,264,000. This reflects the transfers mentioned above.

All increases will either be offset by savings, increased receipts or transfers to or from other votes and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which she is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if she will give details.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 3 February at column 852.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department have given to regional health authorities as to the selection procedures that should be followed, for considering possible names for consideration as non-executive directors of NHS trusts; what assessment she has made of the procedures adopted by the South West regional health authority; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: In the past, regional health authority chairmen have adopted selection procedures they considered appropriate in order to identify the best candidates to meet Ministers' aim of appointing people from a variety of backgrounds and with a range of skills and experience.

Ministers will be discussing with the recently announced regional chairmen the procedures for identifying and selecting candidates for national health service appointments, with a view to adopting a common process in all regions which continues to identify the most able people available for appointment.

We have no reason to believe that the selection processes adopted by South Western regional health authority have been unsatisfactory.

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the guidance and terms of reference provided by her Department to regional health authorities for prospective appointments as non-executive directors of NHS trusts; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Appointments to the boards of prospective national health service trusts are made in accordance with general guidance from Ministers to the chairmen of regional health authorities. The appointment processes will be the subject of discussion with the recently announced regional chairmen, with a view to adopting a common process in all regions which continues to identify the most able people for appointment.

Health Service, Greenwich

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total paid or projected to be paid in salaries, fees, other remuneration and expenses to (a) members of the Greenwich health authority and (b) members of the Greenwich healthcare trust in each of the financial years 1990-91, 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: Figures for members of Greenwich health authority are shown for 1990-91 to 1992-93. Greenwich healthcare trust did not exist in these years as it is a third wave trust. Figures for 1993-94 are not yet available.

Annual accounts and pay and records files of Greenwich health authority.

Notes:

1. Payment to non-executive members was introduced part way through 1990-91. Only six months costs are reflected for that financial year.

2. One executive member only took up post near the end of 1990-91 which is partly why costs for that year are low compared with subsequent years.

3. Full year costs for executive members in post in 1990-91 have been reflected although the status of member was only conferred from October 1990. Prior to this the people concerned were employees of the authority.

4. The figures shown include employer's national insurance contributions and superannuation payments. Lease car allowance costs have been apportioned from the published figure for Greenwich health authority.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what salaries or other remuneration were paid or are projected to be paid to the chairman and chief executive of Greenwich health authority and the chairman and chief executive of Greenwich healthcare trust in each of the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: Figures for the remuneration of the chairman and general manager of Greenwich health authority are shown for 1991-92 and 1992-93. Greenwich healthcare trust did not exist in these years as it is a third wave trust. Figures for 1993-94 are not yet available.

Notes:

1. Greenwich health authority had a general manager rather than a chief executive.
2. The figures shown for the general manager include employer's national insurance contributions and superannuation payments. Lease car allowance costs have been apportioned from the published figure for Greenwich health authority.

Link

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding the application of a section 64 core grant by Link, the British Centre for Deafened People; when she expects to make a decision on the matter; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: We have received several letters about Link. We shall be deciding on this and a very large number of the applications for section 64 funding in due course.

Diabetes

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding is being made available by the NHS for the St. Vincent joint task force for diabetes;

(2) if she will make a statement on the progress of the St. Vincent joint task force for diabetes.

Mr. Sackville: The joint Department of Health—British Diabetic Association St. Vincent task force for diabetes is not funded directly by the national health service, although it includes a number of members who are NHS staff. Support costs for the task force are met by the British Diabetic Association and by the Department.

The task force is expecting to produce advice for the Secretary of State's consideration by mid-summer this year.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use is being made of the chronic disease management scheme to collect data on the incidence of diabetes.

Mr. Sackville: General practitioner practices are collecting information on diabetes. This information will in time show both the incidence and prevalence of diabetes. This has considerable potential value and a number of medical audit advisory groups have already used these data to facilitate the improvement of the care of patients with diabetes in primary care.

Chemotherapy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the applications of cannabis for the treatment of the side effects of chemotherapy.

Mr. Sackville: None. However, certain synthetic compounds of cannabis, cannabinoids, have been found to be of use against nausea and vomiting associated with cancer chemotherapy. An independent report into the use of nabilone, a semisynthetic cannabinoid developed for the treatment of chemotherapy-induced emesis, has concluded that it is no more effective than standard anti-emetic treatments and has a higher degree of toxicity.

Hypnosis

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy regarding the investigation and monitoring of the medical effects of stage hypnotism.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has not investigated the medical effects of stage hypnotism and currently has no plans to do so.

GP Fund Holders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each year since 1990 the expenditure on the purchase of health care from non-NHS bodies by general practitioner fund holders.

Dr. Mawhinney: General practitioner fund holders have the freedom to purchase the best possible health care for their patients from whichever provider unit they judge best. They must be able to satisfy the regional health authority that the contracts offer value for money and a high quality service for patients.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in her private office and (b) in her Department.

Mr. Sackville: (a) None, (b) 20.

West Country Ambulance Services Trust

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information regarding the resignation of Neil McCalley, a divisional director of the West Country ambulance services trust she is prepared to communicate to representatives of health service trade unions; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the trust.

SCOTLAND

NHS Trusts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, further to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 71, if he will list the actual amounts spent by (a) the north Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust, (b) the south Ayrshire trust and (c) the Community healthcare trust in dealing with their public relations agencies; and what services these bodies receive for this expenditure.

Mr. Stewart: For the period April-December 1993, the amounts spent on public relations were as follows:

North Ayrshire and Arran	21,600
South Ayrshire Hospitals	21,000
Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare	9,000

The services received varied in each case but included support in relation to communications with patients, local communities, general practitioners, staff, and the media on the services provided by each trust and on issues such as health promotion.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the persons appointed to each national health service trust and authority showing (a) their name, (b) their present employment or unemployment and (c) the remuneration for duties entailed in such posts.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 February 1994]: The information requested, in respect of non-executive appointments by my right hon. Friend, has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the procedures adopted by (a) the North Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust, (b) the South Ayrshire trust and (c) the Community healthcare trust in awarding contracts for the provision of public relations services; what action he has taken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: None. Such procedures are a matter for individual trusts to determine and apply.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the actual amounts of money spent by each of the NHS trusts in Scotland on their public relations; and what companies are employed by each of the trusts to provide these services.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not available centrally.

Health Boards

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement indicating for each health board in Scotland, with the exception of Ayrshire and Arran health board; which agencies are employed to deal with their public relations; how much each health board pays for this service; and what changes have been made within each health board area for dealing with public relations inquiries following the introduction of NHS trusts.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not available centrally.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 will apply to employees of regional and district authorities affected by the reorganisation of local government if they transfer to the employment of the proposed new authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The question of the extent to which the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 as amended will apply in the context of local government reorganisation is a matter of law. It is not for the Government to determine whether and how the law applies; that must be a matter for the courts. Whether the regulations apply in any particular case will depend on the detailed circumstances, and it will be for local authorities as employers to take a view on the likelihood of the regulations applying where a new authority appears to have taken over a function of an existing authority.

Fisheries Policy

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussion he has had regarding the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food department in which decision making on United Kingdom fisheries policy should be vested; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: Ministerial responsibilities and departmental functions are matters for the Prime Minister. The existing system of four Fisheries Departments working closely together is a long-standing one, which has been shown to work effectively.

Planning Applications

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy not to implement the changes proposed to the Scottish Office's revised fee scale for applications for planning permission.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to alter his policy on revised fees scales approved by Parliament in December 1993.

Legal Actions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the legal actions which are outstanding between his Department and any company or contractor which is bankrupt or which has gone into receivership or liquidation; what is the value of his Department's claims in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: There are no outstanding actions in court which seek recovery of sums due under contract to my Department by any company which has gone into receivership or liquidation or any contractor who is bankrupt.

Special Advisers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the former occupations of each special adviser attached to his office.

Mr. Lang: Both my special advisers were recruited as graduates.

GP Fundholders

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on what date it became his practice that general practitioner fundholders were sent circulars for information that were not sent to non-fundholders;

(2) if he will make it his policy to include general practitioners who are not fundholders on the list of those who are to receive NHS management executive circulars on accountability reviews, "Priorities and Planning Guidance 1994-95 and after."

Mr. Stewart: There is no fixed practice or distribution list for NHS Management Executive letters; they are distributed to those who need to be aware of the content. This varies from letter to letter. In the particular case of the circular (NHS MEL(1993)155) GP fundholders were included as recipients because the letter set out guidance directly applicable to them as NHS purchasers. However, the guidance is clearly of interest to other GPs and arrangements have already been made to provide copies to all GP practices in Scotland.

Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act 1854

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to amend the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act 1854; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend proposes to amend the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act 1854 in accordance with the terms of clause 139 of the Local Government Etc. (Scotland) Bill. The clause as it stands will give power to my right hon. Friend by regulations—(subject to annulment of either House of Parliament)—to prescribe the classes of plant and machinery to be subject to rating, in parallel with English regulations. It will also enable the regulations, if so made as to take effect other than at the beginning of a year of revaluation, to provide for the revaluation of any lands and heritages affected by the regulations. The provisions will permit harmonisation of rating liability of plant and machinery and the related law and practice throughout Great Britain.

Treasure Trove

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the administration arrangements relating to treasure trove in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: With the agreement of the Prime Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, formal responsibility for the administration of treasure trove in Scotland has been transferred from HM Treasury to the Scottish Office. This is a further step in developing the policies set out in the White Paper "Scotland in the Union: A Partnership for Good".

I have taken this opportunity to make some changes to the membership of the advisory panel on treasure trove. I have increased the membership of the advisory panel from three to four members, and I am pleased to announce that Dr. Barbara Crawford has agreed to be its first independent expert chairperson. At the same time a number of procedural changes are being introduced.

This package of measures will improve the effectiveness and standing of the advisory panel and open up the treasure trove procedures in general.

Greenock Prison

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons are detained in Her Majesty's prison, Greenock, and, of these, how many are (a) serving prison sentences, (b) on remand and (c) awaiting deportation.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 January 1994]: I have asked Mr. E. W. Frizzell, the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. E. Frizzell to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 7 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of people detained in HM Prison, Greenock, and how many are serving prison sentences, on remand and awaiting deportation.

The information is given in the table:

Persons locked up on Wednesday 19 January 1994

	Number
Serving a prison sentence	94
On remand	100
Awaiting deportation	13
Total persons locked up	207

Woodland

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of hectares of woodland he expects to be planted next year in Scotland by (a) the Forestry Commission, (b) private foresters and (c) crofting townships.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The information is given in the table. The figures include new planting and restocking.

Estimated woodland planting 1994-95	Hectares
Forestry Commission	4,600
Private woodlands	15,000
Crofters' common grazing land	160

In addition, the Forestry Commission expects to pay grants to private owners for work intended to encourage natural regeneration on about 3,000 hectares.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Prime Minister on 1 February 1994 at column 611.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to the Common Services Agency of the Scottish health service management committee.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The members of the Common Services Agency Board are as follows:

G. Scaife (Chairman)

Non Executive Directors

Mr. J. A Barrie
Mrs. J. Jolly
Mrs. C. Lenihan
Mrs. F. A. Stephenson
Mr. V. Wood

Executive Directors
Mr. T. Callaway
Mr. J. T. Donald
Mr. G. W. Tucker

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to the Health Education Board for Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The current members of the Health Education Board for Scotland are:
Mr. Ernie Walker OBE (Chairman)
Dr. Nancy Loudon OBE (Vice-Chairman)
Mr. David Campbell
Mr. John Christie
Miss Wilma Craigmile MBE
Professor Charles Forbes
Dr. Gillian McIlwaine
Professor Doreen Parry
Mr. Jimmy Reid
Dr. Andrew Tannahill (General Manager)
Mr. Raymond Watkins
Mr. David Woods

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to the Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The current membership of the Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland is:
Chairman
Sheriff Hazel Aronson QC

Full-time Medical Members
Dr. J. A. Dyer (Director)
Dr. A. W. Drummond

Full-time Social Work Member
Mrs. C. E. McGregor

Part-time Members
Mrs. P. A. Baxter
Dr. E. D. A. McCall-Smith
Mr. P. H. Brodie QC
Mr. R. G. Davis
Mrs. A. H. M. Glen
Mrs. A. M. Green
Mrs. H. L. Grieve
Mrs. J. I . D. Isbister
Mrs. M. Jeffcoat
Dr. R. G. McCreadie
Dr. M. G. Livingston
Mr. J. C. Murray (Vice-Chairman)
Miss L. Noble
Mr. M. O'Reilly
Mr. J. G. Sutherland OBE

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to the Scottish Council for Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The current members are:
Professor D. C. Carter
Dr. E. G. Buckley
Dr. J. S. Rennie
Dr. I. J. T. Davies
Professor R. M. Harden
Professor N. MacKay
Professor A. L. Muir
Professor R. A. Wood
Mr. J. S. Clyde
Dr. M. Church
Dr. J. F. Calder
Dr. I. Davidson
Professor H. Dick
Professor E. Johnstone
Dr. B. D. Keighley
Mr. J. Lusby
Dr. G. G. Shirriffs
Dr. D. Thomas
Dr. A. D. Toft
Dr. H. Zealley

Community Charge

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much community charge remains unpaid within (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Cunninghame district.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The amount of net budgeted community charge income uncollected by local authorities at 30 November 1993—the most recent date for which information is available—is, for Scotland, £371 million and, for Strathclyde region, £224 million. Information for Cunninghame district is not separately identifiable.

Council Tax

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals have been lodged against council tax banding in each region and islands area; how many have been determined and how many are still outstanding; and how many of those appeals relate to tied housing.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 February 1994]: Details of the numbers of appeals lodged and the status of these as at 30 November 1993 are given in the table.

Information about the number of appeals relating to tied housing is not collected centrally.

	Proposals lodged 1 April 1993 to 30 November 1993	Proposals/appeals: Settled	Still to be dealt with
Borders	2,996	254	2,742
Central	2,719	422	2,297
Dumfries and Galloway	3,048	1,077	1,971
Fife	6,411	3,139	3,272
Grampian	11,221	3,956	7,265
Highland	5,991	1,470	4,521
Lothian	11,739	2,093	9,646
Strathclyde	39,463	15,606	23,857
Tayside	11,171	1,113	10,058
Orkney	211	166	45
Shetland	159	114	45
Western Isles	837	227	610

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has given to assessors as to the calculation of council tax bands for tied housing in agriculture and other sectors.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 February 1994]: No detailed guidance has been issued to assessors. The special assumptions to be made in valuing dwellings occupied in connection with agriculture or fish farming are set out in the Council Tax (Valuation of Dwellings) (Scotland) Regulations 1992. The regulations were issued with Finance Circular No. 20/1992 which was copied to regional assessors. Annex B of the circular explains that these provisions are designed to ensure that the valuation of these dwellings will be undertaken on the basis that the dwelling may be occupied only along with the associated land.

There are no special provisions for tied housing in other sectors.

Prisoners

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners convicted for (a) theft, (b) burglary and (c) violent crimes against the person were (i) unemployed at or (ii) in receipt of income support at the time of their arrest in each of the past four years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 4 February 1994]: I have asked Mr. E. W. Frizzell, the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. E. Frizzell to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 7 February 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of prisoners convicted for (a) theft, (b) burglary and (c) violent crimes against the person who were (i) unemployed or (ii) in receipt of income support at the time of their arrest in each of the past four years.

The information is not available in the form requested. For each reception into a penal establishment information is collected on whether or not the person involved was employed or unemployed immediately prior to their reception. Information on whether a person was unemployed or on income support at the time of their arrest is not collected centrally.

The table below sets out the number of receptions to penal establishments in Scotland (excluding receptions as a result of fine defaults) of persons who were unemployed and had been convicted of theft, burglary (housebreaking in Scotland) or violent crimes against the person. These figures have been obtained using the best available approximations in The Scottish Office Home and Health Department's classification of crimes and offences to produce the categories requested in your question.

(a) Theft	2,754	2,602	2,879	3,313
(b) Burglary (housebreaking)	1,549	1,604	1,697	1,715
(c) Violence against the person	1,330	1,306	1,353	1,547

This information is supplied by the prisoner on arrival at the establishment and should therefore be treated with some caution.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners originally sentenced for murder had their sentences (a) subsequently reduced or (b) quashed on appeal while serving their sentences since 1970; and what sums of money were paid, by way of compensation, to those released from prison in such circumstances.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The mandatory sentence to be imposed on a person convicted of murder is imprisonment for life. Information prior to 1981 is not held centrally, nor is information on the results of retrials, but since 1981 three prisoners originally sentenced for murder had their sentence subsequently reduced, a further four had their sentence quashed on appeal and a retrial was authorised for two prisoners.

Compensation is not payable in cases where a conviction for murder is reduced or quashed on appeal within the normal time limits. Since 1970, two payments of compensation of £77,000 and £50,415 have been made to persons originally convicted of murder and whose sentences were subsequently quashed or reversed outside the normal time limits.

"Safe from Harm"

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if it is his intention to issue a guidance document for voluntary organisations similar to the one published by the Home Office entitled "Safe from Harm"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The Home Office code of good practice, "Safe from Harm", contains useful information which will assist voluntary organisations in England and Wales in the selection of staff and volunteers to work with children. We are presently examining the advice in the document for its relevance to Scotland and will consider the need to issue a similar document in Scotland when that examination is complete.

Homosexuals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent guidelines have been issued to police forces concerning the issue of consenting homosexual relationships among males aged 16 years or more; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 February 1994]: None.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

43. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings he has had with third-world Ministers to discuss the effects of GATT on third-world trade.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend discussed the GATT negotiations in detail with Commonwealth Ministers at the Heads of Government meeting in Cyprus last October. They all supported a declaration in favour of the Uruguay round. There has been a wide range of positive comment from third-world representatives about the outcome of the negotiations.

Non-governmental Organisations

45. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the Overseas Development Administration is supporting the work of non-governmental organisations in helping to meet the long-term needs of the poorest communities in developing countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In 1992-93 the ODA gave a total of £77 million to support the long-term development programmes of British non-governmental organisations.

Aid-Trade Provision

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the operation of the aid-trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The ATP is a separate allocation within Britain's overseas aid programme. It is designed to support, in certain countries, development projects with industrial and commercial importance for the United Kingdom.

Aid

44. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the Government's key objectives for overseas aid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development outlined the future direction of the overseas aid programme in her Chatham house speech on 18 October 1993. Copies are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the aid awarded from the overseas aid budget to each recipient country in (a) 1979, (b) 1980 and (c) 1993; and if he will set out the gross national product for each recipient country in each such year.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Information on bilateral aid by country, and on GNP, is available in the 1981, 1982 and 1993 editions of "British Aid Statistics" which are in the Libraries of the House. The latest available figures for bilateral aid are for 1992-93 and for GNP 1991.

In addition to our bilateral assistance, countries receive substantial amounts of assistance from multilateral bodies to which the United Kingdom makes a major contribution.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the aid provided to developing nations to reach 0·7 per cent. of gross national product.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Government have agreed to reach the international aid target of 0·7 per cent. of GNP as soon as possible, but are not prepared to set a timetable for reaching it. Future levels of aid will continue to depend upon our economic circumstances and on other calls for public expenditure.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the levels of aid to (a) Indonesia, (b) Nigeria, (c) India, (d) Thailand, (e) Oman, (f) Malaysia and (g) Jordan over each of the last 10 years, (i) in totals each year and (ii) per head of the population.

[1]This is mainly debt relief, but also includes small amounts of drug-related assistance funded by the Home Office and FCO.
[2]From 1987-88 data on aid spending have been compiled on a financial year basis.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total value of the aid trade programme for each year since 1979; what were the dozen highest value projects assisted under this programme in each of these years and the value of each of these projects; which was the main company or companies involved in each of these projects each year and what was the level of aid they received under this programme or in any related form; and in each case which of these contracts were let without tender in each of these years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The total value of the aid and trade provision—cash expenditure—for each year since 1979 was as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	29
1980-81	26
1981-82	53
1982-83	47

1992-93	93

All the other information requested, with one exception, is contained in the detailed list of ATP projects placed in the Library of the House in October 1993 pursuant to the reply my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave the right hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 28 October, Official Report, column 732.

The one exception relates to aid received by companies in any related form, this information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all projects and programmes funded by the Commonwealth Development Corporation in the last five years; what projects and programmes are (a) legally committed and (b) planned in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Details of CDC's equity holdings, loans and commitments are given in its annual report and accounts, copies of which are laid before the House. Additions from January 1993 are shown. For reasons of commercial confidentiality information is not available on project proposals on which CTC is conducting negotiations with clients and co-investors.

We intend to make a statement shortly on the outcome of a quinquennial review of CDC, and to publicise a further progress report on recommendations made by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in 1992.

Malawi

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by cost each bilateral aid project in Malawi.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A list of ODA's current bilateral aid projects in Malawi will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Nigeria

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each project funded by the Overseas Development Administration in Nigeria over the last five years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have placed a list of all projects in the Library of the House.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what water projects the Overseas Development Administration is currently funding in Nigeria; and which companies have won those contracts.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None.

Indonesia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last reviewed the application of the good governance criterion governing the provision of aid by the Overseas Development Administration to the programme of aid to Indonesia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The position for all countries is reviewed at least annually and was last reviewed for Indonesia in autumn 1993.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which United Kingdom company was involved in providing the flight simulator supported under the British aid programme to Indonesia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Kingdom company supplying the flight simulator to the Indonesian domestic airline, Merpati, is Aeronautical Systems Designers Ltd.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what stage has been reached in the tendering process for the power plant in East Kalimantan, Indonesia, which is being funded under the aid trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The bids received by the Indonesian electricity authority for the Samarinda power station in East Kalimantan are currently being evaluated by the Government of Indonesia.

The bid documents for the associated transmission line were issued by the electricity authority in mid-January with a return date of 24 March 1994.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what water projects the Overseas Development Administration is currently funding in Indonesia; and which companies have won those contracts.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: ODA is currently funding a small project that forms part of a general research programme into canal systems maintenance in a number of countries including Indonesia. ODA is also supporting five village-based water self-help supply schemes.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which United Kingdom companies are involved in the Jambi power plant in Indonesia supported by the Overseas Development Administration.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Kingdom company which supplied equipment for the Jambi power plant was Mirrlees Blackstone Ltd.

Malaysia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which projects other than scholarships and training have been funded under the British aid programme to Oman in the last five years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The following projects other than scholarships and training have been funded under the British aid programme to Oman in the last five years:

Assistance to the Ministry of Agriculture in livestock control and marketing.

Advice to the Ministry of Electricity and Water on electricity safety rules and the operation of a drawing office in the electricity supply industry.

Advice to the Ministry of Commerce and Industry on investment promotion and industrial diversification.

A training needs analysis for the Ministry of Commerce and Industry.

Assistance to improve English language teaching at the Oman technical and industrial college.

Assistance to the Ministry of Education in curriculum development.

Assistance in teacher education at the Vocational Training Institute.

Assistance to improve English language teaching at the Institute of Health Sciences.

A study of the opportunities for tissue culture of date palms and other traditional crops.

Arms Expenditure

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is the policy of his Department that developing countries should be encouraged to spend less on armaments; and whether levels of spending on arms is taken into account in the allocation of aid.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: It is for each country to assess and provide for its own legitimate defence needs. The United Kingdom actively supports the increased emphasis placed by the International Monetary Fund and the World bank in their relations with developing countries on the implications for economic and social development of an excessive level of military expenditure. We have made it clear that we consider the setting of an appropriate level of military expenditure to be an important part of good government. It is one of the factors we take into account when deciding our allocations of bilateral aid.

Jordan

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each project funded by the Overseas Development Administration in Jordan over the last five years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Projects funded by the Overseas Development Administration in Jordan over the last five years are as follows:

Provision of a livestock expert to assist the Ministry of Agriculture sheep husbandry project.

Financial assistance to farmers to replant fruit trees in the Jordan valley following the severe storms of January and February 1992.

Provision of advice to the Jordan Industrial Consortium Engineering Company.

Senior advisory assistance to the Jordanian Electricity Authority and to the Irbid District Electricity Company.

Provision of equipment to the Jordan Meteorological Department for monitoring weather systems and locust swarms.

Advice on air traffic control to the Jordan Civil Aviation Authority.

Feasibility study for the Government of Jordan on the restructuring of telecommunications.

Provision of equipment and advice to the geological mapping section of the Natural Resources Authority for compiling and printing maps.

Advice on computerising the Jordanian passport system.

Study of an aquifer at Qa Disi in southern Jordan to enable the Water Authority of Jordan to determine sensible abstraction rates.

Study for a possible professional link between the Water Authority of Jordan and a United Kingdom water company.

Diagnostic study into pollution at the King Talal dam.

Study of possible contamination of groundwater in the Amman Zarka basin.

Feasibility study into centralising the Water Authority of Jordan's maintenance facilities on a single site.

Advice to develop in-service teacher training and textbook production.

Provision of equipment to the structures testing laboratory at the Jordanian university of science and technology.

Assistance to develop teaching English for specific purposes at the Jordan university of science and technology.

Provision of computers and consultants to increase computer awareness among secondary school pupils.
Provision of equipment and advice to develop the national centre for occupational safety and health, and advice on industrial safety legislation.
Provision of equipment to vocational secondary schools.
Provision of a walking dragline for the Jordan Phosphate Mines Company.
The heads of mission small projects scheme is administered by the British ambassador to Jordan and funds four to six small projects each year.
The joint funding scheme has contributed to 11 Oxfam projects in Jordan over the last five years.

Water and Sanitation Projects

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the breakdown of spending on clean water and sanitation projects within the Overseas Development Administration in 1991-92; how much of the total is allocated to basic water supply and sanitation for use by the public; and how much for services to private dwellings.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Total specific spending on clean water and sanitation projects by the Overseas Development Administration in the financial year 1991-92 was £24·529 million. Data are not available to enable a separation to be made between expenditure on water supply and sanitation for public or communal use, and services directly connected to private dwellings.

Many non-governmental organisations have clean water projects as part of their wider rural development schemes.

Cash Limits

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made in the 1993-94 cash limit for expenditure by the Overseas Development Administration.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit on the external assistance vote—class II, vote 5—will be increased by £3,736,000 from £1,811,060,000 to £1,814,796,000. The increase includes a transfer of £88,000 from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for assistance to the St. Petersburg potato industry and £3,337,000 in respect of a rollover of underspending against 1992-93 EC attribution. The gross running costs limit for the ODA has been increased by £311,000 from £51,771,000 to £52,082,000. This includes £235,000 in respect of an end of year flexibility entitlement and a transfer of £76,000 from Property Holdings for a maintenance club subscription. The net running costs limit for the Natural Resources Institute has been increased from nil to £3,788,000 to cover a revised forecast of income, and restructuring and relocation costs. The increases will be offset by transfers from other Government Departments and charges to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Aid Categories

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what cash is distributed as tied aid; how much aid is untied; what other categories of aid exist; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are three main categories of tying status for official development assistance reported to the development assistance committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development: tied, partially tied and untied.

In 1992, £650 million of the United Kingdom's bilateral aid commitments to developing countries were tied, £500,000 were partially tied and £324 million were untied.

EMPLOYMENT

Deregulation

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which organisations were consulted by his Department, on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Matters covered by task force recommendations on administration of training programmes, handling of unfair dismissal claims, and industrial tribunal procedures have been discussed with training and enterprise councils, the Advisory Conciliation and Arbitration Service, presidents of the industrial tribunals, the Council on Tribunals and other interested bodies as appropriate. A provision in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill relating to redundancy selection implements a proposal of the task forces, which represent business.

I have asked the Health and Safety Commission to consider the task forces' recommendations on health and safety at work as part of a general review of health and safety legislation. Decisions on these recommendations will be taken when the commission has made its report.

Wages Inspectorate

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many complaints from employees were received by the wages inspectorate in March, April and May 1993; and in how many of these cases the inspectorate's investigation was completed within four weeks.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

1993	Number of complaints received	Number of complaint inspections completed within four weeks
March	113	78
May	93	65

Employees were told the results of investigations into their complaint. If the investigation could not be completed within four weeks, the employee was told about the progress of the investigation.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were in temporary employment at the latest available date; and what is the proportion of those in temporary employment as a percentage of the total number registered for employment for England as a whole and for each standard region within England.

Miss Widdecombe: Latest estiamtes from the summer 1993 labour force survey of the number and proportion of employees in temporary employment for standard regions within England are given in the table:

Standard region	Employees in temporary employment (thousands)	Proportion of employees in temporary employment (percentage)
South East	477	7·0
Greater London	196	7·8
East Anglia	67	8·0
South West	107	6·0
West Midlands	117	5·9
East Midlands	101	6·2
Yorkshire and Humberside	128	6·7
North West	145	6·2
North	83	7·4
England	1,224	6·6

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The chief executive of the Employment Service Agency is usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions concerning the day-to-day operational matters of the agency and on subjects for which he has delegated responsibility, as set out in the agency's framework document, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Work Permits

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for a work permit to employ a non-EC national were received in April 1993; what proportion of these applications were decided within eight weeks; and what proportion of applications on behalf of entertainers, sports people and models were decided within four weeks.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Four thousand, three hundred and ninety-nine applications for work permits were received in April 1993. Of the 2,850 cases processed in the month, 91·9 per cent. had been decided within eight weeks of receipt.

One thousand, four hundred and eleven of the total applications decided in April 1993 were for entertainers, sports people and models. Fifty-seven per cent. of these cases were decided within four weeks and 92 per cent. within eight weeks of receipt.

This exceeds the Department's published standard of 75 per cent. within eight weeks and was achieved at a time when the section responsible for work permits was in the process of moving between sites in Sheffield.

Employment Agencies

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for new licences were received from employment agencies in April 1993; and in what proportion of these cases a licence was issued to the applicant within eight weeks.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In April 1993, 241 applications for new licences were received, 83·8 per cent. of which resulted in a licence being offered to the applicant within eight weeks.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employment agencies have (a) been licensed, (b) had applications for licensing as an employment agency refused and (c) had their licences revoked in each year since 1973.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Employment Agencies Act 1973, which requires all employment agencies and employment business to be licensed, came into force in mid-1976. The available records commence from 1977, the first full year of the Act's operation, and are provided in the table:

Year	Number of current licences	Applications refused	Licences revoked
1978	5,896	4	1
1979	6,550	2	—

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much funding has been made available to each TEC in East Anglia in 1992-93 and 1993-94 for youth training, adult training, long-term unemployed and business start-up schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The table provides the information requested in respect of youth and adult training and business start-up allowances.

Separate figures are not available for the long-term unemployed. People unemployed for at least a year who have been through a jobplan workshop are given priority for places on the training for work programme, and the long-term unemployed also have access to a wide range of other opportunities available through the training and enterprise councils.

Notes:

[1] Funds are paid to TECs on the basis of a negotiated contract. The figures given above for both years are based on contracted amounts. The actual amount spent depends on claims made by the TEC.

[2] TFW figures include the programmes replaced by TFW, including employment training, employment action and HTNT.

[3] BSU figures are based on the amounts paid for starts and survivors.

Employment Service

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what guidance is given to the Employment Service on the giving of information on claimants to hon. Members' staff.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 7 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about guidance to Employment Service (ES) staff on providing information about claimants to honourable Members' staff.

It may help if I explain the background. The rules of confidentiality are long established, having been in operation since the start of the National Insurance Scheme in 1911, when the Government of the day decided that information obtained about members of the public in connection with its administration should be regarded as confidential between the person concerned and the Ministry, and would not be released without the consent of that person. Successive Governments have continued since then to apply this policy. There are however specific groups of people who may receive personal information about a client without written consent; these include MPs, provided that they are acting on behalf of the client concerned. If however an enquiry about a client is received from someone claiming to be acting on behalf of the MP, we do not reply until the written consent of the client is produced.

The policy on issues concerning disclosure of information, is set out in the ES Disclosure Guide and other internal memos. This guidance is issued to all ES Jobcentres and updated regularly as necessary.

I hope this is helpful.

Protection of Young People at Work Directive

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what reason Italy and Spain gave for abstaining on the protection of young people at work directive in the Council meeting of 23 November 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Explanations of voting on the common position concerning the protection of young people at work are in the annex to European Council document 10237/93—Presse 199-G. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

After-school Care

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money was allocated to each training and enterprise council in 1993-94 for after-school care in accordance with the Department of Employment's after-school care initiative; ane what each TEC's estimated out-turn expenditure is in 1993-94 in that area of activity.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short) on 3 December 1993, Official Report, column 821, which lists the funding made available for 1993-94 by training and enterprise councils including that for the out of school child care grant.

TECs are not asked to provide estimated outturn expenditure.

Health and Safety

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the organisations and individuals consulted or to be consulted by the Health and Safety Commission in its current review of health and safety legislation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 4 February 1994]: No definitive list is available. The core of consultation rests with the Health and Safety Commission's task groups, part of whose remit is, in turn, to consult widely. A list of task group members has been placed in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Legislation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many Government Bills have been defeated at (a) Second Reading and (b) Third Reading in the House of Commons since 1979.

Mr. Newton: The information is as follows:

(a) One—Shops Bill [Lords], Session 1985-86.

(b) None.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the number of Bills passed in each Session since 1979.

Mr. Newton: The information is given in the table.

Bills passed by the Commons

[2] Number of Bills which received the Royal Assent.

[3] Number of Bills which received Royal Assent which originated in the Lords.
[4] Number of Bills which received the Royal Assent which were Government Bills.

Paintings and Photographs

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many (a) paintings and (b) photographs there are on the walls of his rooms.

Mr. Newton: There are four paintings in my room in the House of Commons and seven paintings and 12 prints in my room at 68 Whitehall. There are no photographs on the walls in either room.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to buy or borrow photographs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to do so.

Early-day Motions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many early-day motions have been tabled in each year since 1964.

Mr. Newton: This information is available in House of Commons Factsheet No. 30, entitled "Early Day Motions".

ENVIRONMENT

Urban Regeneration (Regional Directors)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the environment if the appointment of, or powers given to, the new senior regional directors for urban regeneration, or the new procedures he proposes for determining the structure and distribution of related expenditure, are subject to any decision of Parliament.

Mr. Baldry: The integrated regional offices, headed by senior regional directors, will bring together the responsibilities of the existing regional offices of the Department of the Environment, Department of Transport, Department of Employment and Department of Trade and Industry. Their appointment does not require specific parliamentary approval. Voted expenditure on the new single regeneration budget, details of which were announced to the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 4 November 1993, Official Report, column 515, will be subject to the approval of Parliament in the normal way.

Council Tenants

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council tenants received compensation in 1992-93 upon leaving their home for improvements made to it; and what was the total sum paid to them.

Sir George Young: Information on expenditure by local authorities under the existing discretionary power to make such payments, in section 100 of the Housing Act 1985, is not collected centrally. The Department proposes to monitor expenditure under the new right to compensation for tenants' improvements scheme being introduced on 1 April 1994, under section 122 of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the subjects on which his Department or its predecessors formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Baldry: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions on the day-to-day operational matters of their agencies and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agencies' framework documents. Copies of replies provided by chief executives are published in the Official Report.

Planning Applications

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of planning applications to local authorities were decided within eight weeks in 1992-93.

Mr. Baldry: An average of 63 per cent.

Food Superstores

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning applications for food superstores have been granted on appeal, for the last two years for which figures are available.

Mr. Baldry: The provision of information on planning appeals is the responsibility of the Planning Inspectorate. I have asked the inspectorate 's chief executive, Mr. Stephen Crow, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from H. S. Crow to Mr. John Ward, dated 3 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of food superstores for which planning permission has been granted on appeal.

The information is taken from the Inspectorate's records. The latest figures available for England are for the financial years that ended on 31 March 1992 and 1993 and are set out below:

Planning appeals allowed involving food superstores

	Number
1991-92	9

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional public funding over the provision envisaged, is necessary to meet the full construction costs, including stations at Island Gardens and Cutty Sark, of the proposed docklands light railway extension to Greenwich and Lewisham.

Sir George Young: The full construction costs of the proposed extension, including Cutty Sark and Island

Gardens stations, were estimated at £139 million in November 1992. The Government have stated unequivocally from the outset that this project must be taken forward with the private sector in the lead without any Government grant or subsidy. That remains our position. A review of the commercial viability of the project undertaken last autumn indicated that the original estimated cost could not be funded from the level of revenues forecast for the extension. Third parties locally have assigned £7 million to the project but this will not be sufficient to close the funding gap. To ensure the project's financial viability, either major reductions in the scope of the project will need to be made or further third party finance will need to be contributed.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to charge a toll for cross-river journeys on the docklands light railway when it is extended to Greenwich and Lewisham.

Sir George Young: When London Transport promoted the Bill seeking powers to build the extension of the docklands light railway to Lewisham, it was envisaged that a premium fare, in the form of a cross-river toll, would need to be charged to recover the costs of construction. Current advice confirms that a premium fare will be necessary to make the project financially viable.

Leeds Development Corporation

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total value of the land and buildings held by the Leeds development corporation.

Mr. Baldry: The total value of the land and buildings held by the Leeds development corporation at 31 March 1993 was £7,507,000. The valuation figure, which is at the lower of cost and net realisable value, corresponds to the entry for development assets in the financial statements published in the corporation's annual report.

Westminster and Wandsworth Councils

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what concerns were expressed by his officials to himself or his predecessors in the operation by Westminster or Wandsworth council of (a) the cash incentive scheme and (b) the right to buy in general.

Sir George Young: By convention, advice given by officials to Ministers is not disclosed.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reference was made to the cash incentive schemes and right-to-buy policies of Westminster and Wandsworth councils in their housing investment programme submissions, monitoring statements and meetings since 1985; what concerns were expressed by his officials as a result of these; and what changes were made to the scheme.

Sir George Young: Local authorities' HIP submissions are public documents and copies have been placed in the Library of the House. The Department collects detailed information at the end of each financial year from all local authorities operating cash incentive schemes under section 129 of the Housing Act 1988, and monitors the right-to-buy performance of all London boroughs. We were satisfied that Wandsworth's proposals met the criteria but, in the case of Westminster, following discussions with the Department when the borough first planned to run a cash incentive scheme in 1989-90, the council confirmed that when properties vacated were to be sold they would be offered to existing council tenants only, thus creating a vacancy for reletting to a homeless household.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what reviews were carried out by his Department of the cash incentive schemes operated by Westminster and Wandsworth councils; what the results of these were; and what changes were made to the schemes as a result;

(2) what measures were taken by his Department to ensure that where the payment of a cash incentive in Wandsworth and Westminster council did not under their scheme result in the vacated houses being allocated for rent to someone in housing need the purchaser of those vacant properties themselves vacated a property which was let to someone in housing need.

Sir George Young: Since the introduction of the cash incentive scheme in 1989, the Department has collected detailed information at the end of each financial year. This includes the number of grants paid and dwellings released for each local authority running a CIS. It enables the Department to monitor schemes to ensure that they meet the objective of releasing vacancies to house—directly or indirectly—homeless households.

No changes were made to the schemes run by Westminster council or Wandsworth council as a result of this monitoring process.

The results of the first two years of this monitoring process were published by HMSO in a repoert "Cash Incentives Review" in 1992; a copy is in the Library.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reasons Westminster council was judged to be performing well in its housing policies which led to the award of higher housing investment programme allocations in recent years; and by how much the allocation was increased as a result.

Sir George Young: Westminster city council's performance as a housing authority was assessed against the criteria published by my Department at the beginning of each HIP round.

In recent years, Westminster has been assessed as performing strongly across the board, with particular strengths in the management of its stock, the promotion of tenant involvement and self-management, and the support of housing associations. These assessment's of Westminster's efficiency and effectiveness, along with assessments in respect of other published criteria, have been reflected in the discretionary elements of its HIP allocations.

For the past three years, discretion has been used to allocate 60 per cent. of the HIP annual capital guidelines, the remainder being allocated on the basis of a calculation of the general housing needs of local authorities. Westminster has in recognition of its efficiency and effectiveness been allocated ACGs significantly greater than it would have been using the needs calculation alone.

The criteria used in assessing housing authorities are available from the Library of the House, as are the details of the HIP allocations of individual authorities, and the calculations of their general housing needs.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when approval was given to the cash incentive scheme operated by (a) Westminster and (b) Wandsworth councils; and what special conditions were added to the schemes as proposed by these councils.

Sir George Young: Any local authority which applies under section 129 of the Housing Act 1988 to run a cash incentive scheme is required to ensure that the number of grants paid equals the number of people rehoused in rented accommodation; that grants are paid only to tenants who could not afford to buy without this assistance; and that the amount of individual grants is kept within the prescribed limit.

Both Westminster council and Wandsworth council met these criteria. Formal approval to run a cash incentive scheme in 1989-90 was granted to them on 14 August 1989 and 22 May 1989 respectively.

No changes were made by Westminster and Wandsworth councils when they sought and obtained annually approval to run a cash incentive scheme in subsequent years.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of subsidy was paid under the cash incentive scheme to Westminster and Wandsworth councils in each year since the scheme was introduced.

Sir George Young: The table shows the total Government resources made available in the form of supplementary credit approvals to Westminster and Wandsworth councils for cash incentive schemes each year since the scheme was introduced. No Government resources were made available in 1989-90 or in 1993-94.

Year	Wandsworth £	Westminster £
[1]1990-91	1,933,464	1,409,000

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Baldry: The answer is as follows:

(a) 1
(b) 62 (including (a))

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, columns 827-28, whether British Nuclear Fuels was charged by his Department for the work put into preparation on the Euratom treaty article 37 submission on THORP.

Mr. Atkins: BNFL was not charged for work done by the Department specifically to meet the requirements of article 37 of the Euratom treaty.

Paper Processing

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to monitor the progress of environmental health authorities in meeting the timetable requirements of part 1 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 in respect of licences to control emission levels from paper coating processors.

Mr. Atkins: My Department monitors in various ways the operation of the local authority air pollution control system established under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. This monitoring includes regular meetings of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution—local authority liaison committee, the establishment of an industry forum, local authority statistical returns, and a review of the performance of 25 authorities undertaken by my officials last year.

Guidance notes on air pollution standards have been issued for the categories of processes coming under the control system. Each guidance note includes a timetable for completing process improvements. One such note was published on paper coating processes in February 1992 and a copy was placed in the Library of the House at the time. Each note is issued in consultation with the relevant industry organisation and it is our intention that they are reviewed every four years, or sooner if particular issues arise.

Surplus School Places

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he defines surplus places; what is the legal authority for his definition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

There is no statute governing the way in which surplus school capacity should be assessed. For current purposes the Department calculates the number of surplus places at a school as the difference between the number of places available, measured using a standard formula and based on the physical capacity of the accommodation at the school, and the number of pupils on the school's roll.

EDUCATION

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Patten: The figures requested are as follows:

Financial Year	Domestic Travel £	Overseas Travel £
1992-93—planned	6,000	see note[1]
—actual	3,330	2,050[2]
1993-94—planned	6,250	see note[1]
—actual (to date)	3,080	400[2]

[1] The annual budget for foreign travel by all the Department's Ministers (including officials in attendance). This was £54,000 in 1992-93; the corresponding figure for 1993-94 is £50,000. These plans are not disaggregated between Ministers.

[2] Expenditure incurred on the Secretary of State's travel (including officials in attendance).

Non-motorised Transport

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what initiatives he plans to introduce to make educational establishments equally accessible to users of non-motorised as to users of motorised transport, including provision for adequate secure cycle parking.

Mr. Forth: The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981, require that the land provided for a maintained school shall be adequate to permit provision of appropriate ancillary facilities, including vehicle parks. The Department's publication "The Outdoor Classroom", Building Bulletin 71, includes guidance on car parking and cycle storage facilities for schools. Parking and access arrangements at other educational establishments are a matter for the authorities responsible for those establishments.

Under-fives Education

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish a table showing (a) the component of standard spending assessment which is notionally attributed to the education of under-fives, (b) the actual expenditure on education of under-fives for each of the London boroughs for the most recent year that figures are available, (c) the number of children under five in maintained schools and (d) the percentage of under-fives in (i) nursery classes and nursery schools and (ii) infant classes, as a percentage of the under-five-years population.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested which is available is set out in the table. Reliable data on expenditure for under-fives are not available at the level of individual local authorities.

		£ million
(a)	Under-fives component of education SSAs	935·2
(c)	Number of under-fives in maintained schools	656,193
(di)	Percentage of under-fives population in nursery classes and nursery schools	26
(dii)	Percentage of under-fives population in infant classes	24

Notes:
1. The information on pupil numbers is derived from the January 1993 schools census carried out by the Department. The figure is based on a head count of the number of part-time (329,944) and full-time (326,249) pupils aged three and four on 31 August 1992.
2. The figures exclude pupils aged four on 31 August 1992 but whose fifth birthday fell between 1 September and 31 December as well as pupils aged under-five in maintained special schools.
3. The percentage rates have been calculated using information on the under-fives population supplied by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OCPS).

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish a table showing the component of standard spending assessment which is notionally attributed to the education of under-fives, expressed as a per capita figure for each child under five years, and the actual expenditure on education for under-fives expressed as a per capita figure for (a) each child under five years in maintained schools and (b) each child under five years in the population.

Mr. Robin Squire: We do not have precise figures for expenditure by local education authorities on under-fives in maintained schools, but we can estimate the costs at a national level. The latest year for which spending data is available is 1991-92. The table gives the figures all in relation to the 1991-92 financial year.

Standard assessment (SSA) per population under five[1]	260
Estimated expenditure on under fives in maintained schools per under five pupil[2]	1,650
Estimated expenditure on under fives in maintained schools per population under five[1]	340

[1] The divisor for this is the population 0-4 on 30 June 1989. This is the basis on which the 1991-92 under-fives SSA was distributed to LEAs.
[2] Both the expenditure and the pupil numbers relate to pupils who were aged four or less on 31 August. The pupil number divisor is a financial year average.

Dearing Review

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the impact of Sir Ron Dearing's national curriculum review on the swimming and water safety requirement of key stage 2.

Mr. Robin Squire: The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority is currently considering what changes are needed in the statutory requirements for all the subjects of the national curriculum, including physical education. My right hon. Friend cannot anticipate the outcome of that consideration.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement setting out the arrangements for the membership and timetable for action for the working groups recommended by the national curriculum review undertaken by Sir Ron Dearing.

Mr. Robin Squire: Membership of the groups advising the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority on the revision of the national curriculum was announced by the authority on 12 January: a copy of its press notice is in the Library. The groups' work will be completed by the end of March and the authority will then advise my right hon. Friend on a revised national curriculum to go out to consultation between May and July. The aim is that new orders for each national curriculum subject should be distributed to schools in January 1995.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy that local education authorities should be represented on bodies which are relevant to their responsibilities as employers on such bodies as the Teacher Training Agency; and if he will invite those authorities to nominate representatives.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend will continue to make it his policy to appoint to bodies for which he is responsible members who will make an effective personal contribution, drawing on their knowledge and experience. While relevant experience may be specified in statute, and outside bodies may always suggest names for consideration, members are not normally appointed in a representative capacity.

Technology Schools Initiative

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what monitoring is being undertaken by his Department of spending by schools allocated funding from the technology schools initiative.

Mr. Robin Squire: TSI projects include a tender stage when project details are finalised and competitive tenders are sought to ensure value for money is obtained. For grant-maintained school projects, approval from the Department must then be obtained before work on the project can begin. Grant is paid only for expenditure which has been approved, and invoices must be submitted to support claims.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will place in the Library a copy of Stratford grant-maintained school's successful bid for £300,000 under the technology schools initiative.

Mr. Robin Squire: No. Bids for awards under the technology schools initiative—TSI—were prepared by individual schools, with the involvement of the local education authority where applicable, for submission to the Department. Schools did not necessarily prepare their bids with any expectation that they would become public documents.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education by what date he expects Stratford school to have completed the project for which grants were awarded under the technology schools initiative.

Mr. Robin Squire: The project is expected to be completed before the end of the 1993-94 financial year.

Information (Circulation)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what facilities his Department provides for other Government Departments to circulate information to schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The DFE publishes a termly newsletter, Schools Update, which is sent to all schools. It has a section which offers information about the availability of leaflets and resource material from other Government Departments.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which Departments of Government in the last year have offered for circulation or circulated to schools printed or film/video material directly or indirectly; and if he will name the publications provided in schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department for Education does not keep a record of material distributed to schools by other Government Departments. In the last 12 months, the DFE has itself distributed sample copies of the following publicity material to schools:

Education Act 1993 Publicity Flyer
Grant-Maintained Schools—Experiences in The First Year
Grant-Maintained Schools—How to Become a GM School
Grant-Maintained Schools—Questions Parents Ask
Grant-Maintained Schools—Questions Staff Ask

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend does not have a shredding machine in his private office. There are a total of three machines in the Department.

Grant-maintained Schools Centre

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what inquiries he has undertaken or commissioned into the application of grants by the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department's accountancy adviser was asked to review the financial systems of the GMSC as regards the application of grant. Subsequently, a firm of accountants was engaged to review these in more detail. In addition the centre is required to provide the Department with audited accounts every year, which must include a statement as to whether the auditors are satisfied that grant income has been applied correctly.

The auditors have certified that in 1992-93 grant was used for the purposes approved by my right hon. Friend.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which grants to the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. were incorrectly applied; if he will give the amounts, dates and purposes of such grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: None. The company's accounts for 1992-93 include an auditors' certificate that grant was applied for the purposes approved by my right hon. Friend.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the name of the consultants who conducted further work into the finances of the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. after his own Department's internal review of the company was concluded in February 1993; and if he will place a copy of its report in the Library.

Mr. Robin Squire: The consultancy was undertaken by the firm Coopers and Lybrand. Their report covers the full range of activities of the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd., more than half of which are not grant aided. It must therefore be treated as commercial in confidence.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will place a copy of the accounts of the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. for 1992-93 in the Library.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend placed a copy of the accounts of the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. in the Library last week.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what inquiries he has undertaken or commissioned into the financial systems operated by the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Grant-Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. was visited by the Department's chief accountancy adviser in February 1993, and subsequently by consultants, who examined and advised on the centre's financial systems. The company improved its systems in the light of that advice, and the external auditor's report on the company's accounts for 1992-93 includes a statement that the centre is now maintaining an adequate system of internal control.

Teacher Training Initiatives

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many schools have agreed to take part in the proposed school-based teacher training initiatives; and how many students will be trained as a result;

(2) if he will make a statement on the representations he has received for and against participation in the school-based teacher training initiative.

Mr. Robin Squire: Consultations in 1992 and 1993 revealed widespread support for the principle of school-based teacher training, in which students spend considerable time in schools and schools are involved in the design and delivery of training. My right hon. Friend's criteria for new ITT courses now include these requirements, which should be fully in place by September 1994 for secondary ITT and by September 1996 for primary ITT.

A new scheme of school-centred initial teacher training —SCITT—was launched in March 1993, in which funds are paid direct to consortia of schools to organise and provide ITT for postgraduates. In 1993-94, 214 students began courses offered by nine consortia involving a total of 49 schools. Proposals from consortia of primary and secondary schools for courses to start in 1994-95 are currently being considered.

WALES

Development Board for Rural Wales

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what Welsh Office scrutiny there is of the working of the Development Board for Rural Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Development Board for Rural Wales, like other non-departmental public bodies, is subject to a range of controls, direction and monitoring as required by the Development of Rural Wales Act 1976 and as set out in the board's financial memorandum and other guidelines. In addition, the board is set a number of targets, objectives and performance measures and in the context of its corporate planning cycle. I shall be chairing a meeting with the board in the summer to discuss its corporate plan targets for 1995-96. The board's finances are monitored on a monthly basis and its accounts are audited by the National Audit Office.

Business and Industry (Government Support)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent on developing and supporting (a) manufacturing industries and (b) business in general in Wales for each year since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Expenditure through the Welsh Office's main schemes for business support is shown in the table. Separate figures for manufacturing industry are not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The figures do not include grant in aid for development agencies in Wales, nor expenditure by DTI on UK-wide schemes.

[1]Figures for RDG up to 1983-84 are gross of receipts. Net figures are not available for those years. All other figures are net.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent per head of the population on education in Wales in each year since 1979.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Based on the appropriation accounts of the Welsh Office, the information is estimated to be as follows:

£ per head of population (in cash terms)

	Per cent.
1979-80	1·17
1980-81	1·26
1981-82	1·77
1982-83	1·89
1983-84	2·55
1984-85	3·16
1985-86	3·94
1986-87	4·84
1987-88	7·38
1988-89	8·52
1989-90	10·37
1990-91	11·79
1991-92	14·76
1992-93	32·68

These figures are not wholly comparable in every case because of changes in classification. However, figures for total identifiable Government expenditure on education in Wales are available on a consistent basis and the information is as follows:

£ per head of population (in cash terms)

1979-80	192
1980-81	234
1981-82	256
1982-83	277

1988-89	391
1989-90	423
1990-91	458
1991-92	521
1992-93	568

Unemployment Schemes

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent on schemes to help unemployed people in Wales in each year since 1979 in total and per person unemployed; and if he will list which schemes are included in these totals for each year.

Mr. Redwood: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

National Curriculum

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what additional resources have been allocated to the Welsh Office for the expanding of the national curriculum in key stage 4 during 1994-95.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The curriculum for 14 to 16-year-olds in Wales is being slimmed down to provide flexibility and choice and is not being expanded.

Tourism

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent per head of the population on encouraging tourism in Wales for each year since 1979.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information in the table represents central Government support to the Wales tourist board per head of the population in cash terms:

Central Government support to Wales Tourist Board 1978-79 to 1993-94

Year	£ per head of population in Wales[1]

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he received a copy of the curriculum vitae of the chair of the Welsh Development Agency before making the appointment; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Redwood: I did not read the chairman's curriculum vitae. Such documents are confidential and not suitable for placing in the Library of the House. I read a letter and memorandum about Mr. Rowe-Beddoe's career and suitability for the job before asking to see him. I did not discuss politics when I met him, with officials present. The CV was received in the Welsh Office, did include on it on page 2 a reference to the Conservative party, but this was not repeated in the materials I read before confirming the appointment.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he first considered the curriculum vitae submitted by Mr. David Rowe-Beddoe in support of his application for the post of chairman of the Welsh Development Agency.

Mr. Redwood: My Department provided details about Mr. Rowe-Beddoe's career. I had no need to consider the curriculum vitae.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applicants for the post of chairman of the Welsh Development Agency were personally interviewed by (a) himself and (b) his immediate predecessor as Secretary of State.

Mr. Redwood: I met the selected candidate; officials sifted CVs of over 80; my predecessor interviewed six.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he first became aware that Mr. David

Rowe-Beddoe, the person he appointed as chair of the Welsh Development Agency had been, immediately prior to that appointment, the chairman of the Monte Carlo branch of Conservatives Abroad.

Mr. Redwood: Recently. Mr. Rowe-Beddoe was appointed because of his business skills. His political associations were not a consideration.

Transport Expenditure

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to produce annual statistics of all Government spending, capital and revenue across all modes of transport in Wales, including data on tonnages, passenger numbers, investment and subsidy.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Comprehensive information on transport in Wales including data on tonnages, passenger numbers, Government expenditure, investment and subsidy, is published annually in "Welsh Transport Statistics", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The next edition—No. 10—is due for publication on 6 July 1994.

Cereal Support Payments

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy to ensure that Wales and England are treated as one region for the purpose of cereal support payments.

Mr. Redwood: This is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and me to decide jointly.

Milk Marque

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of discussions with the Milk Marketing Board on the setting up of Milk Marque; and what representations he has received from Welsh farming unions on this matter.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies), on 3 February 1994, Official Report, column 866.

I have received four letters from hon. Members on behalf of the farming unions. In addition my right hon. Friend the Minister of State has met the National Farmers Union and the Farmers Union of Wales on 16 and 23 December 1993 respectively to discuss this matter.

Sheep and Beef Premiums

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on late payment of sheep annual premium and special beef premium to farmers in Wales in 1993; and what steps he intends to take to ensure that payments are made on time in 1994.

Mr. Redwood: I have received representations from several sources.

Processing work on these schemes was delayed initially by the need to establish a new computer system to enable payments to be issued from the Welsh Office, and not from MAFF as previously. The system has now been established and good progress is being made.

Payments have been sent to 84 per cent. of sheep premium claimants. Payments have been authorised for 46 per cent. of holdings which submitted beef special premium claims and will be sent to them shortly.

Priority is being given to the remaining claims.

A5

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make a statement on the commencement dates for each section in respect of the dualling of the A5 across Anglesey.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Member to the 1993 supplement to "Roads in Wales: Progress and Plans for the 1990s".

Denbigh Graig Quarry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to take measures to halt the proposed extension of the Denbigh Graig quarry by Tarmac/Roadstone; what account he has taken of the objections of residents and organisations in Denbigh; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is a matter for Clwyd county council as the mineral planning authority for the area.

Crossrail

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement regarding the potential benefits to Wales of the crossrail project in central London.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Crossrail will afford travellers from south Wales speedier and more convenient access to the west end, the City and to destinations in east London and beyond.

M4

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he received during the consultation period on the proposals to extend the M4 relief road through the Gwent levels; how many of these representations approved of the Welsh Office's proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 31 January 1994, Official Report, column 526.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Redwood: The answer is: (a) 1 (b) 17.

Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the enhancement of value for money to be achieved from overseas travel by its staff;

(2) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the strengthening of financial controls, and improvement of assessment and monitoring of overseas travel claims;

(3) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the resignation of its executive director with effect from 2 February 1994.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: These are matters for which the chairman and the board of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales have already given consideration. Overseas travel claims are currently being investigated by the district audit service at the request of the chairman and the board, following an internal inquiry, and the police have been informed by the chairman of the results of the investigation so far. The chairman and the board may wish to take into consideration any comments, the district audit service may offer following its investigation and I expect that they will continue to keep the Welsh Office fully informed.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to establish a special advisory body for sustainable development policies in Wales on the lines of that proposed for Scotland.

Mr. Redwood: The Government panel on sustainable development will provide independent and authoritative advice to all Ministers, including me. The Welsh Office is also giving priority to ensuring that Welsh interests are properly reflected in the round table and citizen's environment initiatives. I see no need for another quango in Wales to deal with this.

Teacher Training

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools have agreed to take part in the proposed school-based teacher training initiative; and how many students will be trained as a result.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Schools in Wales have not yet been invited to participate in school-centred courses of initial teacher training. Subject to the passage of the Education Bill currently before Parliament, it would be for the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales to decide on the allocation of training places in higher education institutions and schools.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the representations he has received for and against participation in the school-based teacher training initiative.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I have received a number of representations from schools, higher education institutions and other interested parties about schools-centred teacher training. Some were opposed to schools taking full control of the training of student teachers; others supported the initiative provided that proper guidance and funding were made available.

Agriculture Support Schemes

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he plans to take to introduce more clarity and efficiency into the system of forms for the support schemes for agriculture in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 4 February]: I wish to see forms and explanatory literature kept as simple and straightforward as possible, although they inevitably have to be comprehensive enough to inform farmers of the full range of scheme rules. I have established a working group which will report to me in the near future on the streamlining of agri-environmental and other schemes in Wales.

Consumer Protection

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to ensure the provision of full consumer protection and trading standards service in all parts of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 4 February]: It is a matter for local authorities to ensure that they perform their statutory duties satisfactorily.

TRANSPORT

Carriage of Goods

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what specific restrictions in respect of the carriage of goods apply to vehicles in taxation class restricted showman's heavy goods vehicle.

Mr. Key: This is an extremely complex area and I will write to the hon. Member in detail.

Bowbelle

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will investigate and place in the Library details of the certificates of service held by the crew of Bowbelle; and whether they satisfied medical fitness certification requirements.

Mr. Norris: The manning of Bowbelle was fully in accord with the statutory requirements for the vessel, and all the crew were properly qualified. Some of the crew held certificates of competency or service. These certificates can be issued only to persons possessing a valid medical fitness certificate.

Tax Concessions (Germany)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has made to the German Government about the extension of tax concessions available to German shipping companies.

Mr. Norris: None, but the EC Commission, which has responsibility for the initial consideration of these matters, is currently considering whether the extension of tax concessions available to German shipping companies is an illegal state aid within the terms of the treaty of Rome.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February 1994, Official Report, column 611.

Contracts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 509, if he will publish the terms of reference for each contract awarded over the past five years.

Mr. Norris: The contracts awarded over the past five years contain a wide variety of types of work. They will not normally have been let against simple terms of reference, but if the hon. Member has a particular interest in any one of the specific cases listed in my answer of 31 January, I will be happy to respond.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answers of 31 January, Official Report, columns 506-9, regarding contracts for which bids are currently being considered by his Department, if he will publish the terms of reference for each contract.

Mr. Norris: The contracts currently being considered contain a wide variety of types of work. They will not normally be let against simple terms of reference, but if the hon. Member has a particular interest in any one of the cases listed in my answer of 31 January, I will be happy to respond.

Operator Licensing

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the method used to calculate the annual savings to the transport industry of his proposals for simplifying the operator licensing system for buses and lorries quoted in his press statement No. 24 of 19 January.

Mr. Key: The press statement figure was based on the saving to the haulage industry as a result of the introduction of continuous licensing. It was calculated on a fee charged at five-yearly intervals which would be less than the current grant charge because no processing of an application would be involved and the elimination of advertisement costs for operators already in the industry.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department has taken to ensure that local residents are aware of their rights to object to the issue of goods vehicle operator licences.

Mr. Key: Applicants for a goods vehicle operator's licence must advertise their application for a licence in a local newspaper which is circulated in the area of the applicant's operating centre, i.e. where the vehicles are to be kept. The advertisement must appear within 21 days before, or 21 days after, the application is made.

The advertisement makes local residents aware of their right, if they are owners or occupiers of land in the vicinity of an operating centre, to submit written representations to the licensing authority within 21 days after the date when the advertisement appeared in the local newspaper.

Further advice is given to representors in a booklet entitled "A Guide to making Representations". Copies of this booklet are available free of charge from traffic area offices.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the savings to his Department of the introduction of continuous licensing for operators of buses and lorries.

Mr. Key: It is estimated that the effect on departmental expenditure will be neutral.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the meetings held by his officials with representatives of local authorities to discuss the deregulation of operator licensing.

Mr. Norris: Prior to the 1989 review of passenger and goods vehicle operator licensing, meetings took place between officials and the associations of district councils, county councils and metropolitan authorities. These associations received and responded to the 1993 consultation document but no further meetings were requested.

Litter

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he intends to take to ensure that motorways are regularly cleared of litter.

Mr. Key: We take a positive approach to our obligation under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to keep motorways in England clear, so far as is practicable, of litter and refuse. Our maintenance agents carry out regular safety inspections and patrols during which they report litter accumulations; if debris is observed which could present a hazard to traffic, it is removed as soon as possible. Other offending material is then removed in accordance with the demanding standards specified in the code of practice on litter and refuse, issued under the Act. We spend over £5 million a year on sweeping and cleaning motorways and scavenging the verges.

Traffic Area Offices

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount was spent by traffic area co-ordinating division on promotion of the work of the traffic area offices in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Key: It is estimated that promotional work by the traffic area co-ordination division in publishing annual reports and customer service guides on behalf of the traffic area offices will amount to £4,500 in the present financial year 1993-94.

Buses

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will publish a table showing for each year since 1985, how many (a) double-decker buses, (b) single-decker buses, (c) minibuses and (d) midibuses, owned by London Buses Ltd., were (i) under four years old, (ii) between four and seven years old, (iii) between eight and 11 years old, (iv) between 12- and 15-years-olds and (v) more than 15-years-old;

(2) if he will publish a table, showing for each year since 1985, the number of (a) double-decker buses, (b) single-decker buses, (c) minibuses and (d) midibuses operated by private bus companies on behalf of London Transport were (i) under four years of age, (ii) between four and seven years of age, (iii) between eight and 11 years of age, (iv) between 12 and 15 years of age and (v) more than 15 years of age;

(3) if he will publish a table, showing for each year since 1985, the number of (a) double-decker buses, (b)

single-decker buses, (c) minibuses and (d) midibuses operated by or on behalf of London Transport which were (i) under four years of age, (ii) between four and seven years of age, (iii) between eight and 11 years of age, (iv) between 12 and 15 years of age and (v) more than 15 years of age;

Mr. Norris: The information requested on the age profile of the buses owned by London Buses Ltd. is given. The same information for vehicles operated by private bus companies on behalf of London Transport is available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) double-decker buses, (b) single-decker buses, (c) minibuses and (d) midibuses have been bought by London Buses Ltd. in each year since 1985; and what was the cost of each category.

Mr. Norris: The typical cost of vehicles to London Buses Ltd.—in 1993-94 prices—is as follows:

Double-deckers	110,000
Single-deckers	95,000
Midibuses	55,000
Minibuses	35,000

The number of vehicles of each type that LBL have bought in each year since 1985 is shown in the table.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to introduce measures to privatise London Buses Ltd.

Mr. Norris: London Transport currently expect to offer the 10 London Buses Ltd. operating companies for sale in the spring.

Motorway Usage

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the level of motorway usage (a) nationally and (b) by individual motorway by (i) all vehicles, (ii) trucks and (iii) motor cars, in (1) 1970, (2) 1980 and (3) 1990; and what the figures are currently.

Mr. Key: The table gives traffic on motorways in Great Britain. The data are available only from 1973. The corresponding information for individual motorways is not available.

Road Construction

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the planned expenditure on road construction in the years 1994-95 to 1996-97.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 24 January, Official Report, column 77.

Motor Traffic Growth

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of his projections of future traffic growth is expected to be heavy goods traffic; and what proportion is expected to be private cars.

Mr. Key: Car traffic forecasts do not differentiate between private and commercial use. The growth in car traffic forecast in the national road traffic forecast between 1994 and 2025 is between 57 per cent. and 87 per cent. The growth in heavy goods vehicle traffic over the same period is forecast to be between 54 per cent. and 110 per cent.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the projected growth of motor vehicle traffic by the year 2025.

Mr. Key: It is projected in the NRTF that all motor vehicle traffic will grow by between 58 per cent. and 94 per cent. between 1994 and 2025. The forecast range results from differing assumptions about economic growth and fuel prices.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the source of information that is provided to the Government on future motor vehicle traffic growth.

Mr. Key: The growth in motor vehicle traffic is forecast within the Department of Transport. The information used is detailed in the booklet "National Road Traffic Forecast (Great Britain) 1989".

Road Lighting

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will light more roads in order to help achieve his target of reducing road deaths and serious injuries by a third by the year 2000.

Mr. Key: In deciding which road safety measures to introduce we apply the general principle that resources should be used in a way which is most likely to be effective in reducing casualties. There may be cases where lighting should be installed, but there are also many other ways of improving roads to reduce deaths and serious injuries. Lighting will not always be the most effective solution.

Public Transport

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will specify the measures his Department is taking to encourage freight traffic to use rail and passengers to use public transport.

Mr. Key: Government policies are designed to encourage passengers and freight to transfer from road to public transport where that makes economic and environmental sense. Some 90 per cent. of passenger and inland freight traffic goes by road, but next year about 40 per cent. of total transport expenditure will be used to improve public transport. The existing freight facilities grant scheme is also to be extended by the Railways Act 1993 and our new track access grant for freight services will start in April.

Road Maintenance

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of roadworks begun on or since 1 April 1993 are accompanied by a sign displaying the name of the organisation for which the work is being carried out and an emergency telephone number.

Mr. Key: Under the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991, the information described by the hon. Member is required to be displayed at works carried out by public utilities and others with apparatus in the road. The requirement does not apply to roadworks carried out by the highway authority. Compliance appears to be generally good but precise figures are not available.

The Department is the highway authority for the trunk roads and motorways in England. On these roads, all new construction works, and maintenance works other than short duration works, are accompanied by a sign naming the Department and giving other information about the work.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what percentage of (a) major and (b) all road maintenance contracts let between July 1992 and July 1993 were covered by lane rental agreements;

(2) what percentage of (a) major and (b) all road maintenance contracts let between July 1992 and July 1993 have contained direct financial incentives to minimise the amount of road coned off and to finish the work quickly.

Mr. Key: Three quarters of all major maintenance contracts let between July 1992 and July 1993 were lane rental. These contracts provide direct financial incentive to finish work quickly. Figures for non-major maintenance works are not available. It is a requirement in all trunk road maintenance contracts that traffic lanes should not be coned off unnecessarily.

Diabetics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy not to debar insulin-dependent patients from holding heavy goods vehicle and public service vehicle licences.

Mr. Key: The advice of the honorary advisory board on driving and diabetes is that to allow insulin-treated diabetics to drive these large vehicles would constitute an unnecessarily high risk to road safety.

Pollution

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the effect of Her Majesty's Government's plans for increasing the number of cars on the road and Her Majesty's Government's efforts to reduce pollution with technology such as filters and catalysts.

Mr. Key: Road traffic growth is largely a function of economic growth; current projections suggest that road traffic will increase by 58 to 94 per cent. by 2025. The forecasts of traffic demand do not represent targets which the Government are seeking to meet.

The Government have agreed tight emission standards for both cars and lorries within the European Union. As a result, most new cars have needed catalytic converters since the beginning of 1993. These reduce harmful emissions by about 70 per cent.

Unanimous agreement of a common position on vehicle emissions has been reached at the recent EC Council which will significantly tighten emission standards for new cars registered after 1 January 1997. Standards will be tightened further by the year 2000.

As a result of these standards, we expect ambient levels of most vehicle related pollutants to decline until well into the next century.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what study he has made of reports from the Centre for Exploitation of Science and Technology in relation to toxic effects of pollutants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Centre for Exploitation of Science and Technology produced a report on road transport and the environment as part of the United Kingdom environmental foresight project. The report contains a wide ranging review of environmental policies and aims to indentify future trends. In reaching views on these matters the Government take advice from a number of expert groups including the expert panel on air quality standards, established by the Department of the Environment, the Advisory Group on the Medical Aspects of Air Pollution Episodes and the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants, which report to the Department of Health.

Seamen (Employment Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many employment agencies for seamen have (a) been licensed, (b) had applications for licensing as an employment agency for seamen refused and (c) had their licences revoked in each year since 1973.

Mr. Norris: Ninety-three licences in total have been granted to employment agencies for seamen since 1973. Prior to 1988 the Department of Transport refused licences to commercial agencies, and there were only nine licence holders. These consisted of seven Merchant Navy establishment administration offices, which all closed by 1990, and two unions. Information is not available as to when these nine licences were first issued. Since then, one licence was issued in 1988, 29 in 1990, 19 in 1991, 21 in 1992, 13 in 1993 and one in 1994. No licences have been refused since 1990 but two were revoked in 1993.

Crossrail

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to take into account in considerations on the crossrail project for central London the benefits that scheme might have for Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: We remain committed to achieving the benefits of the crossrail project, which is a scheme of wide-ranging significance. Benefits to passengers travelling to and from points beyond the London area are taken into account in evaluations of the scheme. This includes benefits to people travelling to and from Wales.

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for the reduction of traffic congestion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The focus of the current trunk road programme is on relieving congestion on the existing network through widening schemes and the provision of bypasses on inter-urban routes.

In urban areas, there will be cases where on economic or environmental grounds it is neither practicable nor desirable to meet demand by road construction. In these cases, the answer may lie in a mix of traffic management measures—including priority routes in London, parking controls, encouraging public transport, car sharing and park-and-ride schemes. A wide-ranging study of urban traffic congestion is being carried out. It includes the possible role of city congestion charging. The introduction of the "package approach" will encourage local authorities to develop a coherent strategy for dealing with urban transport problems, and provide more flexibility for funding between modes.

Ports (Policing)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he is considering to bring responsibility for policing the ports of the United Kingdom under the direction and control of the British Transport police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: A member of the Port of Liverpool police made such a proposal in a letter copied widely to Members of the House. I do not support the proposal. Rather, it is for each port to decide about its policing arrangements.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Norris: The Department has 186 paper shredding machines. Three are in the Secretary of State's private office.

Traffic Monitoring

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what monitoring is undertaken by his Department of road works in London and their impact on traffic movement.

Mr. Norris: The Secretary of State is responsible for works co-ordination on motorways and trunk roads. Our own planned highway works are discussed with other London highway authorities with Metropolitan police and statutory undertakers to help to minimise inconvenience to the public. In addition, our consultant and borough agents receive advance details of certain types of street works proposed by statutory undertakers on trunk roads on our behalf; to enable co-ordination of all these activities to take place.

London Roadworks

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will name all those London roads for which his Department is responsible and which are currently undergoing roadworks; and if he will name in each case the body responsible for the works.

Mr. Norris: The following is a list of major roadworks currently being carried out on the trunk road network in London on behalf of the Secretary of State:

National Improvement Schemes

A406/M1 Junction
A406 Silver Street to Hall Lane
A406 Hanger Lane to Harrow Road
A406 East of Falloden Way to East of High Road Finchley
A40 Long Lane
A40 Widening, Long Lane to West End Road
A12 Hackney Wick to M11 Link Road
A13 West India Dock Road Junction

Maintenance and Small Improvement Schemes

M1 Junction 4-5—carriageway patching work
M1 Junction 1-5—communication cable laying
M4 Heston Road to Elevated section—overlay and partial reconstruction
M4 Heathrow Spur—overlay and partial reconstruction
A3 Hook Underpass—maintenance work
A3 Coombe Lane Flyover—replacement of expansion joints
A3 Malden Way—replacement of expansion joints on Hogsmill River Bridge
A4 Great West Road/Sutton Lane and Heston Road junction—improved right turn facilities
A4 West Cromwell Road Bridge and viaduct—replacement of expansion joints
A10 Church Street—junction improvements
A10 Bullsmore Lane to Carterhatch Lane—installation of cycle facilities
A13 New Road to Lambs Lane and Sandy Lane—resurfacing works
A13 Old Roding Bridge—bridgeworks
A13 Butcher Row/Branch Road—junction improvements
A23 Hermitage Bridge—maintenance work
A23 Foxley Lane Railway Bridge—maintenance work
A41 South of Brent Cross Flyover—drainage works
A406/A5 Staples Corner Flyover—bridge repairs

The upkeep of the trunk road network is an ongoing daily task requiring maintenance and improvement works.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which London bridges are currently closed or affected by roadworks; and which bridges are due for closure or roadworks during 1994.

Mr. Norris: None of the Secretary of State's bridges across the River Thames is currently closed or affected by road works. Roadworks are in progress on Blackfriars bridge and Lambeth bridge. I am advised by the local highway authorities that Westminster bridge, Albert bridge, Putney bridge and possibly London bridge are likely to be affected by works during the remainder of 1994.

Public Transport Liverpool

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) inspections and (b) prosecutions were carried out by the Traffic Commission in respect of public transport in the Liverpool area (i) in the two years preceding and (ii) since deregulation.

Mr. Key [holding answer 3 February 1994]: Data are not maintained for the Liverpool area alone. The north-western traffic area is the smallest area for which data may be available. Inspections are carried out by traffic examiners, responsible for such matters as drivers hours, tachographs and operator licensing, which may result in prosecution. Vehicle inspections are also carried out by vehicle examiners who are responsible for checking roadworthiness of vehicles. Offences may result in prohibitions. The police and local authority trading standards staff may also bring prosecutions in certain circumstances. Because changes have occurred in the way the figures are recorded, as well as in traffic area office boundaries, it is not possible to provide a consistent series of figures.

In the two years since the boundary change, PSV inspections and prosecutions by traffic examiners in the north-western traffic area were as follows:

Vehicles examined	4,703	5,421
Prosecutions	53	77

AGRICULTURE FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February 1994 at column 611.

Fish Stocks

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money has been made available by the European Union to improve monitoring of fish stocks; and how it will be spent.

Mr. Jack: European Union funding is available for research and development under programmes such as FAR and AIR and the Fisheries Departments participate in relevant projects. However such funds are not available for regular monitoring of fish stocks which is funded by member states.

Live Cattle (Exports)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what discussions she has had with the European Commission and the Standing Veterinary Committee concerning lifting the ban on the export of live cattle; and if she will make a statement regarding the ban on the export of live cattle;

(2) what plans her Department has to exempt highland cattle from the current ban on the export of live cattle;

(3) what representations she has received regarding the ban on the export of cattle; what analysis her Department has carried out as to the effects of the ban on the industry in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The export of live cattle over six months of age from the United Kingdom to other member states is prohibited under European Commission decision 89/469/EEC. This is because of the position on bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE). The EC Scientific Veterinary Committee in conducting a scientific evaluation of BSE in September 1993 endorsed the Community control measures on BSE. There has been no change in this position.

Officials attend the monthly meetings of the animal health standing veterinary committee in Brussels at which regular updates on the BSE situation in the United Kingdom are given. There has been no discussion recently about the lifting of the ban on the export of live cattle for breeding from the United Kingdom and the exemption of certain breeds from the restrictions. This would be a matter for consideration initially by the European Commission who are keeping the position under review and are aware of the improving disease situation in the United Kingdom. Several representations have been received on this subject and are being considered in the light of the present situation on BSE in the European Union.

Decommissioning Grant

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing boat owners have had their application for decommissioning grant accepted; how much was paid out in each case; and how many owners have withdrawn from the scheme after their applications were accepted; how much money for the first round of the decommissioning scheme is likely to be underspent; what plans she has to re-allocate that money; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: On 21 September I announced that we were to pay decommissioning grant to the owners of 142 vessels. Since that time the owners of some of those vessels have withdrawn their applications. We currently expect to pay decommissioning grant in respect of 137 vessels. As I said on 21 September, payments will average £340 per vessel capacity unit (VCU).

On the question of withdrawals and the reallocation of funds, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 3 February at column 818.

Goosanders

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many licences have been issued by her Department for the slaughter of goosanders on the Duke of Devonshire's estates in the Yorkshire dales.

Mr. Soames: Two licences have been issued for the Duke of Devonshire's estates in the Yorkshire dales to shoot a restricted number of goosanders as an aid to scaring.

Licences are not issued to cull bird populations. They are granted only where the Ministry is completely satisfied that the applicant has provided sufficient evidence of the serious damage being caused to the fishery and where other methods of non-lethal scaring have been shown to be ineffectual or impractical, not just difficult to implement.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will carry out a review of the financial situation of dairy farmers with milking herds of fewer than 40 cows, with particular reference to the problems faced when production exceeds quota; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: There are no plans to carry out such a review. However, among the amendments which the Ministry will be making to the dairy produce quotas regulations from 1 April are provisions which may be of assistance to smaller producers. In particular, we are planning to relax some of the current restrictions on the lease and sale of quota; and we will be making some technical ajustments which will provide for a more quitable redistribution of unused quota to over-quota groups of producers at the end of the quota year.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in her private office and (b) in her Department.

Mr. Jack: There are no paper shredding machines in the Minister's private office.

The purchase of paper shredding machines is a decentralised function within this Department and central stock recordse are not kept. To answer the second part of the question would require a survey covering the Department's offices throughout England, Scotland and Wales, which could be done only at a disproportionate cost.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the use of bovine somatotropin in milk production.

Mr. Soames: I refer to my reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Garston (Mr. Loyden) on 3 February 1994 at column 817.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates have been made of the increased cost of subsidies for milk production were bovine somatotropin to become freely available in a non-quota system; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: We have made no such estimate as currently the Community has no policy to dismantle current milk quota arrangements and replace it with an alternative regime. It remains the Government's objective to get rid of production quotas and to expose the dairy industry throughout the Community to the free market forces of supply and demand.

Birds (Killing)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give details of all licences issued by her Department for the killing of birds protected under the Countryside and Wildlife Act 1981 during the last three years, specifying the number and species killed.

Mr. Soames: Figures for 1993 are not yet available. The number of licences issued for birds protected under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 for the years 1990 to 1992 and the number of birds killed are as follows.

Set-aside

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes have taken place since set-aside was introduced in (a) the acreage of land cultivated, (b) the acreage of set-aside fallow land, (c) the totals of pesticides used and (d) the totals of agro-chemicals used.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The set-aside arrangements under the arable area payments scheme first came into operation at the end of 1992 in respect of the 1992-93 crop year. The total area of relevant arable crops (cereals, oilseeds, linseed and proteins) in England and Wales for 1992 and 1993 respectively was:

	hectares
1992	3,738,800
1993	[1]3,349,900

[1] Source: June census.

The area of land set-aside in England and Wales under all the options of the voluntary five-year set-aside scheme, the one-year set-aside scheme and the arable area payments scheme was:

	1992 hectares	1993 hectares
Five-year scheme	128,779	114,778
One-year scheme (applied in 1992 only)	12,192	—
Arable area payments scheme (applied in 1993 only)	—	501,120
Total area set aside	140,971	615,898

Just over 25,000 tonnes of pesticides and herbicides were used in England and Wales in 1992, but this figure includes quantities used for protected crops as well as for outdoor arable crops. The 1992 British survey of fertiliser practice indicates that the average application rate of organic fertilisers was 257 kg/ha. Comparable figures for 1993 are not yet available.

Intervention Stocks

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 25 January, Official Report, columns 131-32, when she expects to receive figures for actual expenditure in respect of each member state under the EC surplus food scheme in 1993.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 4 February 1994]: Final figures will be available after 31 March, which is the closing date for the notification of member states' expenditure under the 1993 scheme.

DEFENCE

Defence Planning

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the purpose and outcome of the recent trilateral meeting between France, Germany and the United Kingdom on co-operative defence planning.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence hosted informal discussions with his French and German counterparts in London on 26 January 1994 to share views on European security issues following the NATO summit. The discussions, which were wide-ranging and constructive, did not cover defence planning.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what cost has been incurred in providing documents to the Scott inquiry additional to that given in his reply of 8 July 1993, Official Report, column 80.

Mr. Aitken: The direct cost of the provision of documents to the Scott inquiry between 1 July 1993 and 31 January 1994 is estimated to be approximately £58,000.

Armaments (Shipping)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what safety and environmental protection precautions are taken at each of the ports used by his Department for the shipping abroad of armaments and explosives.

Mr. Aitken: Protection is afforded through the licensing of commercial ports by the Health and Safety Executive as required by the Dangerous Substances in Harbour Areas Regulations 1987. Dockyard ports and the military berth at Marchwood are also licensed in accordance with HSE standards.

Allivane International Ltd.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when payment was made by his Department to Allivane International Ltd. for the storage of ammunition at the central ammunition depot at Longtown, from 7 to 16 June 1988 to which he referred in the reply on 7 June 1993, Official Report, column 125.

Mr. Aitken: No payment was made by my Department to Allivane International Limited for the storage of ammunition at the central ammunition depot at Longtown from 7 to 16 June 1988.

Overseas Trainees

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any (a) Iraqi, (b) Iranian, (c) Indonesian and (d) Malaysian nationals are currently training at British military establishments in the United Kingdom or at overseas bases.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

(a) No
(b) No
(c) Yes
(d) Yes

It is not our practice to give details of training or numbers involved.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the information he secured from the CIA on Iraqi military capabilities, as indicated in his reply of 10 June 1993, Official Report, column 192.

Mr. Hanley: In this instance the United States Government have not been able to produce a copy of the report in a form that is releaseable to foreign Governments. My Department, however, regularly exchanges information and assessments with the US authorities, and I believe that we have a good picture of Iraqi military capabilities.

Tornado-Helicopter Accident

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking following the report from the military accident investigation, pursuant to his answer of 26 November, Official Report, column 239; and when he will publish the report.

Mr. Hanley: The RAF board of inquiry report into the investigation of the accident involving a civil helicopter and an RAF Tornado on 23 June 1993 is not yet complete. A summary of the board's findings will be published as soon as they are available. The RAF's flying procedures are kept under constant review to ensure that flying is conducted with full regard to safety and a number of possible measures to reduce further the risk of collision are under consideration. A new system of notification by civil operators engaged in pipeline inspections has also been introduced by the CAA, and is currently under review after an initial six month period.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Hanley: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

No-fly Zone (Bosnia)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Sea Harriers first took part in monitoring and enforcing the no-fly zone over Bosnia; under what operational command; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The Sea Harriers first participated in no-fly zone operations on 2 August 1993. The Sea Harriers remain under national command. Their tasking on no-fly zone operations is co-ordinated between the command of NATO's 5th allied tactical air force and the commander of the Royal Navy task group.

RFA Sir Geraint

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the United Nations is paying for the charter of RFA Sir Geraint to transport heavy equipment of the Nordic battalion from Trieste to Split; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The UN has agreed to pay a daily hire charge of £3,500 for the use of the landing ship logistic, LSL, Sir Geraint and to meet any additional costs arising as a result of the charter.

HMS Birmingham

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for the pattern of rotation of Royal Navy ships on Adriatic embargo operations of the recent alleged sabotage of HMS Birmingham.

Mr. Hanley: HMS Birmingham sailed recently for pre-deployment work in United Kingdom waters after a two-week delay and will shortly deploy for the Adriatic. HMS Coventry, the Op Grapple escort, has been made available for the NATO-WEU embargo operation until HMS Birmingham arrives in theatre.

UNPROFOR

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reservists on S type engagement in the regular forces are currently deployed with the British contingent in UNPROFOR; and if he will give a summary of the categories of reservists concerned.

Mr. Hanley: Members of the Territorial Army and the Royal Marines Reserve may volunteer to undertake short regular engagements or commissions on special terms. No one serving on that basis is currently deployed as part of the British contingent of UNPROFOR.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to seek information on the monthly additional allowances paid by countries contributing troops to the UNPROFOR mission since 28 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Having now received some information from other countries participating in the UNPROFOR mission, I am satisfied that the current arrangements for paying United Kingdom service personnel in the former Yugoslavia are both fair and justifiable and compare well with other nations. All personnel serving under United Nations auspices in Bosnia, including United Kingdom personnel, receive a United Nations allowance of $1·28 per day and a lump sum of $73·50 to cover rest and recreation: this is passed on in full by the British Government.

There are, however, inevitable differences in the pay and allowance regimes of the various participating nations. United Kingdom service personnel, for example are not paid "danger money". But their basic salary is in general significantly higher than the other nations' troops. For example the basic pay of British junior NCOs is some 70 per cent. higher than their French counterparts, some 55 per cent. higher than their Belgian counterparts and some 35 per cent. higher than their Norwegian counterparts. In addition, all United Kingdom personnel receive, throughout their career and irrespective of where they are stationed, an X-factor representing an 11·5 per cent. enhancement of basic salary which contains an element which recognises the need for them to serve on occasions under difficult and dangerous circumstances.

Troop reimbursement costs paid to nations providing personnel for United Nations deployments are intended to allow participating Governments to recover certain costs from the United Nations, including an element for the salary costs of personnel on a per capita basis. United Kingdom personnel continue to receive their full pay and allowances from the British Government, including for those deployed from Germany and proportion of their local overseas allowance at a rate of 70 per cent. for married personnel and 40 per cent. for singles, in recognition of their continuing financial commitments at home.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) purusant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 425, if he will give a breakdown of the annual receipts and costs areas they cover received by his Department from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the British contribution to UNPROFOR;

(2) what has been the cost to his Department of the British contribution to UNPROFOR in each of the last three financial years; and if he will give a breakdown;

(3) what costs have been reclaimed by his Department from the Foreign and Commonwealth office for each year since Britain contributed troops, equipment and expertise to UNPROFOR.

Mr. Hanley: UNPROFOR was established in financial year 1992-93 when the additional cost of the British contribution amounted to some £63,000,000. This amount was reimbursed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the Ministry of Defence in full in financial year 1992-93 and comprised £1 million for personnel costs; £8 million for set-up costs; £12 million for deployment; £38 million for sustainment; and £4 million for miscellaneous support and equipment. For the current financial year, it is anticipated that the additional cost will amount to some £75 million which will be reimbursed in full by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Employment Legislation

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what employment legislation is applicable to his Ministry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The Crown is bound by legislation which contains a specific provision to this effect, or where this is the necessary implication of the legislation.

Service Women (Numbers)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many women were in each of the armed forces as (a) female officers and (b) non-commissioned females in each year since 1979-80.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Year as at 1 April	Royal Naval services		Army		Royal Air Force
	Female officers	Service women	Female officers	Service women	Female officers	Service women
1979	434	3,402	884	4,933	608	5,036
1980	440	3,395	877	5,373	706	5,402
1981	481	3,590	945	5,644	755	5,518
1982	465	3,495	959	5,014	752	5,016
1983	436	3,465	933	5,211	740	4,634
1984	387	3,542	984	5,589	767	4,977
1985	374	3,332	1,009	5,762	801	5,149
1986	380	3,062	979	5,582	850	5,186
1987	403	2,980	1,115	5,491	971	5,443
1988	399	2,945	1,137	5,285	1,053	5,350
1989	407	3,064	1,186	5,465	1,099	5,277
1990	430	3,231	1,230	5,816	1,136	5,625
1991	456	3,716	1,253	6,096	1,181	6,116
1992	473	4,100	1,197	6,585	1,194	6,099
1993	495	3,991	1,170	6,424	1,139	5,698

Note: Figures prior to 1 April 1986 exclude female officers in the medical, dental, veterinary and legal specialisations as they were included in the male officer numbers.

Pregnant Women

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Ministry first received a legal challenge from a woman serving in the armed forces or formerly serving in the armed forces with regard to dismissal from the armed forces on the ground of pregnancy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The first legal challenge to the policy of compulsorily discharging service women on pregnancy was received from two former service women in June 1990. With the assistance of the Equal Opportunities Commission, the women applied to the High Court for judicial review of the decision to discharge them.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average amount paid in compensation to women who had to leave the armed forces because they became pregnant in each year since compensation payments were first made; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Hanley: Compensation payments to women discharged from the armed forces on the ground of pregnancy commenced in 1992-93, when the average amount paid was £3,462. The figure for the current financial year to date is £3,823. My answer of 21 January to the hon. Member, Official Report, col 939, should have given a total of £5,822,943 as the figure paid in compensation to women compulsorily discharged from the armed forces on grounds of pregnancy between August 1978 and August 1990. The current figure for compensation claims paid is 1,720 at a total cost of £6,234,779.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many women who left the forces because they became pregnant in each year since 1980 subsequently rejoined the forces at a lower rank; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The Royal Navy and Army do not hold this information centrally and it could not be provided without disproportionate cost. Fourteen airwomen discharged on pregnancy after 1980 rejoined the Royal Air Force at a lower rank: nine in 1991, four in 1992 and one in 1993. All these women rejoined the RAF under the local service airwoman scheme. Three of those who re-enlisted in 1991 have since transferred to regular service.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under which vote and subhead his Ministry made compensation payments to women who left the armed forces because they became pregnant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: As with all compensation paid by my Department in common law and industrial tribunal cases, payments made to pregnant ex-service women are made centrally on behalf of the three services from the second Under Secretary of State's top level budget—vote 1L2.

Creches

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 940, what estimates he has of the costs involved in providing creche facilities at military bases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I have nothing further to add to my answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 940.

Equal Opportunities Employment

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policy statement his Ministry has with regard to equal opportunities employment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: It is the Department's policy to promote equal opportunity in the field of employment for disabled civilian personnel, for personnel of all racial groups and between men and women. The level of fitness required of service personnel precludes the recruitment of disabled persons. For operational and practical reasons, female service personnel are excluded from certain areas of employment, but the positon is kept under continuous review.

Dual-use Technology

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards the development of dual-use technology.

Mr. Aitken: We favour the development of dual-use technology wherever practicable. The Defence Research Agency is currently pursuing a number of initiatives in this field including the pathfinder scheme and the development of dual-use technology centres.

Lightweight Fighter

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the objectives of the common affordable lightweight fighter programme.

Mr. Aitken: The common affordable lightweight fighter programme is sponsored by the United States Department of Defense. Its overall objective is to demonstrate, through flight testing, technologies to enable the development of a lightweight fighter aircraft of modular design. It is intended that the developed aircraft will have an advanced short takeoff and landing variant and a conventional takeoff and landing variant, sharing common designs of modules of engine, airframe and avionics. Cost reduction of design and manufacturing processes, is a major objective of the programme.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the United Kingdom to join the common affordable lightweight fighter programme; and on what terms.

Mr. Aitken: We hope to join the risk reduction phase of the United States common affordable lightweight fighter programme this summer, subject to mutual agreement of terms that are still under consideration by both countries.

NATO Soldier Modernisation Plan

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the NATO soldier modernisation plan so far as it affects United Kingdom companies and forces.

Mr. Aitken: The NATO soldier modernisation plan is a long-term concept for an integrated system of personal equipment for soldiers which is currently the subject of a study by the NATO industrial advisory group, NIAG. A number of representatives from United Kingdom companies are involved in this work. It is too early to assess the effect of the NATO soldier modernisation plan on United Kingdom companies and forces.

Long-term Costings

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to release information relating to long-term costings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The 10-year costing of the defence programme, known as the long-term costing, is designed for internal planning purposes. Approval to commit expenditure is subject to separate procedures and endorsement by Ministers as appropriate. To avoid giving a misleading impression as to the firmness of our plans we would not normally provide details of the contents of the long-term costing.

Desert Storm Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has relating to possible psychological aspects of Desert Storm syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: We have no evidence to support the existence of a medical condition peculiar to armed forces service in the Gulf conflict, so statements on its possible psychological aspects would be mere speculation.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what new information he has received in the last six months relating to Desert Storm syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has continued to receive information relating to the alleged Desert Storm syndrome over the past six months from various sources. The information and sources are too numerous to list in detail but include:

(a) the results of medical assessments on those United Kingdom service and ex-service personnel concerned that their health might have been affected by their Gulf service, who came forward in response to my offer to such personnel of investigation by armed forces medical services' specialists.

(b) information from the United States authorities about the investigations and research they are undertaking into the existence of the alleged Syndrome.

(c) correspondence from various individuals and organisations concerning claims that service and ex-service personnel who served in the Gulf are suffering unexplained illnesses.

(d) media reports of the alleged existence of Desert Storm syndrome.

To date none of the information has provided scientific evidence to support claims of the existence of a medical condition peculiar to service in the Gulf conflict.

Accommodation (Expenditure)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding expenditure on improvements and furnishings for the accommodation assigned to commanding officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence provides married quarters for all ranks of the armed forces. The scale of provision of quarters for commanding officers varies according to the rank and responsibilities of the appointment. Expenditure on improvements and furnishings of these and all quarters is limited to that which is necessary to maintain the property to an appropriate standard.

Defence Industrialists

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish all the graphical information on defence expenditure that has been shown to defence industrialists in the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: No central record is kept of the contacts with industry at all levels at which such information may have been passed. I will however make arrangements, as soon as possible, to place in the Library of the House appropriate unclassified graphical information from the chief of defence procurement's first two conferences for defence suppliers, in July 1992 and July 1993. These include illustrative indications of possible trends in certain categories of defence procurement expenditure.

Britannia Royal Naval College

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of building dog kennels at Britannia Royal Naval college, Dartmouth.

Mr. Hanley: The work undertaken to prepare the site and to house the Ministry of Defence police guard dogs at Britannia Royal Naval college, Dartmouth cost some £54,000.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 8 February 1994

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many staff in his Department are covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The majority of staff employed by the Department are eligible for statutory sick pay under the relevant provisions. There are certain employees, for example those over minimum state pension age or those employed for a period of less than three months, who are not covered. It has not proved possible to obtain detailed figures in the time available. I will, however, write to the hon. Member as soon as I can with the relevant figures.

Divorce

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 719, under what statutory authority the arrangement regarding the passage of information on divorce cases was established.

Mr. John M. Taylor: As I stated in my answer of 20 January, an arrangement was made last November between officials from my Department and from the Home Office immigration and nationality department to provide the information specified in my earlier answer.

This was an informal arrangement arrived at between officials. No legal advice was sought at the time. When the matter subsequently became known to senior officials, legal advice was sought which showed that the informal arrangement was entered into without statutory authority, and it was therefore terminated immediately.

As I stated previously, no information supplied to the Home Office has in fact been used by it. The Home Office has destroyed all notifications in its possession and has confirmed that it has neither made nor retained any separate record of the information from the courts.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Financial Services Regulations

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to monitor the effects of the new regulations governing the financial services industry.

Mr. Nelson: The Treasury's responsibilities for making rules and regulations under the Financial Services Act have been transferred to the Securities and Investments Board. It is primarily for the Securities and Investments Board to monitor the effect of its rules. The Diretor General of Fair Trading is responsible for reporting to the Treasury any significant anti-competitive effects.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Nelson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Prime Minister on 1 February 1994, Official Report, column 611.

Launderettes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he is giving to a lower rate of VAT for launderettes; and when he expects to reach a conclusion.

Sir John Cope: None. All member states within the EC have agreed that reduced rates of VAT may be applied only to the specific list of goods and services in the EC VAT rates directive. Launderette services do not appear in this list. Furthermore, the directive does not allow for the introduction of any new zero rates.

VAT (Domestic Fuel)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the fiscal return to the Exchequer during 1994-95 of the extension of VAT to domestic fuel.

Sir John Cope: The extension of VAT to domestic fuel and power is estimated to raise £950 million in 1994-95. The effect on the public sector borrowing requirement will be offset in part by increases in Government spending, announced in the last Budget, which are designed to provide help for pensioners and low income households in meeting increased fuel bills.

Departmental Head of Information

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost to the Treasury of having a facsimile machine installed at the home of his Department's head of information; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: The Treasury keeps one spare portable fax machine for contingencies such as senior officials having to work from home because of illness. This machine was temporarily installed in the home of the head of information.

Department of Telecommunications

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the reasons for differences in the way DTELS staff have been treated in respect of redundancy protection from the way PSA and Forward Catering staff were treated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government's policy is that there should be a clean break between the public and private sectors when civil service activities are privatised. There is therefore a general presumption against offering Government guarantees of redundancy entitlements to staff transferred to the private sector. In certain circumstances, however, where because of market testing or because of the climate in the relevant sector of the economy the prospects for the business were uncertain, guarantees in the event of bankruptcy have been given. Each case has been considered on its merits in consultation with the representatives of the staff concerned.

Co-operatives

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to encourage the development of retail, wholesale and manufacturing co-operatives.

Mr. Portillo: Many Government policies are directed towards encouraging the development of new businesses.

Correspondence

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the Inland Revenue's published standards for replying to taxpayers' letters in 1992-93; and to what extent those standards were met.

Mr. Dorrell: In 1992-93 the Inland Revenue standard was to reply to all letters within 28 days and to deal substantively with correspondence in at least 90 per cent. of cases. In the remaining cases the response tells the taxpayer when the letter will be dealt with. In fact, the network of tax and collection offices recorded that 99 per cent. of correspondence has been dealt with substantively within 28 days.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Nelson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to his recent question on 4 February 1994 at column 988.

Tax Concessions (Shipping)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what fiscal measures he will take to assist the competitive position of the British shipping industry following the German Government's decisions to extend tax concessions for investors in shipping companies.

Mr. Dorrell: The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his Budget that shipping companies will benefit from a special higher limit of £5 million for the amount which they can raise annually from investors under the new enterprise investment scheme. Other measures announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport on 15 December 1993 include an extension of the Government's existing support for training to cover junior officers.

Intrastat System

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action is being taken in response to the recommendation by the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee that the Central Statistical Office conducts a special review of the Intrastat system covering visible trade with other EC countries.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have informed the chairman of the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee about the work already in hand to review the operation of the Intrastat system.

In view of the importance of statistics on international trade, Customs and Excise and the Central Statistical Office have been monitoring carefully the operation of the Intrastat system since its introduction in January 1993. In the light of the results of this monitoring considerable efforts have been made, successfully, to improve the accuracy and speed of response.

Following a slow start in the early part of 1993 response rates for the first nine months, to September 1993, are now in excess of 95 per cent. by value for both arrivals and dispatches. There has also been a substantial improvement in the speed on response with 90 per cent. of the trade by value being submitted within seven weeks of the due date, an improvement of 20 weeks over the early months. Customs are working strenuously to obtain further improvements.

Discussions have also been held with Customs authorities and statistical offices in other EC countries to identify and investigate changes in the pattern of recording following the introduction of Intrastat.

Further investigations are being carried out to validate the register of traders which is being used, to make checks against data reported on the VAT forms and elsewhere, and to examine the recording of trade where the movement of goods involves intermediaries or transit through other member states.

The procedures used for deflation to constant prices and conversion to the balance of payments basis are also being checked.

A report on these investigations will be published as soon as they are complete. The statistics which have been released remain the best available estimates. If however the investigations point to revisions, these will be made at the earliest opportunity.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith) of 14 January, Official Report, column 305, if he will set out the reasons why a ban on arms sales to Indonesia would not be appropriate.

Mr. Goodlad: Our policy on arms sales to Indonesia is based on the principle that all sovereign states enjoy the right, under article 51 of the United Nations charter, to defend themselves. This is a right we claim for ourselves and it would be inconsistent and discriminatory to deny it to others.

The export of defence equipment is controlled through our domestic export licence system.

A ban on arms sales to Indonesia would not in our view bring about a change in the circumstances of East Timor.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 3 February 1994, Official Report, column 858.

Iran

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what action Her Majesty's Government are taking to raise the persecution of the Iranian Church with the Iranian Government; what information he has on the closing of churches and intimidation of Christians; and if he will urge the Iranian Government to allow people from the United Nations Human Rights Commission into Iran to investigate the situation of the Church;

(2) what action Her Majesty's Government will be taking to urge the Government of Iran to conduct a full and impartial investigation into the murder of Bishop Haik Hovsepian Mehr and to allow observers from the United Nations Human Rights Commission to take part in such investigations.

Mr. Goodlad: We and our European partners repeatedly underline to the Iranian Government the importance we attach to their human rights record, including on religious minorities.

The European Union, with our full support, expressed concern to the Iranian authorities at the reported death sentence on Reverend Mehdi Dibaj. We understand that Reverend Dibaj was subsequently released pending further investigation by the court.

We and our European partners have also told the Iranian authorities that we were disturbed at the circumstances surrounding Rev. Hovsepian's recent death. The Iranians have said that Rev. Hovsepian's death is still being investigated.

We have received several reports about the position of Christians in Iran from Christian groups in the United Kingdom and the United Nations special representative. Our embassy in Tehran also monitors the situation. We are concerned at recent reports of persecution, especially of members of "The Assemblies of God".

We have co-sponsored resolutions at the United Nations General Assembly and the United Nations Commission on Human Rights reflecting the reports of the United Nations special representative on human rights in Iran, Mr. Galindo-Pohl. We have urged the Iranian authorities to co-operate with him fully.

Paedophiles

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department is taking to persuade the Governments of (a) Sri Lanka, (b) Thailand and (c) the Philippines to charge and prosecute British paedophiles who commit offences in those countries.

Mr. Goodlad: We abhor the abuse of children wherever it occurs and take every suitable opportunity to encourage the authorities in Sri Lanka, Thailand and the Philippines in their efforts to address this problem.

EC Documents

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the European Council code of conduct on public access to Council and Commission documents.

Mr. Goodlad: We support greater openness in the Community and welcome the Council's agreement on the code of conduct, which fulfils a commitment entered into at Maastricht in 1991.

Rhinoceros Horn

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by the Governor of Hong Kong to ensure that legislation prohibiting trade in rhinoceros horn is effectively enforced, and to ensure that any existing stockpiles of horn are immediately destroyed.

Mr. Goodlad: There are no known stockpiles of rhino horn in Hong Kong.

Existing endangered species legislation in Hong Kong is as tight as it can be as regards rhino horn.

The Hong Kong Government have set up an endangered species liaison group to co-ordinate local enforcement operations and to liaise with international agencies concerned with environmental issues, including non-governmental organisations.

At the end of 1993, in response to a report by the Environmental Investigation Agency—EIA—the Agriculture and Fisheries Department of the Hong Kong Government carried out a series of searches of 58 shops. Suspected rhino hide was seized from two shops, together with a number of packets of medicine claiming to contain rhino ingredients. This enforcement activity will continue.

Malaysia

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the protocol agreed in March 1988 between the then Secretary of State for Defence and the Government of Malaysia contained figures relating amounts or percentages of civil aid to amounts of arms purchases.

Mr. Goodlad: Yes. But as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs made clear in his reply to the right hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 25 January, at column 145-46, the Secretary of State for Defence, after consultation with ministerial colleagues in London, wrote to the Malaysian Minister of Finance in June 1988 to say that aid could not be linked to defence sales. As a result, the issue was not taken up in the memorandum of understanding on defence procurement signed in September that year.

Jordan

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much debt relief was granted to Jordan over the last five years; and under what scheme this was granted.

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

Over the past five years, debts due from Jordan have been rescheduled twice. A total of £190 million has been rescheduled including debt owing to both ECGD and ODA. The reschedulings were concluded as part of general agreements between Jordan and its Paris club creditors. Some of these debts were rescheduled over an extended period under Paris club terms available for lower-middle income countries. Interest is charged at market rates on ECGD-insured debts but no interest is charged on rescheduled ODA debts.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the Royal Commission on Historical Monuments (England).

Mr. Brooke: The members currently appointed to the Royal Commission for the Historical Monuments of England are:

War Crimes Act 1991

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what is the latest position regarding action under the War Crimes Act 1991; and whether any charges are likely to be brought during 1994.

The Attorney-General: The Metropolitan police war crimes unit is still actively pursuing its inquiries under the War Crimes Act 1991. Those inquiries are not yet complete and the question of a possible prosecution cannot be considered until they are concluded.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Deregulation

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which organisations were consulted by her Department, on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document, "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Jack: Each of the task force recommendations agreed or agreed in principle by the Government has been or will be the subject of appropriate consultation with interested parties.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the United Kingdom Government require a tenant farmer to obtain the consent of the landlord in order to dispose of the milk quota allocated to him.

Mr. Jack: The EC regulations establish a link between quota and land. Landlords therefore have a clear interest in any quota apportionment—and its potential disposal—and are required to give their consent. A refusal to give this consent will necessitate the appointment of an arbitrator to decide the apportionment for the parties concerned.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what account she has taken of the Advocate General's view expressed during the Herbert Wachauf case on milk quota 5/88 (1989) concerning the effect of article 40(3) of the EC treaty on the requirement for a tenant farmer to obtain the consent of his landlord, if the imposition of that requirement having regard to the particular situation of the tenant farmer, would result in discrimination between producers.

Mr. Jack: We have taken note of the judgment of the European Court in case 5/88-Herbert Wachauf. In our opinion this case does not give rise to any suggestion of discrimination in our implementation of the EC milk quotas regulations.

Foresty

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if she will list all land currently owned by the Forestry Commission in (a) Humberside, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) South Yorkshire and (d) West Yorkshire;

(2) which of the Forestry Commission's holdings in (a) Humberside, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) South Yorkshire and (d) West Yorkshire are currently earmarked for sale.

Mr. Jack: The Foresty Commission is preparing a list of all its woodlands in Humberside, North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire and West Yorkshire, and this will identify those which the Commission is currently selling or planning to sell. I shall send a copy to the hon. Member and I shall also arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the subjects on which her Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by her to an executive agency.

Mr. Jack: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to questions on day-to-day operational matters and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in the agencies' framework documents.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements she is making in existing English ESAs to facilitate new public access to the countryside.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As part of our programme to implement the EC's agri-environment regulation—Reg. 2078/92 EEC—I have laid before Parliament today regulations to amend section 18 of the Agriculture Act 1986 to enable me—and, as appropriate, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland —to introduce arrangements to encourage farmers to provide new public access opportunities in ESAs.

I shall be laying before Parliament tomorrow orders introducing a new voluntary access tier into each of the first round ESA schemes—the Broads, Somerset levels and moors, Pennine Dales, West Penwith and South downs. In addition, I shall shortly be laying orders introducing parallel arrangements into the other existing English ESA schemes—Breckland, Clun, North Peak, Suffolk River valleys, Test valley, South West peak, Exmoor, Lake district, South Wessex downs, North Kent marshes, Avon valley. Information about the new access tier will be made available to farmers in all existing English ESAs from tomorrow and farmers will be able to enter into access agreements with the Minister after the orders come into force.

Arable Areas Payments Scheme

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many landowners in England are receiving annual payments under the arable area payments scheme in the latest financial year of (a) up to £100,000, (b) between £100,000 and £500,000, (c) between £500,000 and £1,000,000 and (d) over £1,000,000; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 11 January 1994, Official Report, column 55.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in how many cases payments to farmers and landowners under the arable area payments scheme have been withheld or recovered in England; what is the amount of money withheld or recovered in each case; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Every case in which payments may be withheld or recovered is examined very carefully and applicants have an opportunity to comment before a final decision is taken. This means that it is only possible to provide very provisional figures at this stage. Over 100 payments have so far been reduced or withheld entirely, but there are further cases still under consideration. These figures exclude penalties for late applications and adjustments made following corrections notified by the applicant under the special arrangements which applied in 1993 for dealing with genuine errors. It is not yet possible to give a precise figure for amounts of money withheld because individual cases vary considerably.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is her Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The Ministry has internal disciplinary procedures which provide a range of penalties applicable in cases of misconduct. These are subject to regular review. Dismissal would normally apply where the case amounts to gross misconduct. An officer found guilty of fraud could expect to be dealt with accordingly.

Identification of Animals

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how the Government intend to implement EC directive 92/102 on the registration of holdings and the identification of animals; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Proper identification of animals and proper record keeping by farmers is essential if we are to protect our high animal health status and I am pleased to announce that I have decided on the best way forward on the identification and registration of cattle, pigs, sheep and goats.

The United Kingdom fought successfully in negotiations in Brussels for a commonsense approach to animal identification. We pressed hard for a system that would be the most efficient and at the same time the least burdensome to farmers and we achieved the best possible result.

The EC directive requires brief details of all cattle, pig, sheep and goat holdings to be held on a central register. This has been completed for cattle, is under way for pigs and will be completed by the 1 January 1995 deadline for sheep and goats.

Each calf born on or after 1 July 1994 will have to have one ear tag inserted bearing that animal's unique number. The current requirement for inserting the tag in non-dairy calves within seven days of birth will be relaxed to the 30 days set in the directive. Officials are discussing, with the ear tag manufacturers, how to control the issue of tags to ensure there is no duplication of numbers and the least disruption to the way farmers buy their tags.

The directive also allows each member state to devise its own arrangements for the movement of pigs within their own country. We have told the Commission that we shall base ours on the Movement and Sale of Pigs Order 1975. Pigs going for export will have to be ear tagged or tattooed to show the country and herd of origin.

The arrangements for sheep and goats are not due to be implemented until 1 January 1995. However, the sheep industry representatives have already said they would like to see similar requirements introduced as for pigs. Agriculture Department officials will be consulting them shortly about the details.

The more detailed record-keeping requirements for cattle were implemented by the Bovine Animals (Identification, Marking and Breeding Records) (Amendment) Order 1993. The minor changes required will be introduced shortly and those for sheep and goats on 1 January 1995.

Agriculture Department officials will be writing to all those who took part in the consultation exercise setting out the new arrangements in more detail. Copies of this letter will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government have reviewed the operations of the Movement and Sale of Pigs Order 1975; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have been conducting a deregulatory review of the Movement and Sale of Pigs Order 1975. It is clear that the industry accepts the need for this order to protect the high health status of the national herd. However, we have decided to streamline its operation to reduce the burden on farmers.

We will be allowing farmers to issue their own documents, currently issued by local authorities, for the movement of pigs off their own farms. The self-issued documents, which will replace the existing licences, will also act as the movement document required under the Animal Identification and Registration Directive, so that farmers will not have to fill in two pieces of paper to move one pig.

We will also be scrapping the requirement to mark pigs going to slaughter, other than swill-fed pigs, where we will be simplifying the mark to a single red line to allow for easier marking on the farm.

I believe that these changes will enable the order to operate more efficiently while at the same time maintaining the high level of protection for the health status of our pig industry.

Agriculture Department officials will be writing shortly to all those who took part in the consultation exercise setting out the new arrangements in more detail. Copies of this letter will be placed in the Library.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the latest figures for the percentage of young people aged 16 to 19 years who are (a) in full-time education, (b) in training schemes, (c) employed and (d) unemployed.

Miss Widdecombe: Latest estimates from the summer 1993 labour force survey for Great Britain show that of all 16 to 19-year-olds 50 per cent. were in full-time education; 7 per cent. were employed in Government employment and training programmes; 26 per cent. were otherwise employed and not in full-time education; and 11 per cent. were ILO unemployed and not in full-time education.

Dock and Port Areas (Deaths)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many deaths in dock or port areas in each of the last five years have led to ongoing or completed prosecutions by the Health and Safety Executive; what have been the outcomes of the completed prosecutions; who were the named defendants in the cases; and what were the penalties imposed in those cases where the defendants were convicted.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

Fatal injuries occuring within the docks and harbours industry reported under the reporting of injuries, diseases and dangerous occurences regulations 1985 (RIDDOR), between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1993

Year	Number of deaths	Of which leading to prosecution	Total informations laid	Convictions

Upper Limb Disorders

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate his Department has made of the incidence of work-related upper limb disorders; what discussions his Department has had with the TUC and the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers about their work on these disorders; what action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Evidence from a supplementary questionnaire to the 1990 labour force survey indicates an annual prevalence of around 117,000 self-reported cases of upper limb disorders caused by work. Health and Safety Executive—HSE—officials have attended meetings of a TUC working group to discuss work-related upper limb disorders, and a conference in July 1993 organised jointly by the TUC and the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers. Guidance for employers on prevention of upper limb disorders was published by HSE in 1990, and a four-year "Lighten the Load" campaign to raise awareness of musculoskeletal harm was launched in 1991. An action programme to tackle upper limb disorders agreed by the Health and Safety Commission in December 1993 is now underway.

Petrol Service Station Employees

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what legal remedies are available to employees of petrol service stations whose employers deduct from their hourly wages the cost of stock or petrol stolen by third parties.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Wages Act 1986 makes it unlawful for an employer to deduct more than 10 per cent. from the gross wages of retail workers because of cash shortages or stock deficiencies. Where a deduction is in breach of the Wages Act workers may complain to an industrial tribunal; where it is in breach of their contract of employment they may take action in the civil courts.

Health and Safety at Work

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has for introducing new measures to improve the Health and Safety at Work etc., Act 1974.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have no such proposals. However, at the Government's invitation the Health and Safety Commission is currently undertaking a review, which builds on their long-standing work of rationalising and modernising all health and safety legislation. In response to a request from the Commission, the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill includes a clause designed to facilitate the removal of outdated and unnecessary health and safety legislation. The aim is to achieve a more effective health and safety regime. The commission will report back on the findings of its review in April.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library the heads of agreement between Northern Ireland Electricity and Scottish Power on the proposed interconnector.

Mr. Tim Smith: No. The agreement forms the basis of a commercial arrangement between two private sector companies.

Water Executive Depot, County Antrim

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future provision of a new water executive depot in Larne, County Antrim.

Mr. Tim Smith: The Department of the Environment does not intend to proceed with a replacement of the Larne depot at this time.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Sir John Wheeler: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in how many cases payments to farmers and landowners under the arable area payments scheme have been withheld or recovered in Northern Ireland; what is the amount of money withheld or recovered in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: To date there have been four cases where payments were withheld under the arable area payments scheme. The amounts involved were £3,177·95, £3,444·25, £772·98 and £77·08. Further cases are under consideration.

One late application valued at £121·76 was also rejected and one payment totalling £361·92 was recovered.

PRIME MINISTER

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

The Prime Minister: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) of 25 January, Official Report, column 152, if he will now make it his policy to give substantive answers to parliamentary questions on his testimony given at the Scott inquiry on 17 January.

The Prime Minister: No. While Lord Justice Scott's inquiry continues, it would be inappropriate to comment substantively on any of the evidence which has so far been taken.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what powers Lord Justice Scott has to compel the attendance as witnesses before his inquiry of people who are neither civil servants nor ministers.

The Prime Minister: Lord Justice Scott does not have powers to compel people to appear before his inquiry. I have made it clear that if he feels a change in his powers or terms of reference is needed, the Government will be ready to consider that.

Lockerbie Air Crash

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the possible trial of Libyan suspects relating to Pan Am 103 taking place in The Hague, under a Scottish judge, with Scottish court rules.

The Prime Minister: The Government's policy is to obtain justice for the 270 victims of the Lockerbie disaster. Part of this is to ensure the appearance for trial in a United Kingdom or United States court of those accused of the Lockerbie bombing. The two accused would receive a fair trial in Scotland. There is therefore no need to establish a special court to try them in The Hague. The Libyan Government should comply in full with Security Council resolutions 731, 748 and 883 without further delay.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 8 February.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 8 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Biwater Group

Mr. Burden: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the public engagements of Ministers held in connection with the Biwater group of companies since 1983.

The Prime Minister: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Charterline Pilot Scheme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 406, what proportion of the representations he has received on the Charterline pilot scheme have been (a) favourable and (b) critical.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 February 1994]: Recent surveys of Charterline users show that 87 per cent. are happy with the Charterline service and 93 per cent. would use the Charterline service again. I have received one representation critical of Charterline.

Pergau Dam

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors led him to make a decision at Prime Ministerial level to over-rule an accounting officer in the case of the Pergau Dam.

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 3 February 1994]: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to what my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has already said to the House on this matter and to my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's answer of 25 January 1994 at column 145-46 to the right hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham).

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Know-How Fund

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to extend the know-how fund to other countries in the near future.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The know-how fund will be extended to the former Yugoslav republic of Macedonia with effect from the beginning of the financial year 1994-95.

TRANSPORT

Great Western Line

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the original target dates for the Great Western line franchise (a) to begin running as a shadow franchise and (b) in the private sector; and what are the current expected dates for these stages.

Mr. Freeman: The Great Western main line should begin operating as a shadow franchise from 1 April, which has always been the target date. It will be for the franchising director to determine when this franchise should be offered to the private sector.

Ports

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the arrangements for the policing of ports following privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Many harbour authorities have statutory powers to employ their own constables but few do so. On privatisation, the statutory powers used by the former undertakers are transferred to the new owners. The Department does not intervene in ports' decisions about their policing arrangements.

Seamen's Agencies

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the licensing requirements for seamen's agencies; and on how many occasions licences have been refused or revoked since 1973.

Mr. Norris: Seamen's agencies may be licensed in accordance with section 110 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1894. This section permits the Department of Transport to make the licence subject to such terms and conditions as are considered appropriate. Prior to 1988 the Department refused licences to commercial agencies and the only licence holders were seven Merchant Navy establishment administration—MNEA—offices, and two unions. No licences have been refused since 1990 but two were revoked in 1993.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 604, what statements and press notices were made and issued on the channel tunnel rail link in November 1989; and if he will set out the information in the same form as his earlier answer.

Mr. Freeman: The information is as follows:

3 November 1989

Cecil Parkinson in response to a question from Jonathan Aitken MP

"I am greatly encouraged by the clear indications that I have had from the private sector that Channel Tunnel Rail services, including a new Channel Tunnel Rail Link can be financed commercially and that . . . the new link can still be brought into operation by 1988."

I regret that this item was not discovered during the search which was made in response to the hon. Member's earlier question.

British Rail Board Pay

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of British Rail board members pay was linked to performance in July 1992 and July 1993.

Mr. Freeman: In the year to 31 March 1992 BR executive board members participated in a bonus scheme with a potential maximum of 25 per cent. of annual remuneration. Percentage payments made in 1992 were in the range of 10 per cent. to 11 per cent. of remuneration. In the next year the potential maximum was 40 per cent., and payments were 22·5 per cent.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Norris: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

British Rail, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Doncaster-based British Rail employees were employed by each division of British Rail on 1 January (a) five years ago and (b) 10 years ago.

Mr. Freeman: As at 1 January 1994 the number of Doncaster-based British Rail employees by division was as follows:

	Number
Central Services	391
Trainload Freight	449
Inter City	547
British Transport Police	17
Regional Railways	258
BR Maintenance Ltd.	570
National Stores Centre	335
Total	2,567

Information for the previous years is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Rail Season Tickets

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Rail season ticket holders have, since January 1993, (a) had the validity of their season tickets extended for days when there is no effective service, (b) been offered discounts on the renewal of their season tickets to compensate them for poor service in the previous year and (c) made use of the season ticket discount offered.

Mr. Freeman: Information on season ticket extensions is not held centrally. Decisions on extensions are made by local BR management according to local circumstances. I understand that 93,182 passengers have been offered and have accepted discounts on renewal of their season tickets since January 1994.

Merchant Navy (Homosexuality)

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 828, whether he will introduce legislation this year to decriminalise homosexuality in the Merchant Navy.

Mr. Norris: The Government will bring forward the necessary legislation at the earliest convenient opportunity, taking account of the many other pressures on the legislative timetable.

Pollution Incidents

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what action his Department is to take following the recent pollution incidents in North Wales, Lancashire and Cumbria caused by the Norwegian company Stolt-Nielson;

(2) what is the cost of the clean-up operation in North Wales, Lancashire and Cumbria following the pollution incident caused by the Norwegian company Stolt-Nielson.

Mr. Norris: I have been asked to reply.

I refer to my answer to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) on 26 January 1994 at column 245.

The marine pollution control unit has discussed the circumstances of this incident with the Stolt-Nielson group. The group has agreed to settle claims for the reasonable costs incurred by local authorities and other organisations involved in cleaning up the pollution and treating affected birds. Preliminary estimates of these are of the order of £100,000.

British Rail Employees

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Rail employees deal with the public in the course of their work; and how many of these wear name badges.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail employs approximately 22,000 retail staff. This figure includes all station and terminal staff and directly employed on-board train staff who come into contact with the public. All staff who have face-to-face contact with the public are required to wear name badges.

London Transport Board Pay

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of London Transport board members' pay was linked to performance in July 1992 and in July 1993.

Mr. Norris: Only the full-time executive members of the London Transport Board are covered by performance pay arrangements. Non-pensionable bonuses for these members are paid retrospectively, based on performance in the previous financial year. In the financial years 1992-93 and 1993-94 the bonuses paid represented on average additions of, respectively, 14 per cent. and 27 per cent. to the basic salary for the relevant year of the members concerned. The increase between the two years is partly explained by an increase in the maximum bonus payable under the bonus scheme from 25 per cent. to 40 per cent. of basic salary.

Rail Track Record Displays

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of British Rail stations displayed track record displays of punctuality and reliability as at July 1993.

Mr. Freeman: Track record displays appear at 231 of BR's 2,482 stations. Figures for punctuality and reliability performance are available on request from all staffed stations.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 506, regarding existing contracts with his Department, if he will publish the terms of reference for each contract.

Mr. Norris: The existing contracts awarded over the past five years contain a wide variety of types of work. They will not normally be let against simple terms of reference, but if the hon. Member has a particular interest in any one of the cases listed in my answer of 31 January, I will be happy to respond.

Tankers

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many reported incidents of tankers breaching areas to be avoided around Shetland there have been since 5 January; and if he will give details of each incident.

Mr. Norris: The Department has received one report since the area to be avoided off the Shetland Islands was extended on 28 November 1993. That report related to an 87,000 grt Singapore-registered tanker spotted on 30 January, when the ship was approximately 1 km south of Sumburgh head, travelling in a south-westerly direction. The Department has asked the Singapore authorities, as the responsible flag state, to investigate the incident.

Consultancies

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 506, regarding prospective contracts with his Department, if he will publish the terms of reference for each contract.

Mr. Norris: Consultancy contracts are not let against simple terms of reference, they are let taking account of specification and conditions which need to be established to understand the scope of the work involved. If the hon. Member has a particular interest in any one of the cases listed in my answer of 31 January, I will be happy to respond.

Aircraft Landing Charges

Mr. Kenneth Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 385, on aircraft landing charges, if he will provide figures on the same basis but for summer off-peak rates.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The information requested, which has been provided by the CAA, is shown in the tables:

Aircraft type	Maximum take off weight	Seats	Passengers at 80 per cent. load factor
747-200B	378	374	299
BAe 146-2	43	84	67

Note:
1. Charges are based on the assumption that the aircraft concerned meet ICAO chapter 3 noise standards and qualify for any noise rebates available at the airports concerned. The preceeding aircraft assumptions also apply.
2. All landing charges include Aerodrome Navigation Services charges.
3. All passenger charges include security charges and are based on charges for international services.

ENVIRONMENT

Deregulation

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which organisations were consulted by his Department, on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Gummer: Decisions were taken on the task forces' 130 recommendations for my Department in the normal way; interested bodies have been or will be consulted as appropriate.

Sewage

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to improve sewage treatment and disposal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom has the highest percentage connection rate to sewers among our European Community partners and is among the leaders regarding the provision of sewage treatment.

Improvements will result from the sewerage undertakers' large investment programmes to maintain and replace their assets and to meet statutory requirements.

Audit Commission

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the cost of the Audit Commission was for each year since 1989; what is the cost for the current year; what assessment he has made of performance and the results of the Audit Commission; and what value for money the Audit Commission has achieved.

Mr. Baldry: The Audit Commission has no direct cost to the Exchequer. The audit of local authorities and health service bodies and the undertaking of value for money studies is financed by fees from publicly funded bodies.

The operating costs of the commission have been as follows:

	£ million
1988-89	28·4
1989-90	33·9
1990-91	46·4
1991-92	61·6
1992-93	74·3
1993-94	[1]76·6

[1] Estimated.

NB. 1991-92 was the first full year that the commission appointed auditors to NHS bodies.

In 1992 the commission was subject to a financial management review by its sponsors: the Department of the Environment, the Department of Health and the Welsh Office.

Copies of the report of this review, which was published on 14 January 1993, and of the commission's annual reports and accounts are available from the Library.

Housing Act 1985

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many mortgage indemnity agreements he has approved under section 442 of the Housing Act 1985;

(2) how many local authorities have agreed to indemnify mortgages under section 442 of the Housing Act 1985; and how many properties have been indemnified.

Sir George Young: The Secretary of State approved a standard form of mortgage indemnity agreement in October 1988. This superseded earlier approved forms of agreement.

In the period 1 April 1986 to 30 September 1993, 48 English local authorities reported entering into mortgage indemnity agreements. The estimated total number of mortgages indemnified by local authorities during this period is some 2,500.

Building Regulations

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to know the outcome of the review of the extension of part M of the building regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend, the Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden) on 20 January 1994, Official Report, column 840.

Rural Development Commission

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the current major issues being examined by each department devoted to rural strategic policy planning in the Rural Development Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Rural Development Commission's strategy directorate has three policy branches which are currently considering the following major issues affecting or likely to affect rural areas of England:

(i) Rural Economy

The relationship between structural change in traditional rural industries and the need for new and diverse economic activity in rural areas.

(ii) Rural Services

Policies and practices affecting the provision of local services in rural areas and accessibility to them.

The impact of living in rural areas on particular groups of people eg women, young children, the elderly and the handicapped and their accessibility to jobs and services.

Policies affecting the voluntary sector in rural areas

(iii) Housing and Planning

The provision of affordable housing in rural areas.

Planning policy and development plans.

The needs of rural dwellers and rural businesses within a strategy for sustainable development.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many posts there are in the Rural Development Commission devoted to strategic rural policy planning; and if he will list the departments and their responsibilities and the grades of those posts.

Mr. Atkins: The Rural Development Commission has a small strategy directorate in which 11 staff are directly concerned with analysis and advice on strategic policy issues affecting rural communities and businesses in England. They are the Director, civil service grade 5, and three policy branches dealing with issues affecting

(a) the Rural Economy: (1 Grade 7, 1 HEO, 1 AO)
(b) Rural Services: (1 Grade 7, 1 HEO, 1 EO, 1 AO)
(c) Housing and Planning: (1 Grade 7, 1 HEO, 1 AO)

Local Government Finance

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the local authorities in receipt of standing spending assessment reduction grant for 1994-95 and (b) what is the amount in each case.

Mr. Baldry: The inforamtion requested was provided in special grant report (No. 9) laid before the House on 27 January 1994.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what method the Government use to assess the weight of public opinion when considering whether or not to hold a public inquiry;

(2) what criteria are used by his department when assessing whether or not a project should be subject to a public inquiry;

(3) what he considers to be a sufficient number of complaints to make a subject worthy of a public inquiry.

Mr. Baldry: In deciding whether to hold a public local planning inquiry, each case is considered on its merits. All the relevant issues, including the complexity of a case and the weight of public opinion or complaints arising, are taken into account.

Hazardous Wastes

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the United Kingdom will ratify the UNEP Basel convention on the control of transboundary movements of hazardous wastes and their disposal.

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom deposited its instrument of ratification for the Basel convention on 7 February. This means that the United Kingdom will become a party to the convention on 8 May. The EC will also become a party on 8 May.

The convention provides a framework for states to control shipments of hazardous waste. where these do occur, the onus is on the exporting state to ensure environmentally sound management of the wastes. Shipments are not allowed between parties and non-parties without specific agreements. Parties may ban imports of waste.

The Waste Shipments Regulation (259/93/EEC), which incorporates the obligations of the Basel convention, will apply on 6 May. The regulation will enable the United Kingdom to control more effectively waste imports and exports. The regulation covers shipments destined for the recovery operations, as well as those going for final disposal.

The United Kingdom is firmly committed to the objectives of the Basel convention. We have been making voluntary financial contributions to the running of the convention each year since 1990.

Planning Conditions

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers he has to intervene to establish legal planning conditions in a dispute arising from amended planning permission expiring under the Town and Country Planning Act 1991.

Mr. Baldry: The Secretary of State has the power to call in planning applications—including applications to vary conditions previously attached to a planning permission—for his own determination by virtue of section 77 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990. The Secretary of State also has the duty to determine appeals made under section 78 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

In exceptional circumstances, the Secretary of State has the power to make orders to revoke or modify planning permissions or to discontinue any use of land.

Senior Regional Directors

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will name the persons already appointed to the posts of senior regional directors, consequent to his decision to establish multi-departmental teams together with their biographical details and occupational experience; and what is the period of each appointment.

Mr. Baldry: The information requested by the hon. Member is as follows:

Eastern:	John Turner
East Midlands:	Mark Lanyon
Merseyside:	John Stoker
North East:	Pamela Denham
North West:	Marianne Neville-Rolfe
South East:	Gillian Ashmore
South West:	Brian Leonard
West Midlands:	David Ritchie
Yorkshire and Humberside:	Jeremy Walker

Biographical notes:

Eastern

John Turner has been Deputy Chief Executive of the Employment service since 1989. He joined the Civil service in 1967, and after 14 years in the Department of Trade and Industry and its predecessor Departments working on industry sponsorship at home and abroad, he trasferred to the Department of Employment group and worked on training polices and programmes in the then Manpower Services Commission. He then served as Principal Private Secretary to Lord Young and Sir Norman Fowler and was then Head of Small Firms and Tourism Division.

East Midlands

Mark Lanyon has been DTI's Regional Director for Yorkshire and Humberside since April 1993. He is a graduate of the University of St. Andrews, a chartered engineer and a member of the British Institute of Management. He joined the Civil Service in 1963, and has served in the DTI's South West Regional Office, and from 1982-85 as Regional Director in the West Midlands office. His career also includes working on programmes designed to spread best practice in advanced manfacturing technology and managerial methods, computer aided engineering, advanced robotics and manfacturing processes. Between 1990 and 1993, he was Assistant Director of Consumer Affairs at the Office of Fair Trading.

Merseyside
John Stoker has been Director of the Merseyside Task Force since 1992. He was educated at King Edward's School, Birmingham and Brasenose College, Oxford. He joined the Department of the Environment in 1973. He has served in the Yorkshire and Humberside Regional Office, based in Leeds (dealing with housing affairs), and in London on housing policy and rates reform. He also served as a Civil Service Selection Board assessor and in the Cabinet Office. Since 1985 he has headed Divisions responsible for departmental organisation, housing (Estate Action), the preparation of the 1990 Environment White Paper (Our Common Inheritance) and the coordination of the department's financial programmes.

North East
Pamela Denham has been Regional Director for the Department of Trade and Industry in the North East since 1990. She was educated at Central Newcastle High School, and holds a doctorate in Physics from King's College, London. She joined the Civil Service in 1967, and has spent much of her career working in policy related to Industry—including international negotiations, Government assistance for research and development, and running programmes to encourage the application of best practice and new technology. She led the Quality Design and Education Division of the DTI from 1985-89, before a secondment in the Management and Development Group at the Cabinet Office.

North West
Marianne Neville-Rolfe is at present Chief Executive of the Civil Service College and Director of the Cabinet Office Top Management Programme. She was educated at St. Mary's Convent, Shaftesbury, and Oxford University. After seven years with the Confederation of British Industry including two years in Brussels, she joined the Department of Trade and Industry in 1973. Her jobs there have included dealing with selective financial assistance to industry, the promotion of major export projects, and most recently, responsibility for policy towards the Single European Market, including ensuring that business was fully informed of the implications and opportunities.

South East
Gillian Ashmore is currently on secondment from the Department of Transport to the British Railways Board working on railway privatisation. She joined the Civil Service in 1971 and has worked variously in the Departments of the Environment, Transport, Employment and Trade and Industry. On the Transport side, she has worked mainly in the public transport field. In the latter two Departments she was Deputy Director of the Enterprise and Deregulation Unit. Mrs. Ashmore has also been a non-executive director of P & O European Transport.

South West
Brian Leonard is Regional Director for the Departments of Environment and Transport in Newcastle. He was educated at Dr. Challoner's Grammar School in Amersham and the London School of Economics. He joined the Civil Service in 1974 and has worked in divisions dealing with the Government's public expenditure and private rented sector housing, and on secondment to a major housing association in London. In 1986/87, he served as Assistant Private Secretary to two Secretaries of State and in 1987/88 spent a year in North America on a Hubert Humphrey Fellowship to the University of Minnesota. On return he served as a Regional Controller for Housing in the London Regional Office and as head of the division responsible for local authority housing finance policy in England.

West Midlands
David Ritchie is Regional Director of the Departments of Environment and Transport in Newcastle. He was educated at Manchester Grammar School and St. John's College, Cambridge. He joined the Ministry of Transport in 1970 and he has had two spells in the joint Environment and Transport North West regional Office. He has also served in London dealing with Water Legislation and Housing association Policy.

Yorkshire and Humberside
Jeremy Walker has been regional Director of the Employment Department in Yorkshire and Humberside for the last five years, and leader of the Leeds and Bradford City Action Team since 1990. He joined the Department of Employment in 1971 after graduating from Birmingham University. He has also worked in the Cabinet office; on an exchange programme with the Australian Government; and in the Manpower Services Commission, where he headed up the Community Programme and the New Job Training Scheme during the 1980s.

The duration of these appointments will be up to three years in the first instance.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the job descriptions of the newly-appointed senior regional directors for urban regeneration; what variation there is between areas; and what specific duties will apply to that of the director for London.

Mr. Baldry: The duties of the new senior regional directors will be to implement Government policies in the English regions on behalf of the Department of Environment, Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Employment—training, enterprise and education directorate—and Department of Transport; to ensure that the development of Government policies and programmes for the English regions are informed by local views and experience; and to contribute to Government policy formation for the regions. These duties will apply to all directors, including London, although the emphasis given to particular policies and programmes will differ from region to region to take account of local circumstances.

Housing

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 439, whether sections 59 and 60 of the Housing Act 1985 are also applicable before any local authority duties arise for securing accommodation for persons asked to leave by family or relatives.

Sir George Young: Section 65 of the Housing Act 1985 provides that where a local housing authority is satisfied that a homeless applicant has a priority need and is not intentionally homeless the authority must secure accommodation for him.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 439, if he will list the number of representations received about the operation of part III of the Housing Act 1985 which specifically referred to the House of Lords' decision in the case of Din v. London Borough of Wandsworth and to the operation of section 63 of the Act.

Sir George Young: The proposals in our consultation paper "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies" have not been formulated in response to specific representations.

Local Authority Tenants

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the companies commissioned in 1992-93 by his Department to carry out polling and market research of the views of council tenants; and if he will list the areas of research, the questionnaires used and report the results of the research.

Sir George Young: No companies were specifically commissioned to do so in 1992-93, but a number of the continuous general surveys carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, which provide housing information for my Department, include council tenants in the sample. Examples of these are:

The Survey of English Housing;
The Family Expenditure Survey;
The Omnibus Survey;
The General Household Survey.

All my Department's published research reports are placed in the House of Commons Library. Among those published in 1993 dealing with local authority housing are:

Crime Prevention on Council Estates;
Priority Estates Project Costs Effectiveness Study: Summary of Findings;
An Evaluation of Estate Based Housing Management;
An Evaluation of the First Year Experience of the Local Authority Reports to Tenants Regime.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of local authority tenants received a personal copy of an annual report about standards of local authority housing management performance in 1992-93.

Sir George Young: Section 167 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 requires local authorities to send every tenant an annual report on their housing management performance.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of local authority tenants had at July 1993 transferred to housing action trusts.

Sir George Young: Figures are not available for the number of tenants that have transferred to housing action trusts. However, the proportion of local authority dwellings which had transferred to housing action trusts at July 1993 was about 0·1 per cent.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of council house tenants had transferred their tenancy to a new landlord at July 1993.

Sir George Young: Between April 1988 and July 1993 nearly 119,000 dwellings were transferred out of local authority ownership as a result of large-scale transfers—LSVTs—tenants' choice and small-scale transfers. This represents about 2·75 per cent. of the council stock at 1 April 1988. A further 3,500 dwellings have transferred since July and another 25,000 should transfer by the end of March this year. The Department does not record the number of individual tenancies transferred to new landlords.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new rights were introduced for council tenants between July 1992 and July 1993 to simplify and strengthen their ability to get minor repairs affecting health, safety or crime prevention carried out by their landlord.

Sir George Young: The existing right to repair scheme was introduced under the Housing Act 1985 and came into effect on 1 January 1986. The new right to repair scheme is being introduced under the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 in place of the current scheme, from 1 April 1994. The new scheme will be more effective in ensuring that tenants get certain small urgent repairs affecting their health, safety or security, done quickly and at no expense to them.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of local authority tenants enjoyed delegated management as at July 1993.

Sir George Young: By July 1993, the Secretary of State for the Environment had approved 71 management agreements for tenant management organisations on local authority estates. These cover approximately 35,000 homes, representing about 0·9 per cent. of local authority dwellings.

Paignton Zoo

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make public his decision upon the recommendation of his inspector in respect of Paignton zoo under his reference SW/P/5183 and local planning authority reference 92/1161/0A.

Mr. Baldry: These proposals for a superstore and associated developments raise some complex issues. As soon as the inspector's report is received, the Secretary of State will write to the parties indicating his proposed timescale for the decision. The outcome will be made public at the earliest opportunity.

Housing Benefit Subsidy

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the total amount of housing benefit subsidy otherwise payable to local authorities in England which was clawed back by negative entitlement under the housing revenue account subsidy formula in the last year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: The total amount of rent rebates paid to local authority tenants for 1992-93 was £3,477 million of which £2,982 million was funded directly by housing revenue account subsidy. The details appear in the table.

	1992-93 outturn £ million
Gross rent rebates	3,477
Housing subsidy negative entitlements	–495
Rebate element of HRA subsidy	2,982

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the change in the annual level of United Kingdom carbon dioxide emissions between the year 2000 and 2012, on the basis of current policies.

Mr. Atkins: It is not possible to estimate future changes in United Kingdom carbon dioxide emissions in 2000 and 2012 precisely. The analysis published in "Climate Change—the UK Programme" draws on the range of scenarios in energy paper 59. These suggest on the basis of past trends that United Kingdom emissions in 2000 could be between 3 million tonnes of carbon below and 19 million tonnes of carbon above the 1990 level; and in 2012 between 15 and 80 million tonnes of carbon higher than in 1990. The measures in the United Kingdom's programme should reduce emissions in 2000 by some 10 million tonnes of carbon, but it is not yet possible to assess what effect emissions reduction measures could have by 2012.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which major new policy commitments and initiatives announced in "Sustainable Development: the United Kingdom Strategy" have not already appeared in previous Government documents and ministerial speeches.

Mr. Atkins: The Government did not delay practical commitment to sustainable development until we were ready to publish our strategy document. Many policies were therefore well in place by 25 January. However, among the new announcements made in the strategy are the Government's panel on sustainable development, a United Kingdom round table on sustainable development and a citizens' environment initiative. Each chapter in sections 3 and 4 contains a summary of the way forward in that sector or topic area.

Secure Cycle Parking

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to ensure that there is adequate provision for secure cycle parking in new developments.

Mr. Baldry: Last year we published a draft planning policy guidance note 13 (PPG13) on planning and transport issues. It suggested that local authorities should encourage the provision of secure cycle parking at public transport interchanges, including railway stations and park and ride facilities, to increase the opportunities to use cycles in combination with public transport and car sharing. Provision of secure cycle parking facilities should be sought in all major developments and in town centres, and encouraged at education institutions. We hope to publish the final version of the guidance within the next few months.

Construction Industry (Subcontracting)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to abolish labour-only subcontracting in the construction industry.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have no plans to abolish labour-only subcontracting.

North Yorkshire County Council

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the amount of money allocated from Government funds in the last financial year for each department of North Yorkshire county council; and what comparable amounts will be provided in the next financial year.

Mr. Baldry: Central Government support—that is, revenue support grant and redistributed business rate income—is given in support of the provision of local services as a whole. It is not hypothecated to particular service departments. For 1993-94 central Government support to North Yorkshire county council is £283·4 million, of which revenue support grant is £135·3 million. For 1994-95 the corresponding figures are £290·5 million and £154·2 million respectively.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received on the issue of local government reorganisation since January 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not available, except at disproportionate cost.

Minister for Local Government and Planning

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what areas under consideration by the Local Government Commission will be subject to special arrangements to ensure that the Minister for Local Government and Planning is not involved in decisions affecting local authorities in his constituency and those adjoining.

Mr. Baldry: My hon. Friend, the Minister for Local Government and Planning, will not be involved in decisions on the Local Government Commission's recommendations for Humberside, Lincolnshire and North Yorkshire. Whether or not he is involved in decisions on recommendations for Lancashire and Cumbria will depend on the nature of those recommendations.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total cost to date of the Local Government Commission.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 February 1994]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 24 January 1994 at column 29.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the reform of English local government to be completed.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The Local Government Commission has been directed to make final recommendations for change to local government structure, boundaries or electoral arrangements of the shire counties in England by the end of 1994. We expect to have completed implementation of any changes following from these recommendations by April 1997, subject to Parliament.

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the average numbers of staff in each local authority in England who are engaged in work connected with his plans for the reform of local government.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 February 1994]: We have made no such assessment; this is a matter for individual authorities.

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many members of his Department are engaged on work connected with his plans for local government reform.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 7 February 1994]: Numbers may vary from time to time, but the branch directly responsible for issues arising from the Local Government Commission's reviews has 12 members of staff at present. Staff elsewhere in the Department are involved as necessary.

Showmen Sites

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement concerning the provision of permanent sites for showmen in the west midlands following his refusal on 21 January of appeals by J. Owen and the Showmen's Guild of Great Britain.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 2 February 1994]: It is for local authorities in the west midlands to consider the needs of showpeople when preparing their development plans and determining planning applications. Guidelines relating to the provision of accommodation for showpeople are set out in Government circular 22/91.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Campsfield Detention Centre

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average total daily cost of detaining (a) an adult and (b) a child at the detention centre at Campsfield in Oxfordshire.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is commercially confidential and it would not be proper to disclose it.

Prison Conditions

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in the United Kingdom, indicating which have slopping out; what is his definition of overcrowding; and which prisons are currently overcrowded.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Roland Boyes, dated 8 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about slopping out and overcrowding.

The attached table lists Prison Service establishments in England and Wales, indicating those at which there is slopping out or overcrowding. The Prison Service does not have responsibility for prisons in other parts of the United Kingdom.

There are 31 establishments where there is still some element of slopping out but in many cases this involves very small numbers. At the end of December 1993, 89 per cent. of prisoners had full access to night sanitation facilities and this will rise to over 95 per cent. by the end of 1994.

A Prison Service establishment is said to be overcrowded when the number of prisoners held in it is higher than its certified normal accommodation (CNA).

Prisoner Accommodation

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to use Army camps and prison ships for accommodating prisoners.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange to a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Roland Boyes, dated 8 February 1994.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prison ships and Army camps. The Prison Service is considering a number of options, including marine detention facilities and Army camps, as part of its contingency planning. The aim is to identify means for coping with any emergency where the prison population exceeds the available accommodation. There are no current plans to use either option.

Prison Violence

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of violence between prisoners took place in each year since 1990.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Roland Boyes, dated 8 February 1994.

VIOLENCE BETWEEN PRISONERS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many incidents of violence between prisoners took place in each year since 1990.

The information you have requested is given in the attached table.

Prison adjudications where inmate found guilty[1] of assault on an inmate or fighting, England and Wales, 1990-1993

Offence	Year 1990	1991	1992	1993[1]
Assault on an inmate[2]	1,917	1,944	2,060	2,344
Fighting[3]	5,915	5,644	5,865	6,397

[2] Includes attempting, inciting or assisting an assault on an inmate.
[3] Includes inciting or assisting fighting.

Source: Statistics of offences against prison discipline and punishment, England and Wales, 1990 (Cm 1651), 1991 (Cm 2066), and 1992 (Cm 2411).

Drugs Prevention Initiative

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made with his Department's drugs prevention initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I am publishing today the drugs prevention initiative's third annual progress report, which sets out an encouraging record of community-based drugs prevention activity in the 12 months 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993, particularly in the 20 areas with local drugs prevention teams. I have placed a copy of the report in the Library.

European Elections (Voting)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to inform EC nationals resident in the United Kingdom of their right to vote in the European elections; and what arrangements will be made to allow EC national to register on the electoral roll to enable them to vote in the European elections.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Birmingham,

Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 2 February at column 703. Application forms for Community citizens to apply for inclusion in the electoral register will be made available once the European Parliamentary Elections (Changes to the Franchise and Qualifications of Representatives) Regulations 1994 have been approval by Parliament.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases in the last year for which figures are available the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board paid out compensation where a conviction had not been secured.

Mr. Maclean: I regret that this information is not available. The Criminal Injuries Compensation Board does not collate information in such a way as to distinguish cases in which there has been a conviction for the crime giving rise to the claim for compensation.

Forged Passport

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent deportation of a woman who arrived at Gatwick airport to meet a flight as a sponsor and was found to have a forged passport.

Mr. Charles Wardle: On 15 December 1993 a Jamaican woman was recognised by police officers at Gatwick airport and arrested on suspicion of being in breach of the immigration laws. She was interviewed under caution in the presence of a solicitor. In the light of the information available, she was judged to be an illegal entrant and was detained as such. She subsequently signed a notice that she wished to leave for Jamaica as soon as possible and did so on 22 December.

DNA Genetic Fingerprint Database

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for a national DNA genetic fingerprint database; whether the database will be held on the police national computer; and whether the database will include personal data which relate to individuals who have committed no crime.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 3 February that the Forensic Science Service and the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory are to carry out a pilot study on the running of a national DNA database. The pilot study will be completed in March 1994 and it will include the development of the necessary IT software and hardware for a national database.

No decisions have yet been taken on who will, in the long term, run the national database. The national intelligence database will contain only DNA records of stains from unsolved crimes and of convicted criminals but of no one else.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juveniles were convicted of offences in Gloucestershire in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean: Information for 1992 is given in the table. Data for 1993 will not be available until the autumn.

Number and percentage of juveniles[1] convicted at all courts in Gloucestershire police force area by type of offence 1992

Type of offence	Juveniles		All ages[2]
	Number	Per cent.
Indictable	236	8	2,916
Summary non-motoring	74	2	4,410
Summary motoring	36	0	9,728
Total	346	2	17,054

[1] Persons aged 10 and under 17 years.
[2] =100 per cent.

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the rate of re-offending by juveniles who have (a) been placed in secure accommodation and (b) been placed in alternative private residential homes or schools.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available centrally.

Prisoners' Compact

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those prisons that, as at July 1993 (a) operated a prisoners' compact explaining the facilities available to prisoners whilst in prison and what was expected from them and (b) did not operate a prisoners' compact.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 8 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking him to list those prisons that, as at July 1993 (a) operated a prisoners' compact explaining the facilities available to prisoners whilst in prison and what was expected of them and (b) did not operate a prisoners' compact.

Listed below are those establishments which in June 1993 were operating prisoner compacts similar to the type described in the question:

Blantyre House
Brinsford
Bristol—(Pilot scheme in one wing)
Canterbury—(Unconvicted wing and Resettlement wing)
Cardiff—(Remand wing)
Deerbolt—(Pilot scheme)
Drake Hall
Erlestoke—(Education Department)
Haslar
Kirklevington Grange
Leyhill
Lindholme—(One wing)
Low Newton
Manchester—(Education Department)
Moorland
Swinfen Hall
Thorn Cross
Thorpe Arch
Werrington
Wetherby

Compacts were also being experimented with at the following establishments:

Bullwood Hall
Downview
Frankland
Hull

Latchmere House
Morton Hall
North Sea Camp
Norwich
Rudgate
Swaleside
Usk/Prescoed
Wakefield
Whitemoor
Wolds

Inspectorate of Constabulary

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inspectors the inspectorate of constabulary had in May 1993; and how many of these were lay inspectors.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In May 1993, there were seven inspectors of constabulary and one chief inspector of constabulary in Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary. There were no lay inspectors in post at that time.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has held with the Data Protection Registrar on the applicability of each data protection principle to the definition of record in clause 43(4) of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Officials met with representatives of the Data Protection Registrar on 20 January to discuss the data protection issues arising from those clauses in the Bill which are concerned with the taking and retention of body samples. The views of the Data Protection Registrar will be taken fully into account during the passage of the Bill.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of remand prisoners brought to trial (i) between July 1992 and 30 June 1993 and (ii) 1 July 1991 and 30 June 1992 (a) had spent more than 56 days in custody since their first appearance at a magistrates court and (b) had spent more than 70 days from first appearance before magistrates to committal in the Crown court.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The readily available information, which is collected in sample weeks in February, June and October of each year for indictable offences—including either way—is given in the following table:

Table 1 Period from first listing to completion in magistrates courts, for defendants remanded in custody throughout their proceedings, for indictable offences, by type of proceedings

Name Badges (Police Officers)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those police services in Great Britain in which uniformed police officers on the beat (a) wear and (b) do not wear name badges.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information is not available in the form requested. Name badges are worn by some or all officers in the following police forces in England and Wales:

Bedfordshire
Cheshire
Cleveland
Devon and Cornwall
Dyfed-Powys
Essex
Greater Manchester
Kent
Leicestershire
Lincolnshire
South Wales
South Yorkshire
Suffolk
Thames Valley
West Mercia

National Alliance of Women's Organisations

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about funding of the National Alliance of Women's Organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In the three months ended 31 January 1994 35 letters containing representations about the funding of the National Alliance of Women's Organisations were received in the Home Office. As I made clear on 2 February at column 703, in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Ms Anderson), there are insufficient resources to fund this organisation in 1994-95.

Firearms Permits

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearms permits there are currently in force in (a) Blyth Valley and (b) south Northumberland.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information is not available on the number of firearm and shotgun certificates currently in force in Blyth valley and south Northumberland. I understand, though, from the Northumbria police that the number of firearm and shotgun certificates currently in force in the south-west and south-east Northumberland police districts is as follows:

District	Firearm certificates	Shot gun certificates	Total
South West Northumberland	502	1,269	1,771
South East Northumberland	533	1,311	1,844

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Howard: Next steps agency executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

DNA Fingerprints

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make it his policy that all reasonable steps are taken to destroy the DNA genetic fingerprints of those who have committed no crime;

(2) what is his policy on whether personal data representing a DNA genetic fingerprint and which relate to individuals who are present at the scene of crime can be retained by the police indefinitely.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend's policy on the taking and use of DNA samples by the police mirrors as closely as possible the existing, tried and tested regime for the taking of fingerprints. At present fingerprints and samples must be destroyed if the person from whom they were taken is cleared or not proceeded against.

There are practical problems in the destruction of material generated in the processing of DNA profiles. These problems arise where the samples relating to one case are processed together to reduce experimental distortion; and with computer records where total erasure may be impractical. It is also important to ensure that records remain intact for any subsequent inquiries into alleged miscarriages of justice.

The important principle is that information from unconvicted suspects should not be retained on the intelligence database and should not be used against them either in evidence or for the purposes of investigating offences. My right hon. and learned Friend has undertaken to introduce an amendment to clause 42 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill to clarify the circumstances in which information derived from samples taken from unconvicted suspects should be able to be retained but protected from use in evidence or in the investigation of offences.

Crime Detection

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what are the crime detection rates for each police authority in Wales and for Wales as a whole for each year since 1987;

(2) what are the crime detection rates for the latest convenient period for each police authority in England and for England as a whole.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is published in table 2.11 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1992", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why he commissioned a survey of data users' view of the European Commission's data protection directive separate from the independent and comprehensive survey of data users commissioned by the European Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The European Commission has asked member states for their assessment of the costs of implementing the directive. It was necessary to seek data users' views in order to respond to this request.

Deputy Lords Lieutenant

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the deputy lords lieutenant in England and their dates of appointment.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A comprehensive record of the names and dates of appointment of the 1,870 deputy lieutenants in England is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I am having placed in the Library the addresses of the 46 lieutenancy offices in England, from which the information in respect of local deputy lieutenants may be obtained.

Juries

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures were introduced between July 1992 and June 1993 to allow juries to go home at the end of the working day.

Mr. Maclean: No such measures were introduced. It is already possible for a jury to separate up to the time at which it is directed to consider its verdict. The Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill will allow a court, where it thinks fit, to permit a jury to separate once the jury has begun its deliberations.

Deregulation

Mr. Hepple: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which organisations were consulted by his Department, on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document, "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Howard: Each of the task force recommendations agreed, or agreed in principle, by the Government has been or will be the subject of appropriate consultation with interested parties.

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State since 27 May 1993.

Mr. Howard: These costs are met from a larger budget within which there is no specific allocation to individual Ministers. Information about the cost of internal travel by car is not readily available. The cost of my internal travel by other means is £1,793 since 27 May 1993. The cost of overseas travel for the same period is £3,553.

Deportation (Physical Restraints)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the use during deportations of (a) handcuffs, (b) arm restraints, (c) leg restraints, (d) bodybelts and (e) tape was authorised by his Department's guidelines prior to the joint Home Office/Metropolitan police review of deportations published on 12 January.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Arrangements were introduced in April 1993 requiring private security firms to seek prior authority from at least inspector level of the Immigration Service for the use of handcuffs, save in unforeseen emergencies where an essential need arises on safety or security grounds. Arrangements for obtaining authority at a more senior level for the exceptional use of leg restraints, the only other form of restraint which might be used by the private sector, were introduced following the events surrounding the death of Mrs. Joy Gardner.

The Home Office issued a circular of guidance in 1992 to all chief officers of police on the appropriate use of handcuffs following arrest. This would include cases in which a person has been arrested prior to deportation. The circular was prepared in close consultation with the Association of Chief Police Officers, self defence committee.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the Data Protection Tribunal.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Data Protection Tribunal currently consists of:

Chairman
J. A. C. Spokes, QC

Deputy Chairman
Professor A. L. Diamond
Rear-Admiral J. H. T. Walters, CB

Members
Professor T. F. Carberry, OBE
Mr. A. B. Cowling
Mrs. K. Foss
Mr. J. Hanson, OBE
Professor W. W. Holland
Mr. B. Kelly
Mr. G. Lanchin
Mr. A. Lawrence
Mr. P. E. Lumb
Mr. P. R. Oglesby, CB
Sir Leonard Peach
Mr. D. L. Perrot
Mr. L. A. Plowman, CBE
Mr. A. W. Pragnell, CBE
Mr. J. C. Richards, MBE
Mr. J. M. Ross
Mr. V. Ross
Dr. M. Smith
Mr. E. H. Thomas
Mr. N. J. F. Watson
Professor G. J. Zellick

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the office of the Data Protection Registrar.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Data Protection Registrar is Mr. Eric Howe, CBE.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Board on Restricted Patients.

Mr. Maclean: The current members are:
Her Honour Judge Valerie Pearlman, Chairman;
Mrs. Lindsey Addyman, JP;
Mr. Malcom Bryant (Chief Probation Officer, Berkshire);
Dr. Derek Chiswick (Consultant Forensic Science Psychiatrist, Royal Edinburgh Hospital);
Dr. James Higgins (Consultant Forensic Science Psychiatrist, Scott Clinic, Liverpool);
Commander Sally Hubbard (Assistant Inspector of Constabulary);
Mr. Michael Lindsey (Deputy Director of Social Services, Shrosphire);
Ms Rosy Mannion (Solicitor)

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to all boards of visitors to penal establishments.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am arranging for details of the current membership of the board of visitors for each prison establishment in England and Wales to be placed in the Library.

Psychotherapy (Offenders)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what funding his Department provides for psychotherapy of offenders and ex-offenders (a) whilst in custody and (b) after release;

(2) what is (a) the average cost and (b) the average length of a course of psychotherapy for offenders;

(3) how many persons (a) in prison and (b) on probation have been given courses of psychotherapy in each of the last five years;

(4) what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of psychotherapy of offenders in reducing reoffending behaviour.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 4 February 1994]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Robert Maclennan dated 8 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the provision of psychotherapy for offenders and ex-offenders.

All psychotherapy rests on the assumption that problems with an origin in earlier damaging experiences are capable of correction through a new and different personal relationship with a trained therapist. There are various styles of such treatment including individual psychotherapy and group psychotherapy.

In the Prison Service group psychotherapy is employed at HM Prisons Grendon and Wormwood Scrubs, and HM Young Offender Insititution Glen Parva. At HMP Grendon research undertaken by Gunn and Robertson (A Ten Year Follow-up of Men Discharged from Grendon Prison) and Genders and Player (Grendon – A Study of a Therapeutic Community within the Prison System) confirms that attitudinal changes to take place in inmates undergoing therapy. For example, Genders and Player claimed that within six months, 71% had abandoned the conventional inmate pecking order, 68% could talk to prison officers about personal matters, and that after 12 months 60% were able to disclose if illicit activities were taking place. All felt less isolated and less directed. In addition prisoners had an insight into their own problems and a greater understanding of others.

Nevertheless until recently there has been no evidence of a reduction of recidivism by prisoners released from Grendon, although there was evidence that those who reoffend committed offences of a lesser order. However, research yet unpublished (Cullen 1992) indicates that prisoners released from Grendon over the last five years have in fact reoffended proportionally less often then the prison population as a whole. Similarly a study by Jones in 1988 (The hospital annexe: a preliminary evaluation report) at the Wormwood Scrubs annexe showed that those completing the course of therapy had a reconviction rate significantly lower than those who had failed to complete the treatment.

A combination of group psychotherapy and individual psychotherapy has been employed at the C Wing Special Unit at HM Prison Parkhurst for the last two years. Whilst this work has not yet been formally evaluated there has no doubt been a significant change in the attitude in many of the men undergoing therapy, exemplified by their willingness to come to terms with past traumas and to diplay a greater degree of self-confidence.

Psychotherapy is also carried out in establishments on an individual basis by visiting consultant psychiatrists. However, because of the constraints of doctor/patient confidentiality, it is impossible to ascertain what proportion of such sessions could be considered psychotherapeutic; although it is likely that all such sessions will contain some element of this type of treatment.

The treatment of sex offenders within the Prison Service falls into two broad categories, medical or educational, depending on whether treatment consists of a form of psychotherapy or is based on a cognitive behaviour approach. For the former, facilities exist in Her Majesty's Prison Grendon and the Wormwood Scrubs Annexe, where therapy is conducted through group and one to one sessions involving psychiatrists, psychologists, and other special staff; and at HMYOI Glen Parva which provides similar programmes for young offenders. Therapy or treatment is also provided at many establishments on an individual basis according to the clinical needs of the prisoners.

The second category of treatment is being facilitated by the Prison Service sex offender programme which was introduced in 1992 and targeted initially at prisoners who receive sentences of four years or more. The programme, which is educational rather than medical in character is divided into two main sub-programmes.

A core programme, which tackles offenders distorted beliefs about relationships;
and
an extended programme for those who represent the greatest risk.

At present there are seven prisons acting as assessment centres, 13 providing core programmes and seven providing extended programmes. In addition, two establishments offer concentrated core programmes for high risk inmates serving less than four years.

In 1992-93 there were 16,737 prisoners referred to visiting consultant psychiatrists, compared with 17,583 in 1991-92 and 13,396 in 1990-91.

I regret that the exact number who have undergone psychotherapy, the cost of such treatment and that proportion of the psychiatric budget apportioned to psychotherapy is not collected centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 2 February, c. 713]: The Director General of the Prison Service has now written to the hon. Member.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Menzies Campbell, dated 8 February 1994:

Further to your recent Parliamentary Question, the Home Secretary has asked me to give you details of those members of Prison Service staff judged guilty of fraud in each year since 1989, and the numbers of those who have been dismissed.

The information is as follows:

1989—One member of staff convicted and dismissed.
1990—One member of staff convicted and dismissed.
1991—None.
1992—Two members of staff convicted: one resigned, one dismissed.
1993—Two members of staff convicted and dismissed.
1994—One member of staff convicted: still under consideration.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juvenile offenders were placed by local authorities last year in private residential homes or schools such as Bryn Melyn in Wales.

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

Information available centrally about the number of children and young people accommodated compulsorily by local authorities relates to the legislation under which they are held and not to offences committed or alleged.

The most recently held information relates to the period 14 October 1991 to 31 March 1992 and is based on valid information received from 90 local authorities. It is estimated that, in England, between 40 and 50 children or young people who were subject to a care order in criminal proceedings and between 30 and 40 who were on remand were accommodated compulsorily by local authorities in private residential homes or schools in this period.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Post Boxes

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what consultations took place about the design of post boxes in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Ray Powell: Following consultation between officials of the House and the Post Office, which had agreed to commission and bear the cost of new post boxes, advice was sought on their practicability and design from the relevant Committees of both Houses and professional advisers. The introduction of the new boxes followed a limited trial period and an exhibition in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Dining Rooms (Bookings)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee if he will ensure that all bookings of private dining rooms in the Palace of Westminster are published each month.

Mr. Colin Shepherd [holding answer 26 January 1994]: No.

Smoking

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will report progress regarding a policy on smoking in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Beith [holding answer 7 February 1994]: Following the reply that I gave to the hon. Member on this subject on 14 June last, the Commission has discussed policy on smoking in the House, and has concluded that this is a matter primarily for individual Departments of the House, for the relevant Domestic Select Committees, and for mutual agreement between the occupants of offices. The Library, Finance and Administration, and Refreshment Departments have taken action to formalise voluntary no smoking arrangements for their staff.

There has been no change in the arrangements which prohibit or curtail smoking in certain parts of the House used by Members. In addition, Rooms A, C and D of the Members' Library have been designated no smoking areas and the Catering Committee has agreed to the establishment of no smoking areas or arrangements in all Refreshment Department outlets.

In addition, the Refreshment Department has established, in consultation with relevant staff representatives, a mandatory no smoking policy to meet statutory requirements for its storage, production and service areas.

The Administration Committee has smoking policy on its agenda for consideration in the near future.

Departmental Select Committees

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many departmental select committee reports there have been since 1979; and how many have been debated in the House on a substantive motion.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to him by my predecessor on 13 June 1989 at column 358 and 11 November 1991 at column 365, which give the information up to the end of Session 1990-91. During Sessions 1991-92 and 1992-93, departmental Select Committees published 109 reports and 58 special reports. One was debated on a substantive motion; many others have been debated in other ways, including debates on Estimates days and other occasions when reports were cited on the Order Paper as relevant to proceedings in the House. Information on all such debates is published in the Select Committees section of the sessional returns.

Sitting Days

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many working days the House sat; and how many it was in recess in each of the last 20 calendar years.

Mr. Newton: The table sets out the number of sitting and non-sitting days in the 20 years from 1974 to 1993. The number of non-sitting days does not include weekends or bank holidays.

Calendar years	Sitting days	Non-sitting days[1]
1974	151	[2]102
1975	178	75

[1]Weekends and bank holidays are assumed to account for 112 days each year.
[2]General election year.

Members' Salaries

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many hon. Members are drawing the new salary which came into force on 1 January.

Mr. Newton: Five hundred and fifty one right hon. and hon. Members are currently drawing the new full parliamentary salary and 92 right hon. and hon. Members are drawing the new reduced parliamentary salary payable to Ministers and office holders, both of which came into force on 1 January 1994.

EDUCATION

Student Debt

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the value of the average debt incurred by students concluding their courses.

Mr. Boswell: The information is as follows:

Course completed at end of academic year 1992-93	Average (mean) debt outstanding £
Commercial borrowing:
[1]Younger students (aged 26 or less at start of course)	430
Student loans:
[2]All students	440

[2]Source: Student Loans Company

Information on average commercial borrowing by older students is not currently available: hence the two figures should not be added.

Student Loans Company

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the annual running cost of the Student Loans Company.

Mr. Boswell: United Kingdom grant-in-aid for 1993-94 for the running costs of the Student Loans Company is £16·105 millions. This includes contributions from the Scottish Office Education Department and the Department for Education, Northern Ireland.

Assisted Places

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the average cost of assisted places in each local education authority in 1991-92.

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mr. Purchase) on 17 January at column 410.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the cost of dismantling the HMI office network; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Ofsted. I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Regional Offices

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will provide an estimate of the costs of establishing regional offices of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: The Department has no plans to establish regional offices.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the local education authorities which maintain sixth forms in schools and colleges of lesser size than the minimum recommended in the 1985 White Paper, "Better Schools", Cmnd 9469.

Mr. Boswell: The local education authorities in England which in January 1993 were maintaining some secondary schools with sixth forms with fewer than 150 pupils are as follows:

Avon
Barking and Dagenham
Barnet
Bedfordshire
Berkshire
Bexley
Birmingham
Bolton

Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what outstanding moneys were owed by the organisation Choice in Education to the Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. as at February 1993; for what purpose the money was originally transferred; and why it was outstanding;

(2) which staff employed by Choice in Education had salaries paid from Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. funds; when such payments were made; and when Choice in Education was recharged.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no responsibility for accounting arrangements concerning those activities of the Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. which are not grant aided. The centre's auditors have certified that Government grants have been used for purposes approved by my right hon. Friend. No part of any Government grant to the centre was used to fund Choice in Education.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what weaknesses in the financial systems operated by the Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. were identified by his Department's internal report of February 1993.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. has addressed the weaknesses in financial systems mentioned in the Department's internal report. The auditors' report on the company's accounts for 1992-93 include clear statements that following improvements in its systems the centre is maintaining adequate financial controls and that Government grant was used for the intended purposes.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what ex gratia payments have been made by the Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd.; and for what reasons.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend is not aware of any ex gratia payments made by the Grant Maintained Schools Centre Ltd. other than elements of redundancy payments to a small number of staff.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to him on 2 February at column 738.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education who are the members currently appointed to the School Teachers' Review Body.

Mr. Robin Squire: The current members of the School Teachers' Review Body are:

Mr. John Gardiner
Mrs. Brigita Amey
Mr. Alan Cox CBE
Mr. Philip Halsey CB LVO
Mr. Mike Harding
Mrs. Gill Rostron
Mrs. Anna Vinton

School Inspections

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many contracts for the inspection of schools have been let this year in each local education authority; and, of these, what proportion have been let to an inspection team (a) from the same local education authority and (b) from another local education authority.

Mr. Robin Squire: The arrangements for inspecting schools under the Education (Schools) Act 1992, including the awarding of contracts to registered inspectors, are a matter for Ofsted. I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of (a) primary schools in England and (b) secondary schools in England Ofsted expects to inspect in the academic year 1993-94.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many school inspections have now been published by the Office for Standards in Education; and how many of these resulted in an overall assessment of (a) good, (b) satisfactory and (c) unsatisfactory.

Mr. Robin Squire: The arrangements for inspecting schools under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 are a matter for Ofsted. I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Members.

Administration and Support Services

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects the Audit Commission to publish comparative tables on efficiency of administration and support services in the different local education authorities.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

The Audit Commission will publish national comparisons of performance in 1995 across a broad range of services, including the provision of an educational service. Before then, each local authority will publish details of its own performance in a local newspaper circulating in its area.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what are the responsibilities of the property controller of the Further Education Funding Council;

(2) how many hours per week the new property controller will work in the Further Education Funding Council; and what remuneration and allowances he will be given.

Mr. Boswell: The new head of property services at the Further Education Funding Council will be responsible for leading a team of professionally qualified building advisers and support staff who advise the council on capital policy matters and provide guidance and assistance to colleges on estate management and the development of accommodation strategies. His appointment is full time and is on civil service terms appropriate to a grade 6 special appointment on a fixed-term contract.

Examination Results

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many complaints were received about the accuracy of the data published by his Department about the public examination results achieved by schools, further education and sixth form colleges in the 1992-93 academic year.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has received 146 complaints. Investigation of these complaints has indicated 47 errors for which the Department or its contractors were responsible; 34 errors for which the school or college was wholly or partly responsible; 11 errors for which no responsibility was attributable; and 54 instances where the complaint was unsubstantiated. Fewer than 1 per cent. of schools and colleges had incorrect entries in the tables as a result of an error by the Department or its contractors.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the cost of advertising grant-maintained schools in the national press (a) in total and (b) in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Robin Squire: The total expenditure on advertisements designed to make factual information about grant-maintained schools available to parents, governors and schools is around £400,000, of which £200,000 relates to the 1992-93 financial year and around £200,000 to the current financial year.

Disabled Student's Allowance

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for education what has been the financial allocation through the disabled student's allowance by the local education authorities in England and Wales to students with disabilities in higher education in each year since 1990-91 to (a) students studying in Scotland and (b) students studying in England and Wales; and how many individual students this represents.

Mr. Boswell: Returns from LEAs in England and Wales show that the gross value of disabled students' allowances made by them as part of mandatory awards was £869,000 in the 1990-91 academic year and £1,960,000 in 1991-92, the latest year for which figures are available. These two figures are not directly comparable because the data collected for 1990-91 were incomplete. Disabled students' allowances form part of the student's total maintenance requirement. The net grant payable may be lower once his resources have been taken into account. Mandatory awards are made to students who are domiciled in England and Wales in respect of their attendance on courses in the United Kingdom. Information on the number of students in receipt of disabled students' allowances and their places of study is not collected centrally.

Parents Charter

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the companies commissioned by his Department in 1992-93 to carry out polling and market research about the views of parents of school pupils in the course of preparing an updated parents charter; and if he will list the areas of research, the questionnaires used and the groups questioned.

Mr. Robin Squire: Research on a draft text and design of the parents charter was carried out in 1993-94. The identity of the company commissioned to carry out the research is commercial in confidence.

As is usual in qualitative research, the research was conducted through group discussions rather than via a questionnaire. The research covered the readability and content of the text, and its relevance and value for parents. It also looked at the effectiveness of the design and layout, and the preferred distribution route to parents. The research groups were a representative mix of parents, reflecting a number of socio-economic categories, both urban and rural areas, and different geographical regions.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the subjects on which his Department or its predecessors formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Robin Squire: The chief executive of the Teachers' Pensions Agency has, under the terms of the agency's framework document, responsibility to deal directly with parliamentary questions on day-to-day operational matters and on those matters for which the Chief Executive has delegated authority.

Nursery Education

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what extra resources will be made available for the financial years 1994-95 and 1996-97 to assist education authorities with the provision of classes for three to five-year-olds in maintained primary schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The local government finance settlement for 1994-95 takes account of the broad range of pressures on local authorities, including the projected number of pupils aged under five in maintained schools, as published in the Department's annual report. The settlement reflects the fact that it is up to each local authority to decide what provision to make for children aged under five.

Religious Education

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the names of those who made submissions in response to the draft circular on religious education and collective worship x/94, published in October 1993; and when he expects to publish the results of his consultation.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received 327 submissions in response to the draft circular on religious education and collective worship: 108 from LEAs or standing advisory councils on religious education; 62 from church or religious groups; 134 from educational groups; and 23 from other groups and individuals. Individual submissions received are treated as sent in confidence. It would therefore be inappropriate for my right hon. Friend to list the names of those who sent them, or to publish them. The comments received were taken into account in the final circular 1/94, published on 31 January.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what provisions he will make for the teaching of humanism as part of religious education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: Religious education concerns the development of children's knowledge, understanding and awareness of religious beliefs and practices; the encouragement of respect for those holding different beliefs; and the development of the ability to make reasoned and informed judgments about religious and moral issues.

Humanism is not a religion and should not be taught in religious education lessons as if it were. A syllabus may, however, include teaching about people, such as humanists, who do not believe in God but nonetheless have a code of moral values, or give examples of secular equivalents to practices which have a religious background such as the marriage service or the taking of an oath. The detailed content of an agreed syllabus for religious education is decided by a local agreed syllabus conference.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has had regarding the publication of the model syllabuses for religious education.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend, has received 24 letters from members of the public since the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority (SCAA) published its draft model syllabuses for religious education on 25 January. The SCAA has invited comments on the models during a consultation period of two months.

National Curriculum

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many changes have been made to the national curriculum since the guide to the national curriculum was published in 1991; how many revised versions of the guide have been published since then; and if the current version is up to date.

Mr. Robin Squire: The second edition of the "Parent's Guide to the National Curriculum", published in June 1992, contained two changes to the curriculum on which the Government were consulting at the time the first edition was published. This current version does not reflect the changes to key stage 4 resulting from the Dearing report, which have not yet been given statutory effect.

Choice of School

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of parents had received by July 1993 (a) a written report on their child's progress in school and (b) a reminder of their right of appeal and how to use it in cases where the local education authority or school governors refuse them a place for their child in the school of their choice.

Mr. Robin Squire: Under the current reporting regulations schools are required to send a written report to all parents on their child's progress at least once in every school year. It is for individual schools to decide when to do so. All admission authorities are required by law to remind parents of their right of appeal when informing them of a decision not to allocate a place for their child at their preferred school.

SCOTLAND

Land Disposal

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conditions are attached to the disposal of Exchequer-funded land and buildings by further education colleges in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The conditions will allow further education colleges to retain the proceeds of sale of Exchequer-funded land and buildings without reference to the annual supply procedures, within specified limits agreed by the Secretary of State. These conditions are among those set out in an amendment to the financial memorandum between the Department and each FE college board of management, a copy of which I will be placing in the Library.

Betterment Levy

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about continued collection of betterment levy imposed by the Land Commission Act 1967.

Sir Hector Monro: It is no longer cost effective to continue pursuing collection of the betterment levy. In the 1992-93 financial year, five amounts of the levy and interest totalling £39,125·56 were written off. There remain five cases outstanding in Scotland totalling £7,880·59 and I have decided that these should be written off also.

War Crimes Act

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on whether any charges are to be made in Scotland under the War Crimes Act 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate issued the following statement on 3 February 1994:

"A specialised Crown Office Unit was formed in May 1991 to investigate allegations that persons living in Scotland were responsible for war crimes committed during the Second World War.

Extensive and thorough investigations of these allegations were carried out by the staff of the Unit in the United Kingdom and overseas. The results of these enquiries were reported to Crown Counsel.

After careful consideration Crown Counsel have decided that, as matters stand, there is not at present sufficient available evidence for a criminal prosecution in any of the cases reported to them.

Since no war crimes cases remain under active investigation in Scotland, a specialised unit will not be maintained. As with all serious enquiries, however, it will remain open to the criminal authorities to resume their investigations, should fresh evidence be brought to their attention. Any new allegations will, of course, be treated on their merits and investigated as their circumstances require."

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the subjects on which his Department or its predecessors formerly answered parliamentary questions directly but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Lang: I normally ask the chief executives of the executive agencies for which I am responsible to reply to parliamentary questions on subjects covering operational matters carried out by them under the terms of their framework document. Such replies are then published in the Official Report.

Barrhead Regeneration Strategy

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the projects which (a) have been completed, (b) are under way, (c) are legally committed and (d) are planned under the Barrhead regeneration strategy; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following information has been provided by Renfrew district council, which chairs the Barrhead regeneration working party:

Projects completed

1. The landscape and environmental improvements at Main Street, Cochrane Street, Levern Water, Glen Street areas.
2. Corridor enhancement at the Barrhead/Hurlet Road.
3. Surveys and reports on traffic shopping, and housing conditions in the town centre and townscape/floorscape study.
4. Tenemental refurbishment at Walton Street, Henry Street/George Street and Main Street.
5. New build housing developments at Henry Street/George Street, and John Street.

Projects underway

1. Further landscape and environmental improvements at Main Street, Glen Street, Levern Water.
2. Main Street widening and realignment.
3. Further townscape/floorscape studies, and floodlighting study.
4. Tenemental refurbishment at Mill Street/Cross Arthurlie Street, and Barnes Street.

Projects planned

1. Further landscape and environmental improvements in the town centre/Levern Water area.
2. Commercial Improvement Area Grant scheme for property improvement.
3. Public car park at Carlibar Road.
4. Further tenemental refurbishment at Cross Arthurlie Street, Cochrane Street.
5. Further new build housing at Glen Street, Cochrane Street, Carlibar road, Cross Arthurlie Street.
6. Women's Centre, Main Street.
7. Land acquisition at Cochrane Street, Glen Street, Cross Arthurlie Street.

Barrhead was designated in May 1993 as a smaller urban renewal initiative, led by Scottish Homes. An action plan, building on the achievements already made, is currently being prepared.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing how much (a) has been spent, (b) is legally committed and (c) is planned by (i) Renfrewshire Enterprise, (ii) Strathclyde regional council, (iii) Renfrew district council, (iv) Scottish Homes, (v) the private sector, (vi) other Scottish Office agencies or departments and (vii) other organisations on the Barrhead regeneration strategy since its inception.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following information has been provided by Renfrew district council, which chairs the Barrhead regeneration working party:

Catholic Education

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Scotland when he last met representatives of the Roman Catholic Church to discuss the provision of primary and secondary education in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My officials met representatives of the Catholic Education Commission in Glasgow on 28 September 1993 to discuss this issue. My right hon. Friend and I have since corresponded with the Church authorities on a number of occasions and we have indicated our willingness to meet them to discuss matters further.

Disabled Students

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Scotland what has been the financial allocation through the disabled students allowance by the Scottish Office Education Department to students with disabilities in higher education in each year since 1990-91 to (a) students studying in Scotland and (b) students studying in England and Wales; and how many individual students this represents.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the tables.

a. Disabled students undertaking higher education courses in Scotland

Academic year	Disabled students' allowance payments £	Number of students
1990-91	102,476	74
1991-92	214,724	162
1992-93	291,860	188
1993-94	250,635	175

b. Disabled students undertaking higher education courses outwith Scotland

Academic year	Disabled students' allowance payments £	Number of students
1990-91	14,145	7
1991-92	22,278	11
1992-93	41,893	16
1993-94	29,293	12

Notes:
[1] The above figures include postgraduate students.
[2] Academic year 1993-94 is up to 3 February 1994 only.

Schools (Audiology Services)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the provision of audiology services in schools within (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Renfrew Division.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Audiology services in schools may be provided both by health boards and education authorities. The level and location of such services are wholly for the decision of the bodies concerned. Responsibility for the provision of educational audiology services for any part or parts of an education authority's area therefore lies with that authority. The Secretary of State has no power to intervene.

Proxy Votes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make the application form to vote by post or proxy due to disability or physical incapacity available in braille.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the number of people living in homes of multiple occupation in Scotland; what regulations govern this type of shared accommodation; what plans he has to bring forward new legislation, regulations and controls; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the number of people living in houses in multiple occupation is not held centrally. The 1991 census showed that 10,435 people were living in accommodation which is not self-contained.

Housing authorities have powers to make orders applying the code of management contained in the Housing (Management of Houses and Buildings in Multiple Occupation) (Scotland) Regulations 1964, and to introduce licensing schemes for houses in multiple occupation under the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 (Licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation) Order 1991. The Government will continue to monitor the use of these powers and is not planning to amend the statutory provisions. HMOs are also covered by secondary legislation which can be introduced for various specific purposes, including fire safety.

Foxes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much he has allocated to fox destruction clubs in the past five years; what criteria are applied in the distribution of this funding; what methods the funded clubs use to destroy foxes; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: The information on grant allocated to fox destruction clubs in the past five years is as follows:

1988-89	47,649
1989-90	58,981
1990-91	47,566
1991-92	59,846
1992-93	60,400

Grants are paid to 31 clubs throughout Scotland to meet 50 per cent. of the approved cost of carrying out systematic fox control within a clearly defined area of adequate size. Group activity by farmers through these clubs has proved effective in reducing lamb losses.

Fox clubs use legal methods to dispatch foxes.

Electoral Register

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many citizens living overseas have applied to be registered to vote in elections in each parliamentary constituency.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information about applications by overseas electors to be included in the electoral registers are not held centrally.

Information about the number of overseas electors included in the 1992 and 1993 electoral registers is published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in "1993 Electoral Statistics", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Similar data for the 1993 and 1994 registers is expected to be published in the summer.

Homosexuals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines have been recently issued by the Lord Advocate to procurators fiscal, sheriffs and judges concerning consenting homosexual relationships among males aged 16 years or more; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 4 February 1994]: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate does not issue guidelines to sheriffs and judges. Since December 1991 procurators fiscal have been directed by the Lord Advocate to report to the Crown Office for Crown Counsel's consideration cases of consensual homosexual acts where both of the participants are over 16 years but one or both are under 18 years.

Where both the participants are over 18 years but one or both are under 21 years and there are circumstances pointing to exploitation, corruption or breach of trust, the direction to procurators fiscal is that prosecution would be appropriate and that such cases need not be reported to the Crown Office unless none of those circumstances is present but the procurator fiscal considers that there are other circumstances which would justify proceedings.

Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of women in the eligible target group have been screened for breast cancer in the last three years in Scotland; how many women have breast cancer; and how many women died from breast cancer in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: Seventy-one per cent. of women invited in the eligible target age group have attended for screening by the Scottish breast screening programme in the last three years.

Figures are not available for the number of women with breast cancer. The number of new registrations of invasive cancer of the breast and the number of deaths from invasive cancer of the breast in Scotland is as follows:

	Number of new registrations	Number of deaths
1989	2,742	1,356
1990	2,944	1,250
1991	3,092	1,278
1992	—[1]	1,250

[1] Figures not yet available.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of women in the target group have had a cervical cancer smear test in Scotland within the last five years; how many women in Scotland have cervical cancer; and how many women died of cervical cancer.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: Eighty per cent. of the eligible target population in Scotland have attended for a cervical smear within the last five years.

Figures are not available on the number of women with cervical cancer but the number of new registrations of invasive cancer of the cervix and the number of deaths from invasive cancer of the cervix is as follows:

Year	Number of new registrations	Number of deaths
1987	461	188
1988	460	191
1989	376	205
1990	494	162
1991	458	175
1992	[1]—	183

[1] Figures not yet available.

Organic Farming

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many applications he has received to date for assistance under the aid scheme to assist farmers in Scotland wishing to convert to organic production methods, which he announced in August;

(2) what is the estimated expenditure in the current financial year in respect of aid to those wishing to convert to organic production methods in Scotland; and what is the estimated expenditure in 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The proposed organic aid scheme is not yet open for applications. It is part of the Scottish agri-environment programme currently with the EC Commission for approval. Subject to approval by Parliament and the Commission, planned expenditure on the Scottish agri-environment programme is expected to be in the region of £11 million in 1995-96.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received since the August announcement on the agri-environment programme about the exclusion of current organic producers from the aid scheme proposed for organic production methods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 7 February 1994]: Since the August announcement about a proposed organic aid scheme, 22 representations have been received about the position of existing organic producers. Existing producers are not excluded from the scheme provided they have further land to convert. The scheme is designed to encourage farmers to convert to more environmentally friendly farming methods, not as a subsidy for existing organic producers.

Criminology Researchers

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on the granting of permission to criminology researchers to interview prisoners.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 February 1994]: I have asked the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to reply.

Letter from Mr. E. Frizzell to Mr. John McFall, dated 7 February 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the policy on the granting of permission to criminology researchers to interview prisoners.

All requests for access to prisons for the purposes of conducting research are dealt with by Scottish Prison Service Headquarters. A substantial number of these involve requests to interview prisoners or have prisoners complete questionnaires.

The merits of such requests are considered against a number of criteria: relevance to the programme of Ministerially approved and published criminological research priorities; congruence with the interests of the Scottish Prison Service; the possible security implications of the proposed work; the value of the research to the advancement of criminological understanding; and the likely cost in terms of staff time and possible disruption which the research may have on the operations of specific establishments. In addition, a professional commentary on the methodology of the research proposal is supplied by criminologists from the Central Research Unit of The Scottish Office Home and Health Department.

Access is granted only in those cases where the research proposal satisfies some or all of these criteria. If granted access, researchers must sign an undertaking that they will adhere to the code of ethical guidelines of their profession or discipline (eg the British Psychological Society or the Social Research Association) and, if appropriate, receive approval from the Ethics Committee of the local Area Health Board. It is a requirement of any access that all prisoners approached are given the opportunity to decline to be interviewed and that all material gained during the interview is confidential and will be treated anonymously.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to the Scottish Hospital Trust.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The current membership of the Scottish Hospital Trust is:

Mr. G. M. Murray FFA (Chairman)
Mr. J. R. Gibson FFA
Mr. G. A. Hepburn ACMA, ACIS
Mr. J. B. Hume MA
Mrs. M. A. Jeffcoat FCCA
Mr. J. T. Laurenson MA FCA
Mr. J. M. Watherston CA

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to the State Hospital Management Committee.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The information is as follows:

Chairman
Mr. Philip Hamilton-Grierson

Non-executive members
Dr. Barbara Ballinger
Mrs Nan Burnett
Mr. Bob Davis
Mrs. Heather Jenkins
Mr. Archie McCunn
Dr. Andrew Zealley

Executive members
Mr. Dick Manson
Dr. Janice Duncan
Mrs Ruth Whitty

Housing

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will release additional funds to local authorities to enable them to replenish their housing stock; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 February 1994]: Substantial resources totalling some £405 million have been made available to local authorities for capital investment in public sector housing in 1993-94. I will announce the housing capital allocations for 1994-95 shortly. These allocations are generally not earmarked for specific purposes and it is for local authorities themselves to determine their own policies and priorities for meeting local housing needs.

NHS Trusts (Ayrshire)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement listing the current executive and non-executive directors on the boards of (a) the North Ayrshire and Arran NHS Trust, (b) the South Ayrshire Trust and (c) the Community Health Care Trust; and which bodies nominated these individuals for membership of the trust boards.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 3 February 1994]: Appointment of executive directors is a matter for the trust boards themselves and particulars of individuals appointed are not held centrally. The current non-executive directors are listed below. None of them was nominated for appointment by an organisation.

North Ayrshire and Arran NHS Trust
Mr. James Grier
Mr. Keith Tulloch
Mrs. Kim Donald
Mrs. Angela Dunbar
Mr. Alan Stewart

South Ayrshire NHS Trust
Mr. Harold Currie
Mrs. Dorothy MacLellan
Mr. William Mowat
Mrs. Ann Wilson
Mr. Graeme McKinstry

Ayrshire and Arran Community Health Care NHS Trust
Mr. Ian Allison
Mr. David Gall
Mr. W. Scott McConnell
Mr. Robert Johnston
Dr. Susan Kinnaird

Mr. Raymond Gilmour

Mr. Gordon McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his consideration of the application for the prerogative of mercy submitted on behalf of Raymond Gilmour, Her Majesty's Prison Saughton.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The detailed inquiries into the petitions submitted on Mr. Gilmour's behalf, referred to my reply to the hon. Member on 7 December 1993, have now been completed. My right hon. Friend will respond to the petitions shortly and will also write to inform the hon. Member of his decision.

Defective Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make available additional funding to local authorities and owner-occupiers to deal with the structural problems associated with Orlit and Whitsun-Fairhurst type houses; if he will ring-fence this expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Substantial resources totalling some £405 million have been made available to local authorities for capital investment in public sector housing in 1993-94. I will announce the housing capital allocations for 1994-95 shortly. These allocations are generally not earmarked for specific purposes and it is for local authorities themselves to determine their own policies and priorities for meeting local housing needs including the need to deal with Orlit and Whitsun-Fairhurst type houses.

Additional housing capital allocations are made available to local authorities in respect of expenditure incurred by them in the provision of reinstatement grants or repurchase from eligible owners of Orlit and Whitsun-Fairhurst houses.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to amend the provisions of legislation relating to housing defects; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no plans to amend the provisions of the housing defects legislation. Under these provisions assistance has been available to eligible owners of defective houses for a 10-year period. In Scotland that period ends on 30 November 1994 and all applications must be submitted by that date.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what special financial provision he currently makes available to local authorities and owner-occupiers to deal with the structural problems associated with Orlit and Whitsun-Fairhurst type houses; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Substantial resources totalling some £405 million have been made available to local authorities for capital investment in public sector housing in 1993-94. Resources are not allocated specifically for work on any one type of house. It is for individual authorities to determine their own policies and priorities for investment in their own housing stock, including the need to tackle the structural problems found in Orlit and Whitson-Fairhurst houses.

Eligible owners of Orlit and Whitsun-Fairhurst houses can require local authorities to repurchase or give grant to make good the house. Supplementary capital allocations are issued to local authorities each year to meet in full their expenditure liabilities.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary State for Scotland if he will visit the Paisley, South constituency to assess the problems of Orlit and Whitsun-Fairhurst type houses.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit Paisley, South. Responsibility for the repair and maintenance of council housing lies with local authorities and my right hon. Friend has no powers to intervene in individual cases.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the options for dealing with housing with structural defects, such as those of Orlit and Whitsun-Fairhurst design; what plans he has to fund research into potential solutions; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has made no such assessment. Designated defective houses may either be demolished or repaired. PRC Homes Ltd., a subsidiary of the National House Building Council, is responsible for validating schemes of repair and it is for the building industry to devise schemes to meet specific requirements.

WALES

Secondary School Buildings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what specific investments have been made in new funding for secondary school buildings by the Welsh Office in 1993; and what is proposed for 1994.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Under the voluntary aided schools capital building programme, in addition to the funding for routine repair and maintenance schemes, three secondary schools received funding for new school buildings and improvements to existing buildings in 1993-94. In the same period, under the grant-maintained schools capital building programme, in addition to the formula-related capital grant which such schools receive, six secondary schools received funding for new school buildings and improvements to existing buildings. I hope to announce successful applications for grant for new starts for both the voluntary aided and grant-maintained sectors in 1994-95 shortly. Grant has also been allocated to eight secondary schools under the technology schools initiative, including one grant-maintained school and to one technology centre.

Building works at LEA-maintained schools are the responsibility of individual authorities and it is for each to decide on the level of spending, within the overall resources made available, on each service including education and thereafter on which school.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon;

(2) which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Redwood: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many residential and nursing homes there are in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: As at 31 March 1993 there were 675 local authority and registered private and voluntary residential homes for the elderly, physically disabled and visually disabled. At the same date there were 380 registered private nursing homes.

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by the Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State since 27 May 1993.

Mr. Redwood: The Secretary of State's travel costs are not budgeted separately from those of other Ministers. Expenditure on internal and overseas travel are not recorded separately nor is the Secretary of State's foreign travel identified separately when he travels with a party. The Department's identifiable expenditure on the Secretary of State's travel since 27 May 1993 was £15,861. The Secretary of State has been on one overseas trip to Hong Kong, Japan and the United States of America promoting Wales as a centre for investment and has travelled regularly and extensively throughout Wales.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of whether Wales social services departments are interpreting satisfactorily the guidelines on occupational pensions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Guidance on the assessment of an individual's ability to pay for services is contained in the charging for residential accommodation guide. I am not aware of any evidence to suggest that social services departments in Wales are not interpreting these guidelines satisfactorily.

Sitting Services

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of sitting services provided by local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not collected centrally.

Respite Care

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of respite care provision in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is for local and health authorities to determine the need for respite care facilities in their areas and to procure it accordingly. Additional resources of £1,200,000 will be available to local authorities in Wales in 1994-95 to assist in the development of domiciliary, day and respite care.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of specifically designated respite care beds in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the number of beds by specialty is collected centrally on the basis of specialties recognised by the Royal Colleges. Respite care is not one of these recognised specialties and hence the information requested is not available.

Continuing Care Beds

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of continuing care beds in Wales, by each health authority.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the number of beds by specialty is collected centrally on the basis of specialties recognised by the royal colleges. Continuing care is not one of these recognised specialties and hence the information requested is not available.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policies he proposes to ensure that carers have a statutory right to separate arrangements and to respite care services.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is impossible to separate the needs and rights of carers from those of the people for whom they care. In every case, the assessment of needs —including the need for respite care—must take full account of the interests of both and indeed section 8(1) of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 requires a local authority, when assessing the needs of a disabled person living at home and receiving a substantial amount of care on a regular basis from an informal carer, to take account of the ability of that carer to continue to provide that support.

Elderly Carers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he will take to relieve the financial burdens on elderly carers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Community Care

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the acceptability of national minimum standards for care in the community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is the responsibility of local authorities to manage the implementation of community care. We will continue to monitor progress closely and offer guidance and direction as is considered necessary.

Nursing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the use of nursing banks and agencies in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are nursing banks to meet the staffing needs of most hospitals in Wales. Nurses attached to the banks are frequently former members of staff who because of personal circumstances no longer work regularly. Nursing agencies are not widely used in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many intensive care nurses are employed in each of the major hospitals of Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Detailed breakdowns of the number of nursing staff employed by health authorities and NHS trusts into occupational groups such as that requested are not available.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of whether there are sufficient (a) cardiac intensive care nurses and (b) general paediatric intensive care nurses; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps he is taking to obtain more intensive care trained nurses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is for individual health authorities and NHS trusts to determine their staff requirements for the intensive care they provide. Currently in Wales there are no major difficulties with the recruitment of nurses and intensive care units are staffed to their establishments.

Housing

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he will next meet the Welsh Housing Consultative Council; and if he will discuss with them the publication of the House Condition Survey.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My officials wrote to the Council of Welsh Districts on 10 January to establish whether it had any agenda items for a meeting of the Welsh Housing Consultative Committee.

Wind Farms

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received since 1991 (a) for and (b) against proposals for wind farm developments in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I have received 91 representations in favour of developments, two of which included petitions with 10 and 60 signatures respectively, and 275 representations against developments, one of which included a petition with 897 signatures.

Co-operatives

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to encourage the development of retail, wholesale and manufacturing co-operatives.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Office offers a range of assistance to new and existing businesses including co-operatives. There is also a Wales co-operative development and training centre which receives funding from the Welsh Development Agency and from the training and enterprise councils through the business start-up scheme.

Nursery and Primary School Spending

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the levels of spending per nursery and primary school pupil for the last available year for each education authority in Wales, and for Wales as a whole.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information is given in table 14.18 of "Statistics of Education and Training in Wales: Schools' No. 2, 1994," a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Postal and Proxy Votes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make available in braille the application form to vote by post or proxy due to disability or physical incapacity.

Mr. Redwood: This is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Helwick Bank

Mr. Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will arrange for the deposit in the Library of (a) the 1992 and 1993 Helwick bank hydrographic and beach profile surveys and (b) the H. R. Wallingford report on the potential impact of the dredging of Helwick bank.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The initial Helwick bank hydrographic and beach profile survey was deposited in the Library of the House in July 1993. I will deposit both the summer 1993 hydrographic and beach profile survey and the H. R. Wallingford report, "Wave and Sand Transport Studies" as soon as possible.

Schools Inspectorate

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish details of the total cost of the administration of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools for each year since 1990-91.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales—OHMCI—was established as a separate Government Department in September 1992. Prior to that date, when Her Majesty's inspectors of schools formed part of the Welsh Office, administration costs were not separately identified. Administration costs after September 1992 are a matter for OHMCI.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish details of the expenditure incurred by the Welsh Office to inform schools regarding application for grant-maintained status.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The day-to-day costs involved in providing schools with information about grant-maintained status are met out of the Department's running costs and it is not possible to disaggregate them.

It is, however, possible to identify two specific initiatives as they involved the use of outside contractors. In October 1992 three booklets on the grant-maintained arrangements were issued to all schools in Wales. The cost of producing and distributing these was £23,900. In October and November last year three conferences on grant-maintained status were arranged for heads and governors of schools. The cost of these has still to be finalised.

Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met representatives of organisations representing housing co-operatives to discuss funding and strategy; what is his policy regarding the development of housing co-operatives; what criteria he applies when determining financial assistance to housing co-operatives; what plans he has to encourage the development of housing co-operatives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I expect Housing for Wales and local authorities to consider proposals for such schemes on their merits in the context of local housing strategies and available resources.

Dinas Dinlle Beach

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received in respect of Dinas Dinlle beach, Gwynedd; what steps he is taking to ensure the safety and cleanliness of all beaches in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No such representations have been received by my right hon. Friend. In common with the large majority of bathing waters on the Welsh coastline identified under the EC bathing waters directive, Morfa Dinlle—which includes the beach at Dinas Dinlle—consistently meets its mandatory standards. Dwr Cymru is currently engaged in a £230 million remedial works programme to ensure that all EC identified bathing waters in Wales meet these standards. Under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, district councils have a duty to ensure that all public amenity beaches are kept clear of litter and refuse above the mean high water mark.

Mink Farm, Llanybydder

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 7 December, Official Report, column 181, and 31 January, Official Report, column 524, in respect of a mink farm at Llanybydder, Dyfed, established in February 1988, what reasons were given for the withdrawal of the application for a licence; and on what grounds the mink farm was allowed to operate without a licence.

Mr. Redwood: No reasons were given for the withdrawal of the licence application. The mink farm was allowed to operate pending a decision on the licence application.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what percentage of hip replacement operations carried out in (a) Wales and (b) at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic centre, Rhydlafar, Cardiff, in the last three years have required revision operations;

(2) what percentage of hip replacement operations using the Zimmer implant carried out (a) in Wales and (b) at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic centre, Rhydlafar, Cardiff, in the last three years have required revision operations;

(3) what percentage of hip replacement operations using the Johnson and Johnson implant carried out (a) in Wales and (b) at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic centre, Rhydlafar, Cardiff, in the last three years have required revision operations;

(4) what percentage of hip replacement operations using the BioMet implant carried out (a) in Wales and (b) at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic centre, Rhydlafar, Cardiff, in the last three years have required revision operations.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally.

Rural Planning

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the current major issues being examined by each department devoted to rural strategic policy planning in (a) the Development Board for Rural Wales and (b) the Welsh Development Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: (a) The DBRW's corporate plan identifies the following strategic issues which will impact on its policy in the medium term:

—impact of the recession
—agricultural change and the impact of CAP
—the closure of Trawsfynydd power station
—future European priorities
—environmental improvement, especially the Board's sites and property —partnership with other public bodies
—private sector involvement in property development
—Newtown housing transfers

More generally the board will also take account of the impact of other policies which might affect rural areas in co-operation, where appropriate, with other agencies such as the Welsh Development Agency and the Rural Development Commission.

(b) The Welsh Development Agency's rural development programme for 1994-95 will continue to support the rural economy by targeting resources at specific rural locations, working in partnership with other organisations, and identifying new economic opportunities. The agency will continue to become involved in European Commission initiatives specifically designed for rural areas, and will continue to support sectoral initiatives.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many posts there are on (a) the Development Board for Rural Wales and (b) the Welsh Development Agency devoted to strategic rural policy planning; and if he will list the departments and their responsibilities and the grades of those posts.

Mr. Redwood: The development and marketing departments of the Development Board for Rural Wales, which employ some 55 professional staff, have the main responsibility for strategic rural policy planning. However, a number of other board staff have some involvement in the development of its rural policies, but this is not separately identifiable or measurable. The Welsh Development Agency also has a number of staff with responsibilities for strategic rural planning, although some have other responsibilities too.

I have asked the chief executive of the DBRW and the chief executive's office at the WDA to write to the hon.

Member with details of the grades and responsibilities of the posts involved. Copies of the replies will be placed in the Library of the House.

South Glamorgan Health Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost to public funds of (a) the dismissal and subsequent exoneration of Alan Crew as unit general manager of the Cardiff Royal Group of Hospitals and (b) the suspension on full pay and preparation of, and withdrawal of, disciplinary proceedings against consultant orthopaedic surgeon and director of the Welsh Office treatment centre, Mr. Ian Mackie; and whether South Glamorgan health authority has sought any additional contingency funds assistance from his Department to cover these costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: These are matters for South Glamorgan health authority to handle as employer. The authority has not sought any additional financial assistance in respect of either case.

University of Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency and the chairman of the Welsh Higher Education Funding Council in relation to the winding-up of the University of Wales review.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None.

Arable Areas

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in how many cases payments to farmers and landowners under the arable area payments scheme have been withheld or recovered in Wales; what is the amount of money withheld or recovered in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Every case in which payments may be withheld or recovered is examined very carefully and applicants have an opportunity to comment before a final decision is taken. This means that it is possible to provide only very provisional figures at this stage. Some 30 payments have so far been reduced or withheld entirely, but there are further cases still under consideration. These figures exclude penalties for late applications and adjustments made following corrections notified by the applicant under the special arrangements which applied in 1993 for dealing with genuine errors. The total amounts withheld in individual cases vary considerably.

Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place a copy in the Library of each annual audit and any quinquennial value for money or other extraordinary audit of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales and Heartbeat Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The summarised accounts of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, which on its establishment on 1 April 1987 took over responsibility for Heartbeat Wales, are audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General each year and are laid before the House.

Lloyds Bank

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet representatives of Lloyds bank to discuss their proposal to close their Welsh headquarters and move the administration to Taunton.

Mr. Redwood: I like to maintain contact with the banks and hope to be able to meet Lloyds bank shortly to discuss a range of matters.

HEALTH

Respite Beds

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of respite beds for (a) elderly people, (b) people with a mental illness and (c) people with learning difficulties in each year since 1979.

Mr. Bowis: Places for respite care are not separately identified on the routine statistical returns. The closest available information concerns local authority-arranged short-term placements but these figures include not only residents receiving respite care but those admitted for other reasons, such as assessment, emergency and phased care.

Paediatricians

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultant paediatricians, (b) specialist trained paediatric nurses and (c) hospital nurses have been employed in the Trent region in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table.

Hospital nurses, qualified nurses in paediatric area of work and consultant paediatricians—Trent region at 30 September 1988 to 1992, excluding agency and locum staff

Whole-time equivalents	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992
Consultant paediatrics/ paediatric neurology	60	60	60	70	70
Qualified paediatric nursing staff	840	910	960	1,020	1,020
Hospital nurses	31,930	31,900	31,910	31,660	29,530
Project 2000	—	—	—	—	1,090
Community nurses	4,210	4,150	4,140	4,190	4,160
Hospital midwives	1,650	1,650	1,710	1,630	1,600

Notes

1. All figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Qualified paediatric nursing staff include some who may not be registered RSCNs.
3. Project 2000 nursing statistics supplied by Trent RHA.
4. Community nursing staff includes those in primary health care—such as health visiting, district nursing, school nursing etc—and community midwives.

Patient Transport Service

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will investigate the extent to which the specification on which the tendering procedure for the patient transport service contracts in North Staffordshire was based matches the existing level of PTS;

(2) if she will investigate whether the specification on which the successful bid for the passenger transport service contract in North Staffordshire is based takes precise account of high-dependency cases transported between different clinics and units; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: We have no plans to carry out an investigation. The issue of the patient transport service contract for north Staffordshire is being resolved through local conciliation.

London Hospitals

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which London hospitals she has visited during the last 12 months; and what were the dates and times of her visits.

Dr. Mawhinney: Details of ministerial visits to hospitals in London during the last 12 months are shown in the table.

Minister	Hospital	Date
Minister for Health	St. Bartholomew's Hospital	21 January 1993
Minister for Health	Royal London Hospital	24 February 1993
Minister for Health	Eastman Dental Hospital	3 March 1993

Minister for Health	Guy's Hospital	13 July 1993
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Lords	Royal Marsden Hospital	23 July 1993
Secretary of State	Whittington Hospital	24 August 1993
Secretary of State	Chelsea and Westminster Hospital	22 September 1993
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health	West Middlesex Hospital	3 November 1993
Secretary of State	St. Mark's Hospital	6 December 1993
Minister for Health	St. Thomas's Hospital	9 December 1993
Minister for Health	Guy's Hospital	9 December 1993
Secretary of State	Homerton Hospital	20 December 1993

GP Prescriptions

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was, in each NHS region, the number, value and value per head, of (a) all GP prescribed prescriptions and (b) GP prescriptions prescribed generically for the years 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information available is shown in the tables.

Bjork-Shiley Heart Valves

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the serial numbers and types of Bjork-Shiley convexo-concave valves are recorded as part of a patient's medical history.

Mr. Sackville: The content of medical records is a matter for local decision.

Community Care, Housing and Homelessness

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the 10 local authorities participating in the study of community care, housing and homelessness undertaken by the NHS management Executive.

Mr. Bowis: This is one of a number of special studies being carried out jointly by the social services inspectorate and the NHS Management Executive as part of the Department of Health's programme of monitoring community care implementation. The Department of the Environment is jointly involved in this study.

The 10 local authorities being visited are:

Bradford
Camden
Dudley
Durham
Haringey
Hounslow
Nottinghamshire
Suffolk
Wandsworth
West Sussex

The special studies are based on social services authorities, but each of the 10 studies involves social services, health and housing agencies.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the outcome of discussions held with the Data Protection Registrar relating to the use of copyright legislation to protect the privacy of individuals whose personal data are contained in medical records; what discussions were held on whether copyright legislation would prevent the use of medical records for other purposes by another Department of State; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: There have been no discussions with the Data Protection Registrar relating to the use of copyright legislation to protect the privacy of individuals whose personal data are contained in medical records. The confidentiality of personal data in medical records is protected by the common law, health professionals' ethical responsibilities and, in the case of computerised data, the Data Protection Act 1984.

The only discussions with the Data Protection Registrar regarding copyright have been about the use of Crown copyright to ensure national health service numbers are used only for NHS purposes.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of whether the personal data to be contained in an NHS administrative register are more sensitive than the personal data contained in community charges registers were; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what plans she has to protect personal data to be contained in NHS administrative registers in the same way as the Government afforded protection to personal data contained in community charge registers; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Security and confidentiality of personal data to be held in the national health service administrative register will be carefully protected. Measures to secure this are being developed and tested. Data will be available only to those who need to know it for NHS purposes, and the Data Protection Act 1984 will be complied with.

Section 64 Funding

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many applications were received for section 64 funding for the financial year commencing 1 April; and how many were refused;

(2) which organisations have received section 64 funding for the financial year commencing 1 April; and how much has been allocated to each one.

Mr. Bowis: A total of 472 applications were received for possible support commencing 1 April 1994. They are still being processed.

Performance Standards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of all contracts between district health authorities and provider units as at July 1993 set specific performance standards.

Dr. Mawhinney: The NHS management executive expects the NHS to improve the quality of services provided to patients through standard setting. However, details of contracts are not monitored centrally.

Waiting Times

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she will require NHS hospitals and trusts to publish maximum waiting times from receipt of a general practitioners referral to admission as well as from first out-patient appointment to admission;

(2) what proportion of NHS hospitals and trusts had, at July 1993, published their current maximum admission times for each specialty; and which hospital or trust had the longest and shortest waiting time at 1 April 1993 in each specialty.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on waiting times for in-patient and day-case treatment by specialty and by district health authority and trust is given in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England", which is published twice yearly. The latest published figures are for March and September 1993 and copies are available in the Library.

Information on waiting times to first out-patient appointment is not yet collected.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what proportion of cases an emergency ambulance arrived within 14 minutes in an urban area and within 19 minutes in a rural area in 1992-93.

Me. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Percentage of emergency responses within patients charter standard—95 per cent.—1992-93

	Per cent.
Rural ambulance services	96·9
Urban ambulance services[1]	94·1

[1]This excludes information on the London ambulance service.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last received a submission from the North Staffordshire district health authority in respect of a request to lower the Orcon standard for north Staffordshire; what were the reasons for the decision on this; and if she will place a copy of her reply in the Library.

Mr. Sackville: Ministers have received no such submission.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the Orcon standard for accident and emergency service in respect of (a) the West Midland ambulance trust and (b) the Staffordshire ambulance trust for (i) 1992 and (ii) 1993.

Mr. Sackville: The national patients charter standards for these two trusts in both years are:

West Midlands ambulance trust—14 minutes
Staffordshire ambulance service—19 minutes

The reason for the difference is that the first standard relates to an urban area, and the second to a rural area.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people had been on hospital waiting lists in England in total, and in each specialty on 1 July 1992 and on 1 July 1993 for (a) three months or less, (b) six months or less, (c) 12 months or less, (d) 24 months or less or (e) over 24 months.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on waiting times by specialty for in-patient and day-case treatment is given in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England". This is published twice yearly for March and September and copies are available in the Library. Information is given in time bands of zero to five months, six to 11 months, 12 to 23 months and 24 months and over.

Provisional waiting time figures in annual time bands are published quarterly. These show that in England at 30 June 1992 there were 843,210 patients waiting less than a one year, 925,695 waiting less than two years and 1,244 waiting over two years. At 30 June 1993 there were 952,023 waiting under one year, 1,017,488 waiting under two years and only 275 waiting over two years, all of whom were waiting for specialised infertilty treatment at a London hospital.

Selected Items

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what considerations underlie her policy not to hold information centrally in respect of the new selected items that have been made available to the national health service; if she will make it her policy in future to hold a list centrally; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under the selected list scheme, drugs may be removed from prescription at national health service expense on the advice of an independent, expert committee. Drugs and other substances which are to be added to the list of items which may not be prescribed under the national health service are listed in statutory instruments.

Patients Charters

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the health authorities in England which at July 1993 had published local patients charters containing detailed information on local health services, including quality standards and maximum waiting times;

(2) how many (a) national health service trusts and (b) directly managed provider units had (i) published or (ii) not published charters containing detailed information on quality standards and maximum waiting times as at July 1993.

Dr. Mawhinney: Health authorities, national health service trusts and directly managed units are not required to publish local charters, although many have done so.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of national health service authorities have published reports on the performance of individual local hospital and ambulance services against patients charter rights and standards in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: All district health authorities have published patients charter annual reports for 1992-93.

Dental Treatment

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rights the patient has by way of complaint if a dentist refuses to treat a patient under the national health service, and then the private treatment is unsatisfactory.

Dr. Mawhinney: Unsatisfactory private treatment is a matter between the dentist and his patient. It is not covered by the national health service complaints procedure.

Paediatric Speech and Language Therapy

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on paediatric speech and language therapy by each NHS purchaser (a) in absolute terms and (b) as a proportion of their total speech and language therapy budget, in the most recent financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Bowis: Expenditure on speech and language therapy services in England has increased by 184 per cent. in real terms since 1978-79 to £60·4 million in 1991-92; expenditure on paediatric and adult services cannot be separately identified. Some 66 per cent. of new episodes of treatment commenced in 1991-92 were with children aged from birth to 15 years.

Mentally Ill People

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the changes in the number of beds in mental hospitals and hospitals for people with learning disabilities (a) in the South Birmingham health authority area, (b) in the West Midlands health authority area and (c) in England in each of the last five years.

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is contained in the annual publication "Bed Availability for England", financial year 1992-93. Copies of this publication are available in the Library.

Care Plans

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of social services clients had an individual care plan on (a) 1 April 1992 and (b) 1 April 1993.

Mr. Bowis: This information should be held by social services departments of local authorities.

NHS Complaints

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS complaints received between 1 April 1992 and 31 March 1993 were dealt with within (a) one week, (b) one month, (c) three months and (d) more than three months.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 7 February at column 43.

Operations (Cancellation)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients had their operations cancelled on the day they were due to arrive in hospital in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not collected centrally. Information is, however, collected on performance against the patients charter standard on twice cancelled operations, and is available in the NHS management executive annual report 1992-93, copies of which are in the Library.

Chemical Entity Products

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what considerations underlie her policy not to hold information centrally in respect of the new chemical entity products made available to the national health service since February 1993 that would have been covered by the selected list scheme; if she will make it her policy in future to hold a list centrally; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: All drugs, including those containing a new chemical entity, must be licensed by the Medicines Control Agency before they may be prescribed for patients under the national health service. Once a product is licensed it is the manufacturer who decides when to bring it on to the market. Manufacturers do not need to notify the Department of this decision.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue guidelines to local authorities to prevent juvenile offenders from being sent abroad during their punishment.

Mr. Bowis: We intend to issue guidance shortly.

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he issues to social services departments to ensure that juveniles in their care attend at court hearings on the day they are due to appear.

Mr. Bowis: Volume 1 of the Children Act 1989 guidance and regulations makes it clear that it is the responsibility of a local authority to ensure that any juvenile remanded to local authority accommodation is produced in court at the date, place and time specified by the court. A copy of the guidance and regulations is available in the Library.

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many local authorities use private residential homes in the treatment of juvenile offenders;

(2) if he will provide a breakdown by local authority of the number of young offenders in (a) council-run secure accommodation and (b) private residential homes or schools at the latest available date.

Mr. Bowis: Information available centrally about the number of children and young people accommodated compulsorily by local authorities relates to the legislation under which they are held and not to offences committed or alleged.

The numbers in secure accommodation at 31 March 1992 who were admitted on remand or detained or subject to a care order in criminal proceedings are given in table A.

Numbers of children and young people who were accommodated compulsorily by local authorities in private residential homes or schools at 31 March 1992, and were on remand or detained or subject to care order in criminal proceedings, are given in table B. Only local authorities that submitted valid data for the period ending 31 March 1992 and had at least one child accommodated in this way at 31 March 1992 are listed.

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change the guidance his Department issues to local authorities regarding the placement of young offenders.

Mr. Bowis: Current guidance to local authorities derives from a number of sources. It is kept under review to reflect changing circumstances.

Orthodontic Treatment

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice her Department gives to health authorities about the provision of orthodontic treatment and the recruitment of orthodontists in the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: The planning and provision of dental treatment including orthodontic treatment is a matter for district health authorities to undertake jointly with family health services authorities. Recruitment is a matter for local decision. Much orthodontic treatment is provided by general dental practitioners who are independent contractors.

Departmental Press Release

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 377, what is the significance of the reference number H93/1145 heading the Department of Health press release of 31 December entitled "Your Health Matters More in '94."

Mr. Sackville: There is not any significance. A technical problem early in 1993 meant the first press releases could not be consecutively numbered from H93/1. The number of the first press release in 1993, H93/472, continued from 1992. The number of the last press release in 1993, the 675th, was H93/1145.

Cannabinol

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will seek a report from the Committee on Safety of Medicines concerning the alleged therapeutic uses of cannabinol; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: We are aware of recent claims about the therapeutic value of cannabinoids in the treatment of multiple sclerosis and other conditions.

The Medicines Control Agency would seek the advice of the Committee on the Safety of Medicines on the receipt of an application for a licence to treat these conditions with cannabinoids.

Care in the Community Grant

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects to have completed her examination on the need for damping the alterations to the grant for care in the community for the Isle of Wight;

(2) when she expects to respond to the Department of the Environment Minister's letter about the effect of the care in the community grant for 1994-95 for the Isle of Wight;

(3) when she will make a response to the deputation on the grant for 1994-95 for care in the community in the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Bowis: I have carefully considered the representations made by the Isle of Wight county council in response to its indicative allocation of the special transitional grant for 1994-95. I understand that similar representations were made to Ministers at the Department of the Environment. I have concluded that the distribution method announced on 2 December 1993 remains the most sensible and appropriate, and in the best interests of community care across the country as a whole. This decision was notified in writing to the hon. Member and to the Isle of Wight county council on 2 February 1994.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her calculations reveal on the effect of the standard spending assessment for care in the community in 1995-96 as a result of the alterations in the grant for 1994-95 for the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Bowis: The personal social services element of the standard spending assessment for the Isle of Wight for 1994-95 has been set at £14·12 million, an increase of almost 18 per cent. over the current year. The figures for 1995-96 will be announced in due course.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those local authorities who find themselves in a similar position to the Isle of Wight with their grant for 1994-95 for care in the community.

Mr. Bowis: None. Care in the community is partly financed by the personal social services element of the standard spending assessment, partly by the special transitional grant and partly by decisions within each local authority as to priorities for spending of its overall spending assessment.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the hon. Member for Isle of Wight will receive copies of the literature promised by the officials at the meeting with the Under-Secretary, the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis), showing the Department's intention to alter the grant for the care in the community in 1994-95 and the effect it will have on a community like the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Bowis: Officials wrote, as promised, to the director of social services for the Isle of Wight on 22 December. A copy of that letter has been sent to the hon. Member.

Upper-limb Disorders

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people with work-related upper limb disorders; if she has commissioned any research into these disorders and their cause, or will be doing so; what medical advice she has about their cause; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has no such estimates and would seek to be advised by the Department of Employment, to whom the hon. Member has addresed a similar question.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, MRC, which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. We understand that the MRC is not currently supporting any research specifically into work-related upper limb disorders, but is always willing to consider scientifically based sound proposals for research. The prospects for funding of research into work-related upper limb disorders will, therefore, depend on the nature of any applications received.

There is no medical consensus on whether work-related upper limb disorders are a single syndrome or a collection of differing conditions; nor is there general agreement on their cause or treatment.

Mammography

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in which circumstances the national health service allow for mammography for women aged under 50 years; and what instances of mammography being refused for women of this age group have been drawn to her attention;

(2) in how many health authorities women in the 35 to 50 years age group are provided with free national health service mammograms upon request.

Mr. Sackville: Women under 50 will not be invited for routine screening for breast cancer; younger women at special risk may be offered mammography if referred by their general practitioner as will women with symptoms. This is a clinical decision and not one in which we would wish to interfere. No instances of mammography being refused have been drawn to our attention.

NHS Authorities (Membership)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all the chairs and members who serve concurrently on more than one NHS authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: Chairmen and non-executive members of national health service authorities may not serve concurrently on more than one such authority, excepting family health services authorities chairmen who may be appointed as a member of a regional health authority. Executive members of NHS authorities may serve on more than one authority. These appointments are a matter for the authorities themselves.

Elderly Persons' Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the number of places available in local authority elderly persons' homes for each year since 1979.

Mr. Bowis: The information available is shown in the table.

Number of places in staffed local authorities homes catering primarily for elderly people and young physically disabled people, England

Note: The decrease in places in 1991 and 1992 reflects the transfer of local authority homes to the independent sector and rationalisation.

Latero Flora

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 14 January, Official Report, columns 324-25, when she now expects the Medicines Control Agency to complete its investigation into the American-imported product Latero Flora and its active ingredient bacillus laterosporus.

Mr. Sackville: Following its earlier undertaking to stop promoting Latero Flora as a medicinal product, the supplier has now told the Medicines Control Agency that it ceased trading in the product three weeks ago. The agency will continue to work with other agencies to monitor the situation and protect public health.

Westcountry Ambulance Services Trust

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total annual budget of the Westcountry ambulance services trust.

Mr. Sackville: In 1993-94 the trust's income is planned to be £23·8 million.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the names and salaries of the chairman and non-executive directors of the Westcountry ambulance services trust.

Mr. Sackville: The chairman of the Westcountry ambulance services trust is Mr. James Pease-Watkin who receives an annual remuneration of £17,145.

The non-executive directors are Mrs. Betty Collard, Mr. Justin Luttrell, Mrs. Hilary Bucklar, Mr. Patrick Egan and Lt. Colonel Robert Perkins OBE. All non-executive directors receive an annual remuneration of £5,000.

Nurses Grading

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps have been taken to ensure monitoring takes place of the ethnic status of nurses appealing against their nurse clinical gradings;

(2) if she will provide statistics on the ethnic status of nurses appealing against their gradings and their rate of success.

Mr. Sackville: There are no plans to monitor centrally the ethnic status of nurses appealing against their grading. Under the clinical grading structure staff are graded according to the duties and responsibilities of the post occupied. Any staff who are unhappy with the grading of their post are able to challenge the employing authority's decision.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) HIV and (b) rectal gonorrhoea in the age groups 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22 years and over were notified to her Department in each year since 1987.

Mr. Sackville: Laboratory reports of HIV infections newly identified in England, Wales and Northern Ireland are made to the Public Health Laboratory Service AIDS centre at the communicable diseases surveillance centre. The number who were of the ages shown at the time their HIV infection was diagnosed is given for each year since 1987. The 1993 figures may not be complete.

Laboratory reports of rectal gonorrhoea are routinely received by the HIV/STD division at the communicable disease surveillance centre. The number who were of the ages shown at the time of report are shown broken down by sex for each year since 1989. Data are unavailable for 1988 and 1987. The 1993 figures may not be complete.

Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 599, whether a person may serve concurrently as a chair or non-executive director of a trust of NHS authority board and a shadow trust board.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the percentage of ethnic minority non-executive directors of NHS trusts, health authorities and family health services authorities in each year since 1990-91.

Dr. Mawhinney: Three per cent. of people currently appointed to national health service authorities and trusts in a non-executive capacity are from ethnic minorities. We are aiming to increase this proportion to 4 per cent. by September 1996. Information for earlier years is not available.

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to decrease funds to general practitioner fundholders who do not meet waiting list targets.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. Fundholders are expected to comply with patients charter standards in the same way as district health authorities, and are proving extremely effective in improving waiting times.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 198, what financial capital allocation each regional health authority will receive in 1994-95; and what is the aggregate capital allocation to national health service trusts in each regional area.

Mr. Sackville: The division of the regional capital planning totals announced on 7 December 1993 between regional health authorities and national health service trusts is set out in the table. Regions have now been notified of their capital allocations, and trusts their external financing limits, for 1994-95.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the number and percentage of invalidity benefit recipients who are in receipt of other sources of income by source and average amount of such other income.

Mr. Scott: Information on the number of invalidity benefit recipients who are in receipt of other sources of income is not available. Estimates of the percentage of invalidity benefit recipients who are in receipt of other sources of income and the average amount of such income are in the table.

Source	Percentage of invalidity benefit recipients	Average amount per week[1] £

Benefit Levels

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish the level in real terms of each benefit in 1979, or at time of introduction if later, and at present;

(2) what is the current level of each benefit; and what it was in 1979, or at the time of introduction, if later, in constant prices.

Mr. Burt: The information for the main social security benefits is in the table.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many benefit claimants there were, excluding unemployment-related claimants, in (a) 1979 and (b) 1993.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table. Figures relate to benefit recipients and unless otherwise stated have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Some claimants receive more than one benefit. It has not been possible to exclude unemployment-related claims except in the case of supplementary benefit/income support and unemployment benefit itself.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many staff from (a) the Benefits Agency medical service and (b) the Benefits Agency will be required to process claims for incapacity benefit; and how many of these staff will be qualified medical practitioners.

Mr. Scott: The estimated staffing consequences for the introduction of incapacity benefit appear in the financial memorandum accompanying the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Bill. Further refinement of these figures will depend upon decisions still to be taken by Parliament.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates his Department has as to the time it will take to process claims for the two thirds of claimants who will have their claims for incapacity benefit referred to the Benefits Agency medical service.

Mr. Scott: Until details of the new objective medical test are agreed we cannot produce precise estimates for how long each reference will take. Because cases will be referred while benefit is being paid, we do not expect any worsening of the overall clearance time for claims on account of the introduction of incapacity benefit.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what effect the receipt of the allowance for VAT will have upon retirement pensioners' entitlement to housing benefit.

Mr. Burt: For those in receipt of retirement pension at the standard basic rate, the extra help for VAT of 50p for a single pensioner and 70p for a pensioner couple will not affect housing benefit entitlement. Those on a modified basic retirement pension, who receive proportionally less help with VAT, will see some increase in their housing benefit entitlement. Couples, where each partner receives the standard rate pension in their own right, will see some decrease in their housing benefit entitlement but will gain by more than the 70p overall.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the average cost of housing benefit payments to (a) tenants of local authorities, (b) tenants of housing associations and (c) tenants of private landlords in the latest year for which the information is available.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 3 February 1994.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what effect the privatisation of parts of social security administration will have on the rights of a citizen to make a complaint of maladministration to the parliamentary ombudsman.

Mr. Hague: The jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration is unaffected where administrative functions of a Department are carried out by private contractors.

One Place Service

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of the population is served by local offices offering a single point of contact for help and information;

(2) what action his Department has taken in response to his one-stop consultation paper.

Mr. Burt: Following overwhelmingly positive responses to the one-stop discussion paper, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 9 September a national programme whereby all Benefits Agency district offices will provide a one-place service.

The one-place programme will mean that customers will be able to:

obtain advice and information on all benefits from their local Benefits Agency office; lodge a claim for any benefit at a local office, (regardless of where that benefit is processed) report a change of circumstance, receive reliable advice about the claim to benefit from that local office.

The Benefits Agency has issued to all its managers a national customer service definition so that staff are clear about the level and scope of service to be delivered.

The Benefits Agency has 159 districts with over 470 outlets. The national customer service definition will ensure that all customers will be able to receive a one-place service throughout the country by July 1994.

Although there are no figures available as to the number of Benefits Agency district offices already providing this service, work is under way to establish the current position and ensure that this level of service will be in place by July 1994.

Pensioners

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number and proportion of pensioners on benefits in (a) London and (b) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available.

Asbestosis

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of industrial injuries disablement benefit have been granted in each of the last five years for (a) people with primary carcinoma of the lung associated with asbestosis and (b) people with bilateral diffuse pleural thickening of the lungs associated with asbestosis (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) by region.

Mr. Scott: Information is not collected in the precise format requested. The available information is given in the table and relates only to medical assessments made by special medical boards in Great Britain.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what have been the annual costs of industrial injuries disablement benefit payments for asbestosis-related cases in each of the last five years.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for assistance from the independent living fund have been turned down during the current financial year on the grounds that the value of the applicant's existing care package totals £500 or more; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I am informed by the director of the independent living (1993) fund that 11 applications to the fund have been turned down on those grounds.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) successful applications for assistance were made to the independent living fund during the current financial year, (b) individuals receiving help from the independent living fund under the previous arrangements continued to receive help during the current financial year and (c) unsuccessful applications for help were made to the independent living fund in the current year; and if he will break these figures down by local authority.

Mr. Scott: I am informed by the director of the independent living (1993) fund that, as at 1 February, 187 successful applications had been made to the fund. A further 311 applications have been unsuccessful. At the same date, 19,137 former clients of the independent living fund were receiving payments from the independent living (extension) fund.

A breakdown of the figures at 1 February by local authority is not yet available. The table shows the breakdown of applications as at 31 December 1993.

Mortgages

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his current assessment of the number of people in receipt of direct assistance with their mortgage payments.

Mr. Burt: There are 562,000 cases with mortgage interest included in the assessment of benefit.

Source: Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry February 1993.

Note: The number of claimants has been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Family Benefits

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what percentages of children aged (a) under five years, (b) five to 11 years and (c) 12 to 15 years live in families receiving (i) income support and (ii) family credit; and what were the comparable figures in each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the precise form requested as income support and family credit were not introduced until April 1988. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Numbers and proportions of children in families receiving income support

Year	Under five years	Per cent.	Five to 11 years	Per cent.	12-15 years	Per cent.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the total number of families with children in receipt of (a) income support, (b) family credit and (c) disability working allowance include a qualifying child for child support purposes.

Mr. Burt: This information is not available centrally.

Unemployed Volunteers

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what proposals he has to encourage unemployed people to offer their services as volunteers and to improve the conditions for doing so;

(2) what representations he has received from the National Association of Voluntary Bodies on the need for further improvements in conditions for unemployed volunteers in receipt of benefits.

Mr. Burt: The Government strongly support opportunities for volunteering and provide a variety of advice and opportunities for the unemployed who wish to do so. Publicity leaflets outline the advantages to unemployed people who wish to undertake voluntary work and point out that as volunteers they can now be allowed 48 hours notice before taking up a job opportunity.

Community action will this year provide 50,000 opportunities for unemployed people to do work of benefit to the community. Participants receive an allowance equivalent to £10 per week more than their weekly benefit rate.

Additionally, the benefit rules contain a more generous provision for this treatment of earnings received by people such as retained fire fighters, lifeboatmen and others who volunteer for forms of special service to the community.

No recent representations have been received from the National Association of Voluntary Bodies.

National Association of Pension Funds

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make public the National Association of Pension Funds submission in response to the Government's Green Paper on social security reforms of September 1985.

Mr. Hague: Publication is a matter for the National Association of Pension Funds.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefits savings were made in the first nine months as the result of the collection of child support maintenance; and what plans he has to revise the targets for the Child Support Agency, in particular those for benefit savings, number of applications and completed assessments, following the recent changes in the rules.

Mr. Burt: For the period from April to December 1993, benefit savings of £214·5 million have so far been reported. This figure does not represent the total amount of savings achieved because some will be scored retrospectively.

The policy changes will have an effect on the agency's achievements against targets this year, but it is too early to be precise about the impact. We do not intend to revise the targets at this stage in the year.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate both the income from Child Support Agency fees and the Child Support Agency running costs for the first nine months of its operation, both the expected income from Child Support Agency fees and running costs in each year from 1993-94 to 1997-98; and what plans he has to increase the fees from April 1994 or at any point during this year.

Mr. Burt: A provisional figure for the agency's total expenditure for the period April 1993 to December 1993 is £70 million. The money collected from fees in this period was £756,000. This reflects the fact that the assessment process is taking longer than expected. The latest information currently available for 1994-95 and 1995-96 is in the table. Information on 1996-97 and revised estimates for 1994-95 and 1995-96 will be available in the DSS departmental report 1994, to be published in March.

A routine review of fee levels will take place in October 1994. There are no plans to increase the fees from April 1994.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the estimated cost of introducing a £5, £10 or £15 disregard on income support for parents with care in receipt of child support maintenance as from, (a) April 1994, (b) October 1994 and (c) April 1995.

Mr. Burt: The full-year costs of a £5, £10 and £15 disregard, assuming one third of lone parents to be receiving maintenance, are in the table. This proportion is broadly in line with what we expect the Child Support Agency to achieve in 1994-95.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments have been so notified and consulted upon since June 1992;

(2) which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Waldegrave: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Council Members (Schools)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the schools attended by each member of the Council of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Mr. Waldegrave: According to their respective entries in "Who's Who", the schools attended by the members of the Council of the Duchy of Lancaster were Winchester: the Duchy Attorney General, Mr. Timothy Lloyd QC, Ampleforth: the Duchy Receiver General, Major Sir Shane Blewitt KCVO, Eton: the Vice Chancellor of the County Palatine, the hon. Mr. Justice Morritt: and Sir Michael Bunbury Bt, Stowe: Sir Simon Towneley KCVO, Gresham's: Professor Christopher Howes CB, and Charterhouse: Mr. J. R. Sclater.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Committee on Human Genome Research.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Advisory Committee on Human Genome Research is chaired by Professor William D. P. Stewart FRS, chief scientific adviser, Office of Science and Technology, and its members are as follows:

Professor Thomas Blundell FRS,
Director-General, Agricultural and Food Research Council;
Sir Walter F. Bodmer FRS,
Director-General, Imperial Cancer Research Fund;
Professor Sydney Brenner FRS,
Department of Medicine, University of Cambridge;
Dr. Peter Doyle CBE,
Director of Research and Technology, Zeneca Pharmaceuticals plc;
Professor Malcolm A. Ferguson-Smith FRS,
Department of Pathology, University of Cambridge;
Dr. Trevor Jones FPS FRSC,
Director of Research, The Wellcome Foundation Ltd;
Dr. Bridget Ogilvie ScD FIBiol Hon FRCPath,
Director, The Wellcome Trust;
Professor Michael Peckham FRCP FRCPGlas FRCR,
Director of Research and Development, Department of Health;
Dr. George Poste,
Research and Development Chairman, SmithKline Beecham Pharmaceuticals;
Sir Dai Rees FRS,
Secretary, Medical Research Council;
Dr. Geoffrey Robinson,
Chief Adviser on Science and Technology, Department of Trade and Industry;
Sir Richard Sykes,
Deputy Chairman and Chief Executive, Glaxo Holdings plc.

Crown Bodies (Inspection and Enforcement)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he proposes that Crown bodies be fully brought within the regulatory provisions on inspection and enforcement which apply to others.

Mr. Waldegrave: The citizen's charter said that public services should not, through Crown immunities, be shielded from inspection and enforcement on such matters as health and safety regulations. It will take time, however, to bring all existing legislation into line. As legislative opportunites arise, Crown bodies are being brought within the regulatory provisions which apply to others, falling short of exposing the Crown itself, as opposed to negligent employees, to criminal prosecution. Meanwhile, Crown bodies are expected to behave as if they were bound by the regulations.

As a result of food safety and environmental legislation in recent years, if a Crown body is found to be falling below standards, enforcement authorities can go back to the courts for a declaration of non-compliance, which would be followed by immediate corrective action.

The Health and Safety Executive will be sharpening procedures for serving Crown notices for infringement of health and safety legislation and will be considering the implications of removing Crown immunity.

In addition, the Home Office has recently completed a review of the Fire Precautions Act 1971. The question of Crown immunity is one of many aspects being considered.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 7 February 1994]: My private office does not have a paper shredding machine. Within my Department, including agencies, there are nine shredding machines. COI and HMSO, which are separate departments for which I am responsible, have 50 shredders and nine compactors between them.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the National Enterprise Board.

Mr. McLoughlin: The members currently appointed to the National Enterprise Board, are:

Mr. I. Harvey
Mr. R. Kathoke
Dr. J. Morton
Sir R. Riley

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the Monitoring Committee on Misleading Price Indications.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Monitoring Committee on Misleading Price Indications was stood down on 7 May 1993.

Manufacturing (Assistance)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to assist the manufacturing industries in the north-west region.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Manufacturing industries in the north-west will continue to benefit from a large part of the region retaining assisted areas status. Companies in those areas are eligible for financial assitance under schemes such as regional selective assistance and regional enterprise grants.

Manufacturing industry in the region will also benefit from objective 2 areas which allow for improvements in infrastructure. The north-west has a number of areas designated by the EC, including west Cumbria as far south as Barrow, large parts of east Lancashire, the greater and more industrial part of Greater Manchester, the smaller industrial part of west Lancashire, Widnes and Runcorn, Ellesmere Port and Neston. Of course, objective 1 scheduling has already been designated for the Merseyside county.

Parcelforce

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to make a statement about the future of Parcelforce.

Mr. McLoughlin: I cannot yet say when my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade will be able to make a statement about Parcelforce; the future of the business is still being considered, alongside the main Post Office review. We are, however, still firmly of the view that Parcelforce belongs in the private sector, because it is a business which competes with private sector parcels companies for the very large majority of its services.

Underwriting Costs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has yet received the results of the Office of Fair Trading study of underwriting costs.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Director General of Fair Trading advises me that he has recently received the results of the independent research which he commissioned on this subject. He is currently considering this before deciding what action he should take, if any.

Deregulation

Mr. Heppell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which organisations were consulted by his Department on each of the recommendations of the business deregulation task forces before they were agreed and action proposed in the DTI document, "Deregulation: Cutting the Red Tape".

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Each of the task force recommendations agreed or agreed in principle by the Government has been or will be the subject of appropriate consultation with interested parties.

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the consumer representatives on the advisory panel and task forces on deregulation.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The deregulation advisory panel and the seven business deregulation task forces were set up specifically to convey the views of business and did not therefore include any consumer representatives.

Malaysia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will quantify the long-term project support given by the Export Credits Guarantee Department to Malaysia towards each of (a) the Pergau dam project, (b) defence and defence-related contracts and (c) other projects, in 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Needham: In 1990-91 and 1991-92 the Export Credits Guarantee Department issued guarantees worth £945 million in support of United Kingdom export projects with Malaysia. Of this total £417 million related to the Pergau dam project and £458 million to defence business.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many files marked "Not for National Audit Office eyes" relating to the Malaysian arms deal are held in his Department.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 1 February 1994]: My Department does not hold any files marked "Not for NAO eyes" relating to the Malaysian arms deal.

Ministerial Visits Abroad

Mr. Tim Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which countries visited by Trade and Industry Ministers since June 1987 have subsequently placed orders for arms.

Mr. Needham: Given the strength and competitiveness of the United Kingdom defence industry I would expect orders to have been placed by most countries visited; exports would not be licensed to certain countries where it is thought inappropriate or where there are internationally agreed embargoes. It would not be possible to provide a detailed answer except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all the overseas visits that have been made by Trade and Industry Ministers since June 1987; and what was the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Needham: Information on all overseas visits by all Trade and Industry Ministers for any purpose since June 1987 could only be made available at disproportionate cost. The following Trade and Industry Ministers have made trade promotion visits overseas to date in the financial year 1993-94.

The President of the Board
Mexico/Argentina—June 1993
Japan/Australia—January 1993

The Minister for Trade
Ireland—July 1993
Czech Republic—September 1993
Qatar/UAE—April 1993
Turkey—July 1993
Hong Kong/Korea—April 1993
Thailand/Indonesia/Singapore—June 1993
Japan/Malaysia—September 1993
China/Taiwan/Hong Kong—October 1993
Singapore/Malaysia/Indonesia—November-December 1993
India—November 1993

The Minister for Energy
Kazakhstan—September-October 1993
Thailand/Malaysia/Indonesia—September 1993

The former Minister, the hon. Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh)
Slovenia—March 1993
Ghana—April 1993

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Technology
Zimbabwe/Tanzania—October 1993
Brazil—September 1993

Baroness Denton
Singapore—September 1993

Lord Strathclyde
China—October 1993

Auditors' Supervisory Bodies

Mrs. Browning: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has received the second annual reports of the recognised supervisory bodies for company auditors under part II of the Companies Act 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have received the second annual reports of all the recognised supervisory bodies for company auditors, and have placed copies in the Library. My Department will be discussing the contents of the reports with the bodies.

Post Office

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when he intends to introduce a new independent regulator to advise him on issues affecting the interests of Post Office customers;

(2) when he expects to introduce measures to allow him to set the performance standards for the Post Office.

Mr. McLoughlin: The precise method of implementation of these commitments, which were set out in the citizens charter, is under consideration in the wider review of the structure and organisation of the Post Office. Both require primary legislation and would be included in any legislation arising from the review. The review is still continuing.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the subjects on which his Department or its predecessors formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. McLoughlin: There are 10 DTI agencies: Accounts Services Agency, Companies House, Insolvency Service, Laboratory of the Government Chemist, National Engineering Laboratory, National Physical Laboratory, National Weights and Measures Laboratory, Patent Office, Radiocommuncations Agency and Warren Spring Laboratory. The chief executives of these are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

Champagne

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bottles of champagne were imported from France in each year since 1979.

Mr. Needham: Information on imports of champagne is not available in terms of bottles. The available information is given in the following table:

Year	Million litres
1979	7·18
1980	6·43
1981	6·04
1982	5·93
1983	7·52
1984	9·12
1985	11·41
1986	12·40
1987	14·38
1988	15·48
1989	18·04
1990	16·12
1991	10·58
1992	11·10

Tied Housing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of the tied house system.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Between 1986 and 1988 the Monopolies and Mergers Commission undertook an extensive study of the supply of beer in the United Kingdom, in particular the tied house system, which assessed its benefits and adverse effects.

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 17 December 1993, Official Report, column 985, under which safeguards provisions the transfers of plutonium to the United States took place; what notification of the plutonium exports was given in advance to the safeguards authorities; and what information he has on plutonium exported to the United States between 1963 and 1979

Mr. Eggar: Plutonium sent under the defence agreement with the United States is not consigned there under safeguards. Any transfers of military plutonium are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. Following the announcements by President Johnson and Mr. Krushchev that their Governments were reducing their planned production of fissile materials for weapons purposes, my right hon. Friend the then Prime Minister advised the House on 21 April 1964, at column 1098, that he had been informed by the United States Government that they had no intention of using for weapons purposes any of the plutonium produced in the reactors of the generating boards and consigned under the Defence agreement. In 1984 the United States Government confirmed that this plutonium had not been used in weapons and that it was their policy not to so use it. This confirmation was reported to Parliament by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Energy on 9 April 1984, at column 6. I have nothing to add to these statements.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all the witnesses to be called in public session before the Scott inquiry to date; what has been the total cost incurred by the inquiry; and what proportion of these costs have been taken up in expenses paid to witnesses for the provision of copies of documentation or travel costs to attend the inquiry by invitation.

Mr. Needham: The following witnesses have appeared to date in public session before the Scott inquiry:

4 May 1993—Sir Richard Luce, formerly Minister of State, FCO
5 May 1993—Mr. Hart, ECGD
5 May 1993—Mr. Bryars, ECGD
10 May 1993—Mr. Sandars, MoD
11 May 1993—Lt. Col. Glazebrook, MoD
12 May 1993—Lt. Col. Glazebrook, MoD
21 June 1993—Lt. Col. Glazebrook, MoD
22 June 1993—Lt. Col. Glazebrook, MoD
17 May 1993—Sir Adam Butler, formerly Minister for Defence Procurement
19 May 1993—Mr. Channon, formerly Secretary of State for Trade and Industry
24 May 1993—Sir Hal Miller, M.P.
27 May 1993—Sir Patrick Mayhew, formerly Attorney-General (now Secretary of State for Northern Ireland)
11 June 1993—Mr. Collins, FCO
15 June 1993—Sir Stephen, Egerton FCO
28 June 1993—Mr. Patey, FCO
30 June 1993—Mr. James, Eagle Trust PLC
30 June 1993—Mr. Fellgett, HM Treasury
7 July 1993—Mr. Vereker, FCO
15 July 1993—Mr. Higson, formerly FCO
19 July 1993—Sir David Miers, FCO
20 July 1993—Sir David Miers, FCO
27 July 1993—Mr. Blackley, FCO
13 September 1993—Mr. Gore-Booth, FCO
14 September 1993—Mr. Gore-Booth, FCO
15 September 1993—Mr. Young, FCO
20 September 1993—Mr. Renton, formerly Minister of State, FCO
21 September 1993—Mr. Mellor, formerly Minister of State, FCO
22 September 1993—Mr. Waldegrave, formerly Minister of State, FCO (now Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster)
23 September 1993—Mr. Waldegrave, formerly Minister of State, FCO (now Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster)
12 October 1993—Mr. Waldegrave, formerly Minister of State, FCO (now Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster)
19 October 1993—Mr. Fuller, FCO
20 October 1993—Mr. Lamport, FCO
25 October 1993—Mr. Haswell, FCO
6 October 1993—Mr. McDonald, MoD
7 October 1993—Mr. McDonald, MoD
26 October 1993—Mr. McDonald, MoD
28 October 1993—Mr. McDonald, MoD
1 November 1993—Mr. Barrett, MoD
2 November 1993—Mr. Barrett, MoD
3 November 1993—Mr. Barrett, MoD
4 November 1993—Mr. Barrett, MoD
8 November 1993—Mr. Sherrington, FCO
22 November 1993—Mr. Beston, DTI
23 November 1993—Mr. Beston, DTI
24 November 1993—Mr. Beston, DTI
25 November 1993—Mr. Beston, DTI
26 November 1993—Mr. Beston, DTI
17 December 1993—Mr. Beston, DTI
30 November 1993—Mr. Steadman, DTI
1 December 1993—Mr. Steadman, DTI
8 December 1993—Baroness Thatcher, formerly Prime Minister
13 December 1993—Mr. Clark, formerly Minister for Defence Procurement and Minister for Trade
14 December 1993—Mr. Clark, formerly Minister for Defence Procurement and Minister for Trade
15 December 1993—Mr. Clark, formerly Minister for Defence Procurement and Minister for Trade
11 January 1994—Mr. Baker, formerly Home Secretary
12 January 1994—Lord Howe, formerly Foreign Secretary
17 January 1994—Mr. Major, Prime Minister
21 January 1994—Mr. Bevan, Cabinet Office
25 January 1994—Mr. Hurd, Foreign Secretary
26 January 1994—Mr. Petter, DTI
28 January 1994—Mr. Coolican, DTI

The direct cost incurred by the inquiry to date has been about £700,000.

Expenses paid by the inquiry to witnesses, for the provision of copies of documentation or travel costs, total to date about £400.

Most of the costs of providing documentation to witnesses and meeting travel expenses is met directly by the Departments in which the witnesses served.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contracts his Department or the energy technology support unit has placed with academic or independent research institutions since 1990 into the public acceptability of renewable energy technologies.

Mr. Eggar: The following 21 contracts have been placed since 1990 with academic institutions and independent consultants into, and associated with, the issues of public acceptability of renewables:

Titles

Template for Community Involvement/Consultation in the Development of Waste to Energy Projects.
Community Appraisal Relating to Hampshire County's Waste Strategy.
Farmers Current Attitudes to Energy Forestry in GB.
Community Forests Integrated Review Energy Capability.
Market Survey Investigating Conservatory Energies.
Public Attitude Survey at Delabole.
Video Production: Visual Impact of Wind Farms.
Provision of Advice on Planning Policy Guidance.
Provision of Advice on Impact of non-conforming Developments.
Preparation of Summary Report on Landscape Impact.
Mynddy Cemmaes Windfarm Impact assessment.
Cemmaes Wind farm Impact Study—Phase I.
The Visual Impact of Windfarms Lessons from the UK NFFO.
Landscape Impact Assessment for Wind Turbine Development.
Design Prediction Model for Wind Turbine Noise.
Assessment and Prediction of Wind Turbines Noise.
Systematic Comparison of Predictions and Experiment on Noise.
Preparation of a Wind Annex for Planning Policy Guidance.
An Investigation of the Levels of Electromagnetic Emissions.
Renewable Energy—Public Awareness and Attitudes (two surveys).

Power Transmission Lines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has received from the National Radiological Protection Board in regard to its evaluation of extra low frequency electric and magnetic field effects of electricity transmission.

Mr. Eggar: The National Radiological Protection Board publishes its findings through HMSO. The latest relevant publication is the board statement on restrictions on human exposure to static and time varying electromagnetic fields and radiation, published in March 1993, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Pensions

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he plans in respect of guaranteeing post-privatisation pension improvements and on the power for him to relieve the trustees of their fiduciary responsibilities should he instruct them to act in the national interest.

Mr. Eggar: Discussions between my Department and the trustees of the British Coal pension schemes on proposed arrangements for guaranteeing payment of index-linked pensions after privatisation are continuing.

Newsagents

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received from the National Federation of Retail Newsagents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: This body is to meet my officials shortly, prior to submitting written representations as part of the statutory consultation process on an order which I have proposed under the Fair Trading Act 1973 in relation to the wholesale supply of national newspapers to retailers in England and Wales. The proposed order follows a Monopolies and Mergers Commission report which identified certain practices of newspaper wholesalers as being against the public interest. I will carefully consider their views, along with all the other representations I receive during the consultation period which runs until 31 March.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what safeguards he intends to introduce to ensure a fair and level playing field to ensure the continuation of the home delivery service in respect of newsagents.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have announced a consultation period until March 31 on my proposed order under the Fair Trading Act 1973 relating to the supply national newspapers in England and Wales. I am prepared to consider any representations that the industry wishes to make to me as part of this process on home delivery, or on other issues.

Foreign Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which EU countries (a) the national law or (b) shareholder restrictions prohibit the takeover or buyout of major manufacturing companies by foreign firms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The treaty of Rome prohibits any member state from discriminating against bidders from other EU countries, except in very limited circumstances, for example where there are national security considerations.

Other restrictions, in the form, for example, of differential voting rights and cross-shareholdings, are a common feature of continental corporate structures, although they tend to operate against all hostile takeover approaches, not just those from foreign companies.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if it is Her Majesty's Government's policy to encourage the sale of manufacturing capacity to foreign firms.

Mr. Needham: We shall continue to maintain our successful open and liberal policies towards both inward and outward investment and will not seek to impose arbitrary restrictions which only serve to distort the market.

Electricity

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will use his powers under the Electricity Act 1989 to amend the Electricity Supply Regulations 1988 in order to effect the standardisation of electricity supplies.

Mr. Eggar: Amended regulations will come into force on 1 January 1995.

British Companies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a list of British companies in which a controlling interest has been sold since 1979 for more than £50 million.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The information in the form requested is not readily available. However, the Central Statistical Office, CSO, bulletin on "Acquisitions and Mergers within the UK", available in the Library of the House, provides some details on, inter alia, expenditure of acquisitions and mergers within the United Kingdom. A summary of table 4 of the latest bulletin, dated 16 November 1993, is as follows:

Size distribution of acquisitions and mergers within the United Kingdom
Total acquisitions and mergers

Year	Expenditure over £100 million number acquired	Expenditure over £10 million and up to £100 million number acquired
1986	21	119
1987	30	192
1988	44	172
1989	40	181
1990	18	89
1991	17	63
1992	7	64
1993 Q1	4	15
Q3	2	22

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 406, what is the perceived barrier to trade which will be removed by the standardisation of electricity supplies.

Mr. Eggar: That manufacturers and suppliers are presently obliged to make or stock equipment of a different specification if they wish to export within the EC.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of (a) the competitive advantage which will accrue to countries within the European Community whose electricity equipment already uses the nominal voltage of 230/400 volts by the standardisation of electrical supplies, and (b) the competitive disadvantage which will occur to those manufacturers which do not.

Mr. Eggar: A number of EC countries now use 230/400 volts as the nominal voltage and the rest are changing or are in the process of doing so by 1995. Consultations with manufacturers in this country and their representative trade associations have clearly indicated that considerable advantages will be realised through rationalised product ranges and thus reduced production costs together with uniform safety standards and harmonised certifying procedures throughout the European Community as a whole. Manufacturers outside the EC who do not adopt similar standards will be at a disadvantage when trading within the EC.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessments he has made as to the costs of the standardisation of electrical supplies to manufacturers of electrical equipment; and what consultations he held with the manufacturers before he accepted the new standards.

Mr. Eggar: The assessment of costs to manufacturers of electrical equipment of the proposed standardisation of supply voltage was made through a formal exercise. Consultations were carried out during 1992 with electrical equipment manufacturers in this country and through the major trade associations. Cost reductions of up to 5 per cent. were predicted in the event of the new standard being adopted.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 408, what proportion of the organisations representing (a) the United Kingdom electricity companies, (b) equipment manufacturers and (c) consumers consulted were opposed to changes in the reduction of voltage supplies.

Mr. Eggar: Those organisations who responded adversely to a reduction of supply voltage were:

(a) Electricity supply companies—none
(b) Equipment manufacturers—less than 10 per cent.
(c) Consumer organisations—no firm views.

Weights and Measures Laboratory

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will specify the amounts received by the National Weights and Measures Laboratory from outside work during the financial year 1992-93 and the first six months of the current period, broken down by industrial sector.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The National Weights and Measures Laboratory received the following income from outside work during the financial year 1992-93 and in the first six months of the current period:

	1992-93 £	1993[1] £
Income from local authorities	93,887	10,501
Income from manufacturers of weighing and measuring equipment	394,901	257,015
Total income	488,788	267,516

[1] 1 April 1993 to 30 September 1993

Most income from local authorities comes in the second half of the financial year.

Nuclear Review

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the terms of reference of the nuclear review.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Beckenham (Mr. Merchant) on 16 December 1993, Official Report, column 759.

Redundant Mineworkers Scheme

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to continue the British Coal redundancy package for miners after April.

Mr. Eggar: I have informed British Coal that the Government are prepared to provide funding for the current redundancy terms for industrial workers where redundancies are proposed before 30 April 1994, and for so long as the consultations with the unions on any such proposal continue.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 2 February, Official Report, column 770.

Patent Office

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future of the Patent Office.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The consultants' work on this review, which I announced on 30 June 1993, has been completed. I am now considering both the findings in their report and the various points which have been raised by interested parties during the course of the review. I hope to announce our conclusions in the light of the review in the fairly near future.

DEFENCE

Bosnia

11. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the deployment of British forces with UNPROFOR in central Bosnia.

Mr. Rifkind: The United Kingdom continues to play a major role in providing personnel and equipment as part of UNPROFOR in Bosnia. The Army battalion group—currently 1st Battalion, Coldstream Guards and its support units—is deployed on humanitarian aid and refugee escort duties. In spite of considerable difficulties from fighting and obstruction on the ground, it is carrying out a very successful operation, with great skill and courage, which has helped to save many thousands of lives, and of which we can all be justly proud.

23. Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current military situation in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Fighting continues among the different factions in Bosnia, although the winter weather has occasioned some decrease in hostilities. British forces continue to face considerable risks in carrying out their important humanitarian tasks, which they are discharging with courage and distinction. We keep the situation on the ground under regular review.

24. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of United Kingdom service personnel currently serving in Bosnia.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given earlier to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink) by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

25. Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future deployment of United Kingdom forces in Bosnia.

26. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on future deployment of troops in Bosnia.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given earlier to the hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Brandreth) by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Cyprus

12. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the future of Britain's military presence in Cyprus.

Mr. Hanley: The United Kingdom's military presence in Cyprus comprises about 4,500 service and civilian personnel in two sovereign base areas and a separate contribution of over 400 troops to the United Nations Force in Cyprus—UNFICYP. We have no plans to withdraw from either commitment in the foreseeable future, although we keep all our commitments under review.

Defence Industries

13. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has provided to defence industrialists about his plans to help the defence industries adapt to reduce defence expenditure levels.

Mr. Aitken: My Department is in frequent contact with our defence industries to keep them well informed about our future equipment requirements and our planned defence expenditure levels.

Brazil

14. Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on United Kingdom defence exports to Brazil.

Mr. Aitken: The Brazilian Government have recently announced their decision to place a £150 million order with Westland for nine Super Lynx helicopters and extensive Lynx upgrade work. This is an important success for the United Kingdom in a market where we have a long tradition of supplying defence equipment.

Nuclear Materials

15. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current stockpile of nuclear materials under the control of his Department.

Mr. Aitken: My Department does not hold significant stocks of fissile material other than those required for our operational needs.

Trident

16. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the fourth Trident submarine to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The fourth Trident missile submarine will complete around the turn of the century assuming the present Government remain in office. Construction work is progressing well.

Technology Foresight

17. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much of his development and procurement budget will be directed to using the results of the technology foresight exercise when they become available.

Mr. Aitken: My Department is playing a full part in the technology foresight exercise and will take full advantage of its results in the future defence programme wherever appropriate.

Nuclear Warheads

18. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sub-strategic nuclear warheads are currently held by each of the former Soviet republics.

Mr. Hanley: We believe that all former Soviet sub-strategic nuclear weapons have been withdrawn to Russia. Between 11,000 and 12,000 may currently remain, but many of these are unlikely to be fully operational.

Efficiency Savings

19. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the scope for efficiency savings in his Department.

Mr. Aitken: Since 1988, when our efficiency programme began, improvements have been made which are now worth some £1·8 billion a year. The "Front Line First" study is currently looking for ways to make substantial further efficiency savings and reductions in support and administrative costs.

Queen Elizabeth Military Hospital

20. Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich.

Mr. Hanley: My Department plans to withdraw from the Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich by March 1998 and discussions are well under way as to procedures and price for the sale of the hospital to the Greenwich Healthcare trust.

Defence Contracts (Kuwait)

21. Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of United Kingdom defence contracts in Kuwait in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: It is not Government policy to release details of the value of defence contracts placed by specific countries. However, in 1993 the Government of Kuwait placed a significant order for Warrior armoured fighting vehicles manufactured by GKN Defence.

Troop Deployment (Germany)

22. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current number of troops deployed in Germany; at what cost; what were the comparable figures for five and 15 years ago in real terms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The current strength of the Army in Germany is around 31,500. The estimated expenditure against the British Army of the Rhine budget for 1993-94 is £1,330 million.

The strength of the Army in Germany on 1 April 1988 was 55,700 and on 1 April 1979 was 55,000. We are unable to provide comparable costs for these years as they were compiled on a different basis.

Deregulation

27. Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress within his Department's deregulation unit.

Mr. Aitken: My Department is playing a full part in the deregulation initiative. As a non-regulatory Department the Ministry of Defence has focused its efforts on relieving unnecessary administrative burdens on its suppliers; streamlining contract procedures, and improving communications with industry.

Defence Exports (Kuwait)

28. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on United Kingdom defence exports to Kuwait.

Mr. Aitken: The United Kingdom signed a memorandum of understanding on defence procurement with Kuwait on 2 December 1992. In August 1993 an order for Warrior armoured fighting vehicles from GKN Defence was secured and we look forward to further orders for United Kingdom manufactured defence equipment in due course.

Royal Irish Regiment

29. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the current complement of part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment.

Mr. Hanley: For security reasons it is not our practice to disclose the complement of any regiment in the British Army. However, as at 31 December 1993 the strength of the part-time element of the Royal Irish Regiment—Home Service—was 110 officers and 2,400 soldiers. A recruitment campaign for the part-time element of the regiment is currently under way.

30. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the C–130J will enter into service with the British armed forces.

Mr. Aitken: The C–130J is one of several options being considered as part of a programme to refurbish or replace up to half the RAF fleet of Hercules aircraft. We hope to be in a position to decide on the way ahead later this year.

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek to obtain from his United States counterpart a copy of the report "Management and Disposition of Excess Weapons Plutonium", prepared for the United States Department of Defence by the committee on international security and arms council of the National Academy of Sciences.

Mr. Aitken: My officials have already requested a copy of this report.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for the future of search and rescue services at Portland.

Mr. Hanley: There are no current plans to alter the existing arrangements for the provision of search and rescue at Portland.

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the overseas visits that have been made by Defence Ministers since June 1987; and what was the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Hanley: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Homosexuality

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress he has made since his statement of 17 June 1992, Official Report, column 990, in deciding whether he will introduce legislation this year to decriminalise homosexuality in the armed forces.

Mr. Hanley: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 30 November 1993, Official Report, column 532.

Partnership for Peace

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the development of future relations between the Visegrad countries and the WEU following the adoption by NATO of the partnership for peace policy.

Mr. Hanley: Discussions have taken place between the Western European Union Permanent Council and representatives from central and eastern Europe, including the Visegrad countries, following the agreement reached at the 22 November WEU ministerial meeting on the possibility of an enhanced relationship with WEU for these countries. Any such relationship would be complementary and compatible with the links developed through NATO's "Partnership for Peace".

Falkland Islands Garrison

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the objective of the current garrison in the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Hanley: As long as Argentina maintains its claim to the Falkland Islands, the United Kingdom needs to maintain appropriate forces there. The objective of these forces is to deter possible aggression against the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich islands and, if necessary, permit reinforcement through Mount Pleasant airfield.

Tornado-helicopter Accident

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 26 November, Official Report, column 239, on the accident involving a civil helicopter and an RAF Tornado, when he now expects to be able to publish the military aircraft accident summary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins).

T80U Tank

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 901, what were the terms of the gift of the Russian T80U tank and by whom it was donated; and if the evaluation took place with a view to possible procurement for use in the British Army.

Mr. Aitken: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Gentleman on 3 February, Official Report, column 901.

Germany

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the savings to the defence budget of (a) a total withdrawal of the Royal Air Force and (b) a withdrawal of Tornado squadrons from Germany.

Mr. Hanley: There are no current plans for a total withdrawal of the Royal Air Force from Germany or for the withdrawal of the Germany-based Tornado squadrons. It would not, in any case, be the practice to publish assessments of the costs or savings which might arise from speculative changes in the Defence forward programme.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his assessment of the military purpose currently being served by the deployment of the Royal Air Force in Germany.

Mr. Hanley: The RAF in Germany makes an important contribution to the collective defence of the North Atlantic Alliance. By contributing highly capable air forces to each category of NATO's new multinational force structure, the United Kingdom collaborates with other allies to assure the security of Allied Command Europe, providing forces for the full range of the alliance's missions.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with the German Defence Minister on a total or partial withdrawal of the Royal Air Force from Germany.

Mr. Hanley: None.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by station (a) the units and (b) the aircraft currently deployed in Germany, together with the number of members of the Royal Air Force and their dependants.

Mr. Hanley: There are four Tornado GR1 squadrons, one RAF Regiment squadron and a signals unit at RAF Bruggen; two Harrier squadrons, two RAF Regiment squadrons, and one mixed Chinook/Puma squadron at RAF Laarbruck. HQ 2 Group and its supporting units and a signals unit are located at RAF Rheindahlen. An Air weapons range is based at RAF Nordhorn and there is an RAF hospital at RAF Wegberg. Currently there are some 6,000 RAF personnel in Germany. Figures for the number of their dependants are not held centrally.

Falkland Islands (Mines)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement of the latest situation regarding the removal of mines from the Falkland Islands; how many military and civilians have been killed or wounded by mines; what assistance the Argentine Government are giving in the process of clearing mines, what monetary compensation the Argentine Government are supplying; and how many Argentine (a) civilian and (b) military workers are involved in the process.

Mr. Hanley: Immediately after the Falklands conflict in 1982, our forces in the Falkland Islands set in hand an extensive programme of identifying, marking and, to the extent possible, clearing the minefields left behind by the Argentines. This programme was suspended in August 1983. Four engineers were seriously wounded in the course of these operations, although there were no civilian casualties. An explosive ordnance detachment remains based in the Falklands to advise the civilian population on the areas to avoid and to deal with any mines which become exposed.

Argentina has recently offered to pay for a third party to clear the minefields in the Falklands. The Falkland Islands Government have agreed that this proposal should be explored further, and we are following this up with Argentina. Before accepting the Argentine offer we would need to reach agreement on various practical issues. There would not be any involvement by Argentine workers in any operation on the Falkland Islands to clear the mines.

War Widows' Pensions

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the changes that he proposes in the eligibility for war widows' pensions whereby pension will be diminished or denied where the deceased has contributed to or caused his own death by tobacco or alcohol poisoning.

Mr. Hague: I have been asked to reply.

On 4 January 1994 we wrote to members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions with proposals to exclude from the scope of the War Pensions scheme any death or disablement due to the use or effects of tobacco or the consumption of alcohol. This exclusion would not apply where the individual was suffering from a mental disablement which was attributable to service, assessed at 80 per cent. or more, and caused him to smoke or drink or prevented him from giving up the habit.

We are now considering their responses and no decisions have been made.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Children (Northern Ireland) Order

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will defer the introduction of the Children (Northern Ireland) Order, pending the outcome of the review of the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Ancram: No. The Government are not undertaking a review of the Children Act 1989 although its provisions are monitored and some changes have been made since its enactment.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: There is no specific budget for my travel costs. The amounts spent on travel on Government business are:

	1992-93	[1]1993-94
Internal travel	£621,241	£430,540
External travel	£ 36,935	£ 17,300

[1] To 4 February.

Electricity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which companies or organisations were invited to compete for the supply of electricity to Northern Ireland Electricity ultimately won by Scottish Power to supply it over the proposed interconnector; what was the procedure for this tender; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: I understand that NIE initially approached a number of generating companies including National Power plc, PowerGen plc, Electricité de France, Scottish Hydro Electric plc in addition to Scottish Power plc before entering into detailed negotiations with the latter.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the Ove Arup report on the commercial assessment of the electricity interconnector with Scotland.

Mr. Tim Smith: No. This report, which contains information supplied in confidence by two privately owned companies, was commissioned by and is the property of the European Commission.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will request the Northern Ireland Electricity Regulator to take account of the results of a proper independent cost benefit analysis for the Province as a whole, prior to reaching a decision on the most economic source of electric power for Northern Ireland and making any future announcement.

Mr. Tim Smith: No. Under the terms of its licence Northern Ireland Electricity plc is required to purchase its power requirements as economically as possible and must satisfy the Director General of Electricity Supply that it has done so.

Electoral Register

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many citizens living overseas have applied to be registered to vote in elections in each parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Ancram: Records of the number of applications from British citizens overseas are not held. The numbers of overseas electors included on the electoral register for 1993-94, and the expected figures for 1994-95, are given in the table.

Constituency	Overseas electors 1993-94 register	1994-95 register (anticipated)
Belfast East	10	9
Belfast North	8	5
Belfast South	9	4
Belfast West	1	—
East Antrim	3	3
East Londonderry	9	7
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	6	7
Foyle	2	1
Lagan Valley	3	2
Mid Ulster	6	5
Newry and Armagh	4	2
North Antrim	6	7
North Down	21	19
South Antrim	3	2
South Down	2	3
Strangford	10	9
Upper Bann	5	6
Total	108	91

Co-operatives

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to encourage the development of retail, wholesale and manufacturing co-operatives.

Mr. Tim Smith: LEDU, Northern Ireland's small business agency, plans to continue to encourage such activities through its community business programme which provides a package of grant aid as well as loan funding.

In addition, the Northern Ireland Co-operative Development Agency (NICDA), which is funded by Government, encourages the development of worker co-operatives, service co-operatives, community enterprises and employee share ownership plans, through a range of services.

Proxy Votes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make the application form to vote by post or proxy due to disability or physical incapacity available in braille.

Mr. Ancram: There are no plans to do so.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 1 February 1994 at column 633.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Sir John Wheeler: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who are the members currently appointed to the Royal Mint advisory committee.

Mr. Nelson: The members of the Royal Mint advisory committee are as follows:

HRH The Duke of Edinburgh (President)
Roger de L. Holmes, Deputy Master of the Royal Mint (Chairman)
Marchioness of Anglesey
Professor E. Arthur Bell
Dominic Cadbury
Sir Hugh Casson
Dr. Christopher Challis
Vincent Duggleby
Sir John Hale
Michael Harvey
Professor Bryan Kneale
John Porteous
Dr. Conrad Swan

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by Her Majesty's Treasury on (i) internal and (ii) overseas travel by the Chancellor of the Exchequer since 27 May 1993.

Mr. Nelson: Expenditure and budgets for the Chancellor's United Kingdom and overseas travel since 27 May 1993 is as follows:

Item	Budget (£)	Actual (£)
Overseas travel	38,531	24,613
United Kingdom travel	1,087	556

Economic Convergence

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out in table form those EC countries conforming to the economic convergence criteria of the treaty of Maastricht.

Mr. Nelson: The table shows the state of progress of EC member states with respect to the convergence criteria as set out in the Maastricht treaty. Definitions of the indicators of convergence have not yet been fully standardised and the figures are therefore only indicative at this stage.

Performance against Maastricht convergence criteria

	Latest inflation[1]	Budget balance[2]	General government debt[3]	Long-term bond yield[4]
Belgium	2·4	−7·4	139·1	6·6

The convergence criteria are:

a high degree of price stability, as measured by consumer price inflation over one year being within 1½ percentage points of, at most, the three lowest inflation countries;

no "excessive" budget deficit, as judged by ECOFIN. (A Commission report to ECOFIN might be triggered by a budget deficit above 3 per cent. of GDP or a ratio of public debt to GDP above 60 per cent. of GDP); average long-term nominal interest rates over one year within two percentage points of rates in, at most, the three lowest inflation countries;

respecting the normal fluctuation margins in the ERM without severe tensions for at least the last two years. In particular, the member state shall not have devalued its currency's bilateral rate against any other member state's currency on its own initiative for the same period.

Currently Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal and Spain are members of the ERM. On 2 August 1993 the fluctuation margins of the ERM were temporarily widened to 15 per cent.

Economic Growth

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated per capita average rate of economic growth in each of the industrial countries in real terms (a) between 1964 and 1973, (b) between 1973 and 1979, (c) between 1979 and 1988 and (d) between 1988 and 1993.

Mr. Nelson: The relevant statistics are published in the OECD National Accounts Main Aggregates volume 1 and in the OECD Main Economic Indicators.

Incomes

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures for the current tax year, showing incomes net of income tax and national insurance contribution, plus child benefit for (a) single people earning £30,000 a year, (b) single-wage married couples earning £30,000 a year, (c) two-wage married couples each spouse earning £15,000, (d) single-wage couples plus two children aged four and 10 years and plus four children aged four, 10, 13 and 15 years, again with £30,000 per family per year and (e) two-income couples plus two children and plus four children, ages as above, each spouse with £15,000; if, in each case, he will equivalise the families' net incomes, using the equivalence ratios used by the Department of Social Security in their households below average incomes analysis, but taking single people as the reference point; and if he will recalculate both sets of figures assuming that married couple's allowance had been phased out.

Mr. Dorrell: Information is given in the table. The calculation of income tax liability assumes that no reliefs or allowances other than the personal and married couple's allowance are available. All earners, including wives, are assumed to pay class 1 national insurance at the contracted-in rate. The equivalence scales used are before housing costs are deducted.

£ per year

	1993-94 tax regime		Assuming no married couple's allowance
	Income net of tax and national insurance contributions, plus child benefit	Equivalised net income	Income net of tax and national insurance contributions, plus child benefit	Equivalised net income
(a) Single people earning £30,000	21,296	21,296	21,296	21,296
(b) Single wage married couples earning £30,000	21,984	13,405	21,296	12,985
(c) Two-wage married couples each spouse earning £15,000	22,610	13,787	22,180	13,524

Single-wage couples plus four children aged 4, 10, 13 and 15 earning £30,000	23,768	7,428	23,080	7,212
(e) Two income couples plus two children as above each spouse earning £15,000	23,551	10,195	23,121	10,009
Two-income couples plus four children as above each spouse earning £15,000	24,394	7,623	23,964	7,489

EC Funding

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the expected receipts from each of the European Community's funds to the United Kingdom in the current year.

Sir John Cope: Details of the United Kingdom's public sector receipts by Government Department and EC fund, for the current United Kingdom financial year, will be published in March in the Chancellor's 1994 departmental report. The forecast of United Kingdom public sector receipts by calendar year for 1994, that is the current EC Budget year, will be published in the spring in the White Paper, "Statement on the 1994 Community Budget".

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what value of receipts he expects from the European Community's structural fund for each of the fund's objectives in the calendar year 1994, divided into payments to (a) central Government, (b) local government, (c) other public sector bodies and (d) the private sector.

Mr. Portillo: The structural funds are implemented by multi-annual programmes and the Commission has announced the United Kingdom's allocations under objectives 1, 3, 4 and 5(b) for the years 1994-1999 and under objective 2 for the years 1994-1996. The breakdown of those allocations between years will be a matter for negotiation with the Commission on the community support framework which lay down how the funds will be used.

It is not possible to say how much any sector will receive in advance of applications, for support being received from the funds and decisions taken.

Trustee Investments Act Review

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements he is making to ensure that a wide range of charities, investment management companies and other interested parties are invited to make representations to the Treasury in connection with the current review of the Trustee Investments Act 1961; and if he will list the names of organisations which have been invited individually to submit views.

Mr. Nelson: A number of changes to the Trustee Investments Act 1961 are currently being drafted. These are largely technical in nature and are either necessary to comply with European obligations or result from amendments to other statutes. The Treasury has undertaken a limited consultation on these changes, seeking the views of other Departments (including the Charity Commission), the Law Society, the Unit Trust Association and a small number of law firms who have expressed a desire for technical changes.

The Government are also considering the case for wider reform. If it is decided that there are grounds for such reform, we will ensure that bodies of the type mentioned are fully consulted.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the effect on the tax relief on payments required by the Child Support Agency of the use of collection services.

Mr. Dorrell: Where tax relief is available for maintenance payments made under Child Support Agency assessments it is unaffected by the use of the agency's collection services.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken or intends to take to secure extension of the derogation permitting the continuation of VAT zero rating in the United Kingdom beyond 1996.

Sir John Cope: At ECOFIN on 24 June 1991, all member states agreed that, under transitional agreements to last until at least the end of 1996, member states which at 1 January 1991 applied zero rates of VAT to certain goods and services in accordance with the provisions of Community law then in force would have the option of retaining them.

The Sixth VAT Directive 77/388/EEC, as amended, provides that the transitional period will continue beyond the end of 1996 if there is not unanimous agreement of the definitive VAT system to operate from that date. The United Kingdom has made it clear that one of the conditions for such an agreement must be our right to continue with zero rates.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Nelson: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors will be taken into account in setting levels of vehicle excise duty; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: As with other taxes, the Chancellor takes account of a wide range of factors in setting the structures and rates of vehicle excise duty (VED). These include the need to raise revenue while minimising economic distortions; the impact of the tax on inflation; the transport costs of British industry and the competitive position of United Kingdom hauliers relative to their continental counterparts; and the costs of other forms of transport. In general the Chancellor will seek to ensure that, through a combination of VED and fuel duty, road users at least cover the economic costs they impose, though further work is required to estimate these costs accurately. When direct charges for motorway use are introduced the Government will take these into account in setting motoring taxes.

Policy in the past has been that road vehicles should, through VED and fuel duty, at least cover their annual "track costs".

However, the Government made clear in their Green Paper, "Paying for Better Motorways", that this measure has limitations as a basis for setting motoring taxes. For example, it takes account only of the cash costs of capital expenditure on road construction, and of current expenditure on road maintenance and makes no allowance for a return on capital. Publication of the annual Road Track Costs Bulletin will therefore be discontinued. The Government intend to produce better measures of the costs of road use including, where these can be valued, wider costs such as noise and other environmental costs.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Except for minor cases (eg misuse of stationery, postal services and sick certificates), staff found guilty of fraud have been dismissed. The number each year since 1989 is:

	Guilty of fraud	Dismissed
1989-90	0	0
1990-91	1	0
1991-92	2	2
1992-93	9	4
[1]1993	2

[1] To date.

The figures given exclude the Central Computer Telecommunications Agency and Chessington computer centre as these businesses were transferred to the Cabinet Office in 1992.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Where evidence appears sufficient to obtain a conviction, cases are considered for referral to the police for further investigation and possible prosecution. All cases of fraud are also considered under the Treasury's disciplinary procedures.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court Information

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 719, what representations he has received about human rights in respect of the arrangement for passing information from the courts to central Government.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have received no such representations.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 719, on matrimonial cases, when the decision to set up the arrangement in question was made; by whom that decision was taken; what representations he has received concerning the arrangement; who made the decision to discontinue it; what reasons led to its discontinuance; when that decision was taken; what its estimated cost was; and in how many cases and by how many courts the information was requested under the second heading by the Home Office supplied.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The arrangement came into effect on 1 November 1993, following discussions between junior officials in the civil business division of my Department and officials of the Home Office between July and October. I have received no representations other than those from the hon. Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng). The matter became known to senior officials on 18 January 1994. Legal advice was sought which stated that the arrangement had no statutory authority. The decision to discontinue the arrangement was taken by the head of the civil business division on that day. Arrangements have been made to ensure that legal advice will be sought in all future cases of this type. The cost of each notification made under the arrangement is estimated at £1·16 for the inner London area and £1·06 for the remainder of the courts. I am informed by the Home Office that they received approximately 30 notifications between 1 November and 18 January, which have all been destroyed. It is not therefore possible to say how many separate courts provided information.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 719, on matrimonial cases, how many arrangements currently exist or have existed within the last five years by which information from the courts is disseminated to (a) the Home Office or (b) other central Government Departments.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The following arrangements currently exist or have existed within the last five years by which information from the courts is or has been disseminated to central Government Departments:

To the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys:

Information about divorce decrees absolute (in accordance with the senior district judges' direction of 20 January 1992).

To the Child Support Agency

As required by the Child Support (Information, Evidence and Disclosure) Regulations 1992.

To the Inland Revenue:

Information about small maintenance orders in accordance with the requirements of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970 (this was discontinued on 6 April 1989).

To the Home Office (Immigration and Nationality Department):

Information about divorce cases where the parties were married in the United Kingdom and separated on the same day (this was discontinued on 18 January 1994).

In addition to this information, various pieces of statistical information which do not identify particular cases or parties are supplied by the courts for use, for example, in the Judicial Statistics.

Writs

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the current charge for the issue of a writ; what it was 12 months ago; when it was last changed; what considerations underlay the scale of the change; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Under the Supreme Court Fees (Amendment) Order 1993 the writ fee was increased from £70 (set in 1990) to £100. In setting the level of these fees, the Department has sought to begin closing the gap between the present level of cost recovery and its target of full cost recovery from court users by 1996-97.

Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what discussions have taken place between the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Home Office concerning possible changes to the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill [Lords].

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor and the Home Secretary regularly discuss matters which are of interest to both of their departments, including the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has in respect of the appointment of chief justices' clerks to magistrates courts committees.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government's intention is that every magistrates courts committee should appoint a legally qualified head of service and that the Lord Chancellor's approval should be required for each such appointment.

Such an appointment will provide clearer lines of accountability within the service, and also yield improvements in the efficiency and effectiveness of the service's management.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to empower the Lord Chancellor to enforce the amalgamation of magistrates courts committee areas.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill currently before Parliament proposes that the Lord Chancellor should have the power to initiate amalgamations between magistrates courts committee areas. An amalgamation order may only be made after consultation with the local magistrates, the magistrates courts committees concerned and all local authorities in the affected area.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to change the proposed requirement that the Lord Chancellor should approve the appointment of chairmen of magistrates courts committees.

Mr. John M. Taylor: As announced in this House on 2 February, the Lord Chancellor has listened to the criticism of the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill voiced in the House of Lords on 18 January. He proposes to move an amendment when the Bill next comes before Parliament, the effect of which will be to remove the proposed requirement that the Lord Chancellor approve the appointment of magistrates courts committee chairmen.

Justices' Clerks

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans the Lord Chancellor has to require that all justices' clerks be put on fixed-term contracts.

Mr. John M. Taylor: As announced in this House on 2 February, the Lord Chancellor has listened to the criticism of the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill voiced in the second reading debate in the House of Lords on 18 January. He proposes to move an amendment when the Bill next comes before Parliament, the effect of which will be to remove the proposed power of the Lord Chancellor to require that any contract of service made between a magistrates court committee and a chief justices' clerk or justices' clerk must contain such provision as my be specified in the order.

Crown Courts (Racial Bias)

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints he has received in his last recorded year over alleged racial bias by (a) Crown court judges, (b) Crown court recorders and (c) Crown court magistrates.

Mr. John M. Taylor: According to the information which is readily available, during 1993 no complaints were received in which a specific allegation of racial bias by individual members of the judiciary or magistracy sitting in the Crown court formed the sole or substantive grounds of complaint (but two such complaints, one against two circuit judges and one against a recorder, initially received in 1992, were dealt with in 1993). This does not include any complaints received in 1993 about proceedings in the Crown court in which imputed or alleged racial prejudice by the courts may have been an element in, or seen as relating to, the grounds of complaint, but which cannot be separately identified or quantified.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hostels, West Midlands

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are expected to be made redundant in the event of the closure of hostels in the west midlands area; and what would be the financial costs.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff will be made redundant in the event of the closure of hostels in the west midlands area; and what would be the financial costs.

Mr. Maclean: It will be for the probation committee as employer to decide how to manage the consequences of closures in terms of staff redeployment or redundancy; we have not yet received full accounts of their conclusions.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the occupancy rate of hostels in the west midlands area for each of the last 10 quarters.

Mr. Maclean: Occupancy figures for the period April 1991 to March 1992 are not readily available on a quarterly basis. The occupancy figures for the most recently available six quarters and for December 1993 are as follows:

	Per cent.
April—June 1992	78
July—September 1992	74
October—December 1992	74
January—March 1993	79
April—June 1993	60
July—September 1993	71

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department following the proposed closure of hostels in the west midlands area, what advice will be given to the magistrates courts regarding any future bail hostel remands.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice will be given to the magistrates courts regarding any future bail hostel remands following the closure of bail hostels in the west midlands.

Mr. Maclean: There are alternative hostel facilities in the west midlands and in neighbouring probation areas; and it will be for the probation service to bring them to the attention of the courts.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will be consulted about the proposed closure of hostels in the west midlands area.

Mr. Maclean: The west midlands probation service was notified on 1 December of our closure proposals and given the opportunity to comment.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average cost of a weekly place in hostels in the west midlands area, (b) the average length of stay and (c) the average cost of a prison remand place in the west midlands area.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average cost of a weekly place in hostels in the west midlands area, (b) the average length of stay and (c) what was the average cost of a prison remand place in the west midlands area.

Mr. Maclean: (a) The average weekly cost in 1993-94 is £243; (b) this information is not readily available in the form requested; (c) costs for remand prisoners are not kept separately. For 1992-93, the average weekly net operating cost per prisoner at Birmingham prison, the only prison in the west midlands, was £383. Remand prisoners represent just over 40 per cent. of these prisoners.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital expenditure was planned for hostels in the west midlands area prior to his Department's statement of 30 November.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any capital expenditure was planned for hostels in the west midlands area prior to the Home Office statement of 30 November.

Mr. Maclean: A number of proposals for capital expenditure on west midlands hostels had been received prior to the 30 November statement, but none had or have yet been approved.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many residents of hostels in the west midlands area were (a) aged under 17 years, (b) 17 to 21 years and (c) 21 years and over at the most recent available date.

Mr. Maclean: For the period January to December 1993, (a) none, (b) 368, (c) 713.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital and revenue expenditure will be available for hostel provision in the west midlands area for 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital and revenue expenditure will be available for hostel provision in the west midlands area for 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Maclean: Revenue grant for approved bail and probation/bail hostels in the west midlands for 1994-95 and 1995-96 will be approximately £1·5 million a year. The amount of capital grant available for hostels in this area will depend on the strength of bids submitted by the probation committee in comparison to those for hostels in other areas.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he expects to be the annual saving as a result of the closure of hostels in the west midlands area.

Mr. Maclean: We expect the saving to be in the order of £0·2 million in 1994-95 and £0·4 million in 1995-96.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were (a) re-arrested and charged or (b) breached for failure to comply with requirements at hostels in the west midlands area for the latest period for which statistics are available.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were either re-arrested and charged or breached for failure to comply with requirements at hostels in the west midlands area for the latest period for which statistics are available.

Mr. Maclean: For the period January to December 1993, the information requested is as follows:

	Number
Re-offended	54
Absconded and breached	210
Breached for failure to comply with hostel rules	219

Bewsey Street Hostel, Cheshire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any capital expenditure was planned for the Bewsey street hostel prior to his Department's statement of 30 November 1993.

Mr. Maclean: A proposal for capital expenditure on the Bewsey street hostel had been received prior to the 30 November statement, but it had not and has not since been approved.

Youth Custody

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year since 1989 the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 9 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking if he will list for each year since 1989 the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences.

The information you have requested is given in the following table.

Average population[1] of sentenced young offenders in Prison Service establishments, England and Wales: 1989 to 1993

Year	Average population
1989	7,232
1990	6,264
1991	5,859
1992	5,469
1993	5,131

[1] Includes a small number held in police cells in some years.

Domestic Homicides

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many homicides involving (a) shotguns and (b) other firearms have taken place as a result of domestic incidents in each police force area in each of the last 10 years; and how many of the victims in each case were women.

Mr. Maclean: The following tables give the information.

Offences currently recorded as homicide (1) in which the relationship between the suspect and victim was domestic (2) and where a shot gun was used—England and Wales, 1983 to 1992

Anthony Robert Madden

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will place a copy of the report into the death of Anthony Robert Madden in Armley prison on 26 June 1993 in the Library;

(2) if he will provide family access to the medical records regarding the late Anthony Robert Madden.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Bob Cryer, dated 9 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about Anthony Robert Madden, who killed himself in Leeds prison on 26 June 1993.

As in all cases of death in Prison Service custody, an investigationi was carried out into the very sad death of Mr. Madden. A report was submitted by the Governor of Leeds prison to Prison Service Headquarters. It is not, however, our practice to publish reports of internal investigations, the disclosure of which might undermine their effectiveness.

A full and open inquest into Mr. Madden's death was conducted by the West Yorkshire Coroner on 29 and 30 November 1993. After hearing all the relevant evidence relating to Mr. Madden's death, the jury recorded the verdict that he killed himself. Transcripts of Coroner's notes of evidence are not routinely made, but can be requested from the office of the Coroner concerned on payment of a fee.

If you or Mr. Madden's family have any specific questions about the death of their son which they feel were not answered at the inquest, please let me know.

Under the Access to Health Records Act 1990 Mr. Madden's next of kin are entitled to request the disclosure of a copy of his prison medical record. If they would like to make such a request to me in writing, I will arrange for a copy of the record to be sent to them.

Deportees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects his Department's investigation of the complaints alleging excessive force by Airline Securities Consultants Ltd. against two deportees to report; and whether there is any independent element to those investigations.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I expect these investigations to be completed shortly. Complaints against members of the Immigration Service or private security firms engaged in detaining or escorting immigration detainees are investigated by a senior officer of at least inspector level who has no involvement in the matter under complaint. An independent complaints audit committee has recently been established with a remit to satisfy itself as to the effectiveness of the procesures for investigating complaints, to draw to the attention of management any weakness and to make an annual report to the Home Secretary.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces provided in-flight escorts for deportees in 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The answer is as follows:

Cambridgeshire
Devon and Cornwall
Durham
Greater Manchester
Leicestershire
Metropolitan Police
Norfolk
Nottingham
West Mercia
Royal Ulster Constabulary
South Wales.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Howard: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Police Resources

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the criteria used for the allocation of resources for police authorities by urban and rural classification.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary wrote to chief officers of police on 5 November 1991 with details of the criteria used for allocating additions to force establishments. A copy of his letter is in the Library.

South Wales Police Authority

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the next expenditure of the South Wales Police Authority for (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1992-93.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information is in the following table:

South Wales constabulary

	1989-90 £ million[1]	1990-91 £ million	1992-93 £ million
Total expenditure[2]	97·275	108·599	132·913
Expenditure net of 51 per cent. Home Office police grant	47·665	53·214	65·127

[1] Comparisons with future years affected by changes in the funding of capital projects from 1990-91.
[2] Includes capital expenditure and loan charges.

Forensic Science Service

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the result of his review of the Home Office forensic science service.

Mr. Howard: I announced the review of the Forensic Science Service, an executive agency of the Home Office, on 19 May 1993. This review is now complete. The Government have decided that the service should remain as an executive agency for the present and move to trading fund status when appropriate. This will allow the agency to continue to build on the progress it has made so far.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Malaysia

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there was any further correspondence reiterating promises of civil aid between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Malaysia following the letter dated 28 June 1988 from the then Secretary of State for Defence to the Malaysian Finance Minister.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 8 February 1994]: Yes. We have kept in close touch with the Malaysian Government about the provision of development aid.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

The Attorney-General: It is not possible to provide a definite and exhaustive list of questions which I might exceptionally decline to answer on grounds other than cost. Each question will continue to be answered on its merits, but examples which would fall into this category would be questions about:

(i) The propriety of decisions given in individual cases by courts of law, administrative tribunals and similar bodies;
(ii) Details of investigations by or on behalf of the Departments for which I am responsible in connection with prosecutions or civil actions and confidential information relating to such proceedings or possible proceedings; and
(iii) Legal advice given to or by the Law Officers.

EDUCATION

Universities (Staff and Students)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) undergraduates, (b) postgraduates, (c) teaching staff and (d) professors there are at each university in the United Kingdom; and what are the salary scales at each institution for (i) professors, (ii) readers, (iii) senior lecturers and (iv) lecturers.

Mr. Boswell: Information on the number of students and staff at former UFC funded United Kingdom universities is published by the Universities' Statistical Record in "University Statistics: Volume 1 Students and Staff". Student data for the universities formerly funded by PCFC are contained in "Statistics of Education, Further Education, Higher Education in polytechnics and colleges 1991-92" published by DFE. Staff information is published in "The Academic Staff of Polytechnics and Colleges: 1991". Copies of these publications are in the House Library. The nationally agreed pay scale bands for academic and research staff in the former UFC and PCFC sectors are as follows:

Former UFC Universities: Pay bands as at 1 April 1993

Lecturers A	12,828-18,855
Lecturers B	19,642-25,107
Senior Lecturers	26,359-32,202
Professors	Minimum 30,398
Research Grade 1B	12,828-15,186
Research Grade 1A	12,828-20,442
Research Grade II	18,855-25,107
Research Grade III	23,782-32,202

All Former PCFC Funded HE Institutions: Pay band as at 1 September 1993

Lecturer	11,067-20,745
Senior Lecturer	19,362-25,584
Principal Lecturer	24,198-30,426
Researcher A	8,988-12,444
Researcher B	13,140-20,052
Head of Department	Minimum 26,304

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Boswell: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

National Curriculum Council

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, how much the carpets incorporating the initials NCC in the National Curriculum Council's York office cost to purchase; when they were purchased; and what has happened to them.

Mr. Robin Squire: The carpet was purchased in 1990, when the National Curriculum Council was fitting out its offices in York. No information on the cost of the carpet is held centrally, and the cost is not separately identifiable from the published accounts of the NCC. The council was dissolved on 1 January 1994 and its former York office (with the carpet still in place) has been transferred to the Secretary of State. It will become the headquarters of the new Funding Agency for Schools from April this year.

PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

The Prime Minister: The general practice of this and previous Administrations is described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

TRANSPORT

Road Lighting

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has spent on lighting trunk roads and motorways in each of the last five years; and how much it is budgeted to spend in the current financial year and 1995.

Mr. Key: The table shows the amount spent on lighting in 1992-93, in 1993-94 to date, and the budget for 1994-95. Figures for earlier years are unavailable.

	£ million
1992-93 (actual)	23·911
1993-94 (to date)	28·793
1994-95 (budget)	27·248

Cycle Lanes

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated cost of a mile of cycle lane on the average road if it is constructed on the current road surface and does not involve extending the road.

Mr. Key: The estimated cost of providing signing and white-lining for a mile of cycle lane on the current road surface is approximately £3,000. In addition there are costs which will be site-specific, for example for provisions at junctions and traffic management during installation, but these items cannot be estimated.

Mandatory cycle lanes can only be marked on the carriageway when the remaining width is sufficiently wide for existing traffic flows and when waiting and loading can be effectively restricted.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which new policy commitments and initiatives in the field of transport, announced in "Sustainable Development: The U.K. Strategy", have not already appeared in previous Government documents and ministerial speeches.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside on 8 February, Official Report, column 149.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what EC funds are available to ensure additional environmental protection on the route of the channel tunnel rail link; when he applied for them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I am not aware of any EC funds specifically for this purpose, but the channel tunnel rail link is already in receipt of funds from the EC's transport infrastructure programme, and my Department is in discussion with European Commission officials about further support.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 2 February at col. 758.

Rail Travel

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what comparative date he has on the cost per kilometre of rail travel to passengers in each European Community country; and if he will provide separate figures for the cost per kilometre to passengers on inter-city rail routes.

Mr. Freeman: Comparative data of the kind requested is not available to the Department.

Road Safety

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) which local authorities no longer employ road safety officers;

(2) what is his estimate of the overall number of road safety officers employed in 1993-94 (a) in total and (b) for each local authority.

Mr. Key: No central record is kept of the numbers of road safety officers either in total or in any one authority. It is for individual local authorities to assess their own requirements for road safety officers, having regard to the needs of the local community.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which local authorities have submitted road safety plans accompanying the transport supplementary grant plans under the national road safety plan; and if he will make a statement as to the use made of these plans.

Mr. Key: All local traffic authorities have submitted road safety plans. These are used to provide advice on the allocation of funds for local safety schemes. More importantly, they are used by the authorities themselves to focus and monitor road safety activity within the authority.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who is currently responsible for the co-ordination and monitoring of road safety policy.

Mr. Key: Mr. right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport is responsible for the Government's road safety policy.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account is taken of road accidents in the determination of road safety policy.

Mr. Key: The reduction of road accidents is the fundamental objective of road safety policy, and the yardstick by which its success is measured.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the requirements within the Road Traffic Acts relating to road safety; and what enforcement measures in each case are required of the police.

Mr. Key: The main provisions of road traffic law relating to road safety are set out on pages 67 to 72 of the Highway Code. The police have a duty to enforce all laws and it is for each chief constable to decide how best to fulfil that responsibility.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what responsibility he expects the Highways Agency to have for road safety.

Mr. Key: The Highways Agency will be required to support the Department's road safety policy and to contribute to the Secretary of State's target of reducing road casulaties by one third by the year 2000 compared with the annual average from 1981 to 1985.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the overall budget spent on road safety by local authorities.

Mr. Key: The local roads settlement for 1994-95 includes provision of £50 million for expenditure on local safety schemes, maintaining the level of provision for the current year. In addition, local authorities spend money on education, training, publicity, street lighting, road maintenance, gritting and snow clearing, crossing patrol officers and many other safety related activities. No central record is kept of total expenditure.

Departmental Headquarters

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce details of his Department's new headquarters accommodation.

Mr. MacGregor: On 12 November 1992 at columns 963-64 I announced that the Department of Transport would remain in Marsham street for around three years, with suitable accommodation being sought for the longer term.

I am now able to announce my Department's new headquarters will be Great Minster, Horseferry road. After the building is fitted out staff will relocate there from 2 Marsham street, probably in autumn 1995. The Department will retain some space in Romney house nearby to provide overspill accommodation when required.

Driver Safety Consultation Paper

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what responses he has received to the new driver safety consultation paper; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Some 5,200 copies of the consultation document were distributed and about 400 responses were received from organisations and individuals. There was very widespread support for the four main proposals in the document and many interesting and helpful comments were made on points of detail. In the light of these responses, the Government propose to proceed as follows.

A1. Retesting for new drivers convicted of offences: The document proposed that a driver convicted of certain offences within a specified period of passing the driving test would be debarred from holding a full licence, reverting to "learner" status, until passing a further test. There was very strong support for this measure. A number of different views were expressed on the detailed questions asked in the consultation document, and a further exercise is being set in hand to consider how such a scheme could work in practice. Any such scheme will require the approval of Parliament either in the form of a statutory instrument requiring affirmative resolution or (for some variants) primary legislation.

A2. Separate theory testing: Consultees were asked whether a separate theory test should be introduced to fulfil the requirement of the Second EC Driving Licence Directive (91/439/EEC). Almost all consultees were in favour of a separate mandatory theory test. I am setting in hand detailed developmental work to ensure that such a test, and the organisation to operate it, is fully in place by 1 July 1996, the date on which the directive comes into effect.

This will be the most important change in the car driving test since its introduction in 1935, and we shall be aiming to devise a form of test that makes a significant contribution to reducing the accident rate among newly qualified drivers, in particular by improving hazard perception. We shall be carefully monitoring the effect of the separate theory test during the first five years of its operation and it will be rigorously evaluated to ensure that it is achieving the desired effect of reducing accidents. I shall make appropriate adjustments if it fails to do so. We are also anxious to obtain the fullest advantage from technological improvements that are likely to occur in this period.

A3. Post-test driver training: The document proposed the development of voluntary schemes in which insurers would offer financial incentives to newly qualified drivers to take further training. A number of insurers and driving schools have expressed strong interest in this proposal, and my officials are working towards the setting up of a voluntary scheme.

A4. Road safety education: The document proposed the development of educational programmes of the 16-plus age group targeted at potential drivers and new drivers. Again there was strong support and we shall be working with the private and voluntary sectors to prepare suitable material for use in schools and colleges. We are already targeting this age group with the current "Drive" TV series, produced in conjunction with the BBC.

We also consulted on two other measures on which we were doubtful but prepared to keep an open mind:

B1. Probationary plates: We received a mixed response on this issue. Members of the public who commented were almost all in favour of the introduction of probationary ("P") plates for newly qualified drivers, but the main representative organisations were more guarded. In the Government's view, the case for introducing "P" plates is still not proven, though we are prepared to consider it further when the full results are available of a study into "Restricted" plates in Northern Ireland.

B2. Increasing age for full licence to 18: Only a minority of consultees supported this, and a number of disadvantages were highlighted. We shall not take this proposal further.

The consultation document also described 10 further possible measures which the Government had considered but were not minded to pursue. While some of these attracted a fair measure of support, particularly from individuals who responded, the majority of consultees accepted our reasons for rejecting them.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. MacGregor: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Yorkshire Wildlife Trust

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what authority and under what regulation his Department advised the Yorkshire Wildlife Trust that the conditions laid down in enclosure statutes were only of permissive character; and if he will make it his policy that his Department will not disregard such statutory requirements.

Mr. Key [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Because of the legal complexities involved in this issue, I will write to the hon. Member with an answer to his question as soon as possible. I will arrange for a copy of that reply to be placed in the Library.

Projects and Contracts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list all contracts awarded by his Department to (a) financial, (b) political and (c) other consultants without competitive bidding (i) for each of the past five years and (ii) as a total the number, and the cost over the same period;

(2) if he will publish a list of all contracts or projects which are planned to be the subject of competitive bids by (a) financial, (b) political or (c) other consultants, the nature of each contract or project and the date envisaged by his Department for inviting bids; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 19 January 1994]: I am placing the information in the Library.

Competitive bids are normally sought in awarding consultant commissions. The main reasons for awards without competitive bidding are; specialist nature of work; need for continuity by extending an existing contract, urgency, and the small-scale nature of some projects. Fee bidding was introduced as normal policy for road schemes consultancies in 1991.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the consumer panel.

Mr. Soames: Currently the members are:

Mr. Phillip Bell
Mrs. Judy Brander
Mrs. Dorothy Craig
Mrs. Hariet Kimbell
Ms Suzi Leather
Mrs. Jean McVitty
Mr. Gareth Morgan
Mrs. Karen Powell
Mrs. Maeve Robinson
Mrs. Noel Whamond

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the Consumers Committee for England and Wales under the Agricultural Marketing Act 1958.

Mr. Soames: The members of the committee are:

Mrs. Janet Lawrence (chairman)
Miss Beata Brookes
Mrs. Marjorie Grimes
Mrs. Barbara Hawkins
Mr. John Murphy
Mrs. Evelyn Rose
Mr. John Tracy

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the consultative panel on badgers and tuberculosis.

Mr. Soames: The members currently appointed to the consultative panel on badgers and tuberculosis are:

Mr. M. T. Thomasin-Foster (chairman)
Mr. R. Baker

Mr. P. F. Staines
Mr. J. G. Thomas
Mrs. J. Turnbull JP
Mr. A. Watkins
Mrs. T. Wickham
Dr. A. C. Winter

Tobacco

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the United Kingdom contribution to common agricultural policy expenditure on tobacco subsidies in the last three years.

Mr. Jack: The United Kingdom contributes to the EC budget as a whole, not to particular parts of it such as CAP expenditure on tobacco. We do not produce or store tobacco and therefore have no receipts. Our contributions would benefit in full from the abatement agreed at Fontainebleau and in effect, our net contribution to the tobacco regime could be estimated to be at around six per cent. of EC expenditure. Community expenditure on tobacco amounted to 1,330 mecu (£931 million) in 1991, 1,223 mecu (£873 million) in 1992 and 1,165 mecu (£917 million) in 1993. Budgetary ecu rates: 1991 £1=1·4291 ecu; 1992 £1=1·4131 ecu; 1993 £1=1·2700 ecu.

The effect on expenditure on tobacco resulting from the reform of the regime agreed in 1992 will not begin to show in expenditure figures until at least 1994 and the regime is to be reviewed again in 1996. Nevertheless, tobacco is still the most heavily subsidised CAP crop per hectare and we will continue to press for greater reforms.

Quarantine

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she considers animal quarantine regulations a suitable subject for subsidiarity.

Mr. Soames: The principles of subsidiarity apply to this area, as in all Community activity. Moreover, the Government do not consider that animal health measures fall within the Community's exclusive competence. We accept, however, that the harmonisation of animal health controls on the movement of animals between member states, which are designed to further the single market, is appropriate.

I am satisfied that the current harmonised EC animal health trade rules provide adequate safeguards against the introduction of disease and that post-import quarantine of farm livestock imported from other member states is not necessary.

Scrapie

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the number of cases of scrapie in each year since 1985.

Mr. Soames: Scrapie was made a notifiable disease on 1 January 1993 to meet the requirements of EC directive 91/68 on animal health conditions governing intra-community trade in sheep and goats.

The following cases of scrapie in Great Britain have been confirmed by laboratory analysis in the period requested (to 31 January 1994):

	Sheep	Goats
1985	143	N/R
1986	153	N/R
1987	176	N/R
1988	211	N/R
1989	246	6
1990	334	15
[1]1991	896	12
[1]1992	589	6
[2]1993	282	3
[2]1994	22	0

N/R = not recorded.
[1] In 1991 and 1992 voluntary reporting of cases of scrapie in sheep was encouraged to obtain material for spongiform encephalopathy research.
[2] Further laboratory analysis of suspect cases of scrapie is not usually carried out for two years after the disease has been confirmed in a flock. These figures therefore indicate the number of flocks confirmed to be infected, but give no indication of the number of cases of scrapie in those flocks.

Pig Producers

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations she has made to the French Government and the European Commission on the subject of financial assistance given to Danish, Belgian and German pig farmers;

(2) what action she is taking to determine the legality of French Government aid to their pig producers;

(3) what consideration has been given by her Ministry to the introduction of a scheme to compensate British pig producers who are disadvantaged by unfair competition from European Union pig producers;

(4) what measures she is considering introducing to improve the economic prospects for British pig producers;

(5) if she will summarise the evidence she has prepared for the European Commission on state aids given to pig producers in other EU states.

Mr. Jack: The support measures available to pig producers under the CAP are very limited and pigmeat producers are dependent on the market for their returns.

Aid programmes paid for by national governments are only permitted with the approval of the European Commission. Rumours of aids to pig producers in other member states are widespread, but we have firm evidence only in respect of a scheme in France. My right hon. Friend has already pressed the Commission to determine the legal status of the aids in accordance with article 93 of the treaty and to take whatever action is necessary. She has also raised the matter on numerous occasions in the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

The Government legitimately help the pig industry through the funding of research and development. Spending by the Agriculture Departments on the pig sector in the current year amounts to £14 million. A further sum is spent by the Agriculture and Food Development Council on animal science, some of which is of direct benefit to the pig industry.

Organophosphorous Sheep Dips

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she expects to be able to announce the names and past relevant experience of all the members of the panel to evaluate research into reports of long-term effects arising from exposure to organophosphorous sheep dips; and whether they have past or present declarable interests in the manufacture of such sheep dips.

Mr. Soames: I announced the appointment of Dr. D. N. Bateman, medical director of the Northern region drug and therapeutic centre, as chairman of the Veterinary Products Committee's medical panel, in my reply to the hon. Member for Milton Keynes, North-East (Mr. Butler) on 3 February at column 817-18. Prospective members of the panel are currently being approached with a view to establishing their willingness to serve. A further announcement about the membership of the panel, and any declarable interests which members may have, will be made as soon as possible.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment she has made of the extent to which the Government are fulfilling their obligations under EU legislation with respect to the safe disposal of organophosphate sheep dips.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government's obligations with respect to the disposal of sheep dip under EU legislation are implemented through the Water Resources Act 1991 in England and Wales and the Control of Pollution Act 1974, as amended by schedule 23 of the Water Act 1989, in Scotland. These controls are further supplemented by detailed guidance in the Codes of Good Agricultural Practice published by the Ministry and the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department.

The Government are also undertaking a review to assess whether any further measures might be necessary to ensure the safe disposal of sheep dips.

Goosanders

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether English Nature has given its approval for the issuing of licences to kill goosanders on the river Wharfe on the Bolton Abbey estate, north Yorkshire; how many goosanders have been approved to be shot; what evidence has been submitted to her Department in support of this application; and if she will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Soames: As a licensing authority under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, the Ministry is responsible for the issue of these licences and they must not be unreasonably withheld.

On receipt of the applications from the Bolton Abbey estate, ADAS, the Ministry's wildlife advisers followed their usual practice and notified English Nature of the applications and invited them to comment. The views of English Nature were made known in its press release of 14 January 1994, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Those views were given full weight in making the licensing decision.

The applicant must provide sufficient evidence of serious damage being caused to the fishery and show that other methods of non-lethal scaring are ineffective or impractical and not just difficult to implement. The Ministry cannot disclose to third parties information provided in support of a licence application which is commercial in nature, such as the extent of any financial loss being suffered by the fishery.

Two licences have been issued for the Bolton Abbey estate to shoot goosanders as an aid to scaring; one licence, covering a 7.5 mile stretch of the River Wharfe, is to shoot up to 10 birds between 1 October 1993 and 28 February 1994; the other is to shoot up to four birds on the Bolton Abbey trout hatchery between 1 January to 28 February 1994.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research work has been carried out on the river Wharfe to examine the impact on fish stocks of breeding goosanders.

Mr. Soames: The Ministry has not conducted any formal research studies on the river Wharfe. However, on receipt of the applications from the Bolton Abbey estate, an officer of ADAS, the Ministry's wildlife advisers, visited the applicants to assess their case. English Nature was advised of the applications and were invited to comment. The Ministry's own fisheries experts at Lowestoft were also asked for their comments. ADAS then provided a report on the visit with recommendations to the Ministry.

Once the licences were issued, ADAS began making monitoring visits and have been providing reports to the Ministry. They will continue to do this during the period of validity of the licence. The licensees are also required to provide a report to the Ministry of the action taken under their licence and, where possible, to retain the carcases of birds shot. These will be collected by ADAS and sent to our fisheries laboratory at Lowestoft where the contents of the gut will be examined. All of this information collected as part of the licensing arrangements will enable the Ministry to keep under review its policy on the issue of such licences.

Milk Marketing Scheme

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the last date for the ending of the milk marketing scheme.

Mrs. Shephard: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have made an order under section 1(3) of the Agriculture Act 1993. The order extends the deadline for the revocation of the England and Wales milk marketing scheme from 1 October 1994 to 1 January 1995. This will enable the Milk Marketing Board to proceed with its intention to propose a new vesting date of 1 November 1994.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list those topics on which it is not her practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if she will list any recent changes in the practice of her Department.

Mr. Jack: This Department's practice is as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Less-favoured Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answers of 17 December, Official Report, column 1068 and 11 January, Official Report, column 63, what is the average number of (a) hill cows and (b) hill sheep eligible for hill livestock compensatory allowances she considers necessary for a less-favoured area farm to be considered a full-time commercial business for the purposes of the farm business survey; and what hectarage and acreage she considers to be a very small farm.

Mrs. Shephard [holding answer 7 February 1994]: To be classified as a full-time commercial farm in the less-favoured areas of England, a farm must have at least a minimum level of agricultural activity. On the assumption that, apart from grass, there are no other crops or livestock on the farm, this minimum is currently equivalent to either 30 hill cows, or between 200 and 250 hill ewes.

In practice, almost all farms have other crops or livestock so that many with fewer than 30 hill cows or fewer than 200 to 250 hill ewes will exceed the minimum and will therefore be classified as full time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Car Parking (Orange Badge Holders)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what action he plans to take to ensure that car parking spaces associated with the House of Commons and parliamentary buildings which are reserved for orange badge holders are not misused by other drivers.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Although there are no places specifically set aside for orange badge scheme holders, there are 12 parking spaces in Star Chamber Court and three in the Norman Shaw car park reserved for vehicles driven or used by photo-identity pass holders who have disabilities and have registered with the Serjeant at Arms.

Those who use the other parking spaces in Star Chamber Court have recently been reminded not to use the spaces reserved for disabled people. The area is checked on a random basis and the Serjeant at Arms has been requested to draw any case of continuing misuse to the attention of the Administration Committee.

Data and Video Network

Mr. Waller: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the parliamentary data and video network to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 14 March to Friday 18 March.

Child Care

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he will name the consultants engaged to carry out the survey into child care needs in the House; and what has been the total cost incurred to date.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The survey of potential demand for child care services for the House was conducted by Research Services Ltd. The fee paid is a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when he expects to announce the results of the questionnaire on child care facilities sent out last year; what was the total number of hon. Members, Members' staff and staff of the House who were sent a questionnaire, listed by (a) females and (b) males; how they were selected; and what proportion of those sent a questionnaire returned it.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The Administration Committee expects to receive the consultants' report on the survey of potential demand for child care facilities in the very near future. It intends to examine the results and will then consider what recommendations to make in respect of future policy.

The questionnaire was sent to 4,105 Members, Members' staff, staff of the House and other support staff who work for both Houses. It is not possible to determine how many of that number were male or female.

Results of the survey itself will be made known once they have been considered by the Committee and the Commission.

Plain English Campaign

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Plain English Campaign to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 21 March to Friday 25 March.

Souvenir Kiosk

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what was the turnover of the kiosk run by the Refreshment Department for the most recent financial year; and what was the turnover for the months of November and December in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993.

Mr. Colin Shepherd [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The turnover from all sources for souvenirs in financial year 1992-93 was £652,087 excluding VAT. On the same basis the other information requested is as follows:

	1992 £	1993 £
November	95,642	80,445
December	175,735	212,260
Total	271,377	292,705

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Market Testing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will publish for each service that has been market tested in his Department in 1993 (a) the cost of the testing process, including consultancy costs, (b) the result of the test, (c) the name of the successful contractor, (d) the value and duration of the contract, (e) the number of staff involved, (f) estimated annual cost reductions and (g) whether the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 were deemed to apply.

Mr. Newton: No service in the Privy Council Office has been market tested.

WALES

Public Appointments

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many names there are on the register of appointees to non-departmental public bodies in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: An updated list of appointments at 1 December is available in the Library of the House. There are 784 appointments and 14 vacancies.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many names there were on the list of potential appointees to non-departmental public bodies in Wales in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The departmental register of candidates for appointment is a running list to which names are frequently added. Information is not available on a calendar year basis. Currently there are 4,421 names on the register.

Hunting Hounds

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to raise with the Masters of Foxhounds Association the practice of feeding of uncooked meat and offal from fallen and casualty stock to hunt hounds.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans to discuss this matter with the Masters of Foxhounds Association.

Executive Appeals

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Redwood: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

Temporary Employment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were in temporary employment at the latest available date; and what is the proportion of those in temporary employment as a percentage of the total number registered for employment for each employment travel-to-work area and for Wales as a whole.

Mr. Redwood: According to latest estimates from the summer 1993 Labour Force Survey there were 84,000 employees in temporary employment in Wales. This represents 8.5 per cent. of all employees in employment. Comprehensive data are not available on numbers registered for employment. Estimates are not available for travel-to-work areas.

Council Rents

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the proposed notional rent for 1994-95 for each district council in Wales, together with the average for Wales; and what is the percentage difference for each council and for Wales, between these notional rents and the corresponding actual rents in 1993-94.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is set out in the following table:

Science and Engineering Graduates

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has of the number of graduates with professional science and engineering qualifications employed in industry in Wales at the latest available date.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Reliable estimates are not available.

Housing

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many houses for renting (a) Tai Cymru and (b) other housing associations in Wales have developed on mainly private estates in each year since 1991-92;

(2) what are the figures for underspending by housing associations in Wales for each year since 1991-92;

(3) how many houses from the private sector have been bought by housing associations in Wales for renting in each year since 1991-92 and 1993-94.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is primarily a matter for Housing for Wales. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member and I shall place a copy of his reply in the Library of the House.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the guidelines to housing associations on buying houses from the private sector; what assessment he has made as to whether they are sufficiently flexible to ensure that there is a balance of rented accommodation and privately owned houses provided in communities.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Purchases from the private sector need the approval of Housing for Wales. In determining a particular application Housing for Wales will take into account both the economic and the social implications.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the housing allocation policies of Welsh local housing authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I have received 31 responses to the Department's consultation exercise on allocation of council housing, policies and procedure. I have asked the housing management advisory panel for Wales to prepare a good practice guide for local authorities taking account of those responses. Responses to the Department's consultation paper, "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies", have been invited by 18 March.

Police Reforms

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how the Government will determine the share which the new police authorities proposed for Wales in the White Paper on police reforms—Cm 2281—will have of non-domestic rate revenues.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I am still considering the arrangements for distributing non-domestic rate resources to the new police authorities. I will discuss my proposals with the Home Secretary and the Welsh local authority associations through the forum of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance. Currently non-domestic rates are distributed amongst local authorities on the basis of resident population.

Hospital Staff (Redundancies)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of redundancies among national health service hospital staff (a) by grade and (b) by reason for each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally.

Sheltered Accommodation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many units of sheltered accommodation have been provided by (a) local authorities, (b) housing associations and (c) health trusts for people with mental and physical disabilities in Wales; and if he will give these statistics for each local authority for each year since 1991-92.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on newly built sheltered accommodation is not held centrally.

Wind Power

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what circulars or other guidance have been published by his Department to assist local planning authorities when considering applications for wind power installations.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Guidance is contained in the annex to Planning Policy Guidance Note 22, "Renewable Energy", which was published jointly by the Welsh Office and the Department of the Environment in February 1993.

Welsh Language

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much additional finance has been provided to teach Welsh as a second language to students of constituent colleges of the university of Wales for each year since 1988.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Higher Education Funding Council for Wales has made £314,500 available to colleges of the University of Wales in 1993-94 for the provision of Welsh courses for adults. Information for earlier years, when the University of Wales was funded by the Universities Funding Council, is not held centrally.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress he is making within the Welsh Office to submit a Welsh language scheme as required by the Welsh Language Act 1993; on what date he will submit the scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: It is too early to indicate on what date a scheme might be submitted to the Welsh Language Board. The Department's scheme will need to take into account the statutory guidelines which the board will be preparing. A comprehensive internal review of the Department's policy and practice regarding the use of Welsh is currently being conducted. This will be of considerable benefit in formulating our language scheme.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Redwood: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

National Health Service

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what criteria are used for allocating NHS resources to areas of high deprivation in Wales; and what resources are available to those areas which meet the criteria.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The current formula for assessing the distribution of revenue resources to health authorities in Wales was introduced in 1991. This takes into account the higher levels of sickness that are associated with socially deprived areas by the morbidity weighting within the formula.

Quangos (Membership)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has concerning the number of active Conservative party members currently sitting as members of quangos in Wales.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 7 February 1994]: I do not know how many people currently holding public appointments to non-departmental public bodies in Wales are active Conservative party members.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Indonesian military personnel and Indonesian state employees working on defence-related matters received support through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the past 10 years to study in Britain; and through which programmes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Indonesian military personnel have over the years attended a range of developmental and technical training courses in the United Kingdom. Details of the training, including numbers involved, are regarded as confidential between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Indonesia.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Indonesian military personnel have been funded to study in Britain since 1975; through which Government Departments they have been funded; and what subjects they have been studying.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Indonesian military personnel have, over the years, attended a range of developmental and technical training courses in the United Kingdom. Details of the training, including numbers involved, are regarded as confidential between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Indonesia.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring he is undertaking as to the use to which Hawk aircraft supplied by the United Kingdom to Indonesia are being or have been put; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: It would be impracticable on a regular basis to monitor, after transfer, equipment which we have licensed for export. We are, however, ready where necessary to ask recipient countries, on a confidential basis, about the location and use of defence equipment we have supplied. We have no evidence that Hawk aircraft are being or have been used for repressive purposes against the civil population in Indonesia and East Timor. Nor do we believe that Hawk, or any other items of British equipment, have been or are likely to be used against the civilian population in Indonesia and East Timor. The Indonesian Government have given us assurances that Hawk aircraft will not be used for internal security purposes.

Military Personnel (Scholarships)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many military personnel have been funded to study under Foreign and Commonwealth Office scholarships from (a) Indonesia, (b) Jordan, (c) Ecuador, (d) Malaysia, (e) Nigeria, (f) Oman and (g) India in the past 10 years; and what subjects they have been studying.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Military personnel are attending a range of developmental and technical training courses in the United Kingdom. Details of the training, including numbers involved, are regarded as confidential between Her Majesty's Government and the Governments concerned.

Appointments

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria were used in the appointments of (a) Pauline Neville-Jones to the post of political director of the Foreign Office and (b) Paul Lever as chairman of the Joint Intelligence Committee.

Mr. Goodlad: The selection board's criteria were the same as those used in any other apointments for officials in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office—namely, their skills, experience and qualities as measured against the requirements of the job in question and the field of available candidates.

Statements (Translation)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide an English translation when he deposits in the Library statements made by other states speaking on behalf of Her Majesty's Government in other languages.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is not our usual policy to deposit statements in the Library that are not in English. When documents in other languages are deposited they are used to provide a translation and such translations are deposited as soon as they are available.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the agenda of the 1994 session of the conference on disarmament in Geneva; and how the quantity of work to be done in the conference on disarmament in 1994 has changed from that of previous years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The agenda of the conference on disarmament remains the same as in 1993, and the following ad hoc committees have again been established: nuclear test ban; effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear weapon states against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons; transparency in armaments; and prevention of an arms race in outer space. The overall quantity of work has not changed.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ensure that all statements made by representatives of Her Majesty's Government at the conference on disarmament are placed in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The working documents of the conference on disarmament contain verbatim texts of the statements of the delegates of all governments represented at the Conference, including those of Her Majesty's Government. Copies of these documents are normally placed in the Library.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration Her Majesty's Government are giving to offering an additional voluntary financial contribution to the costs of the 1995 non-proliferation treaty review and extension conference and the preparatory arrangements thereof.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Arrangements as to how costs for administration relating to the non-proliferation treaty extension and review conference are to be shared by states party to the treaty are currently being considered. However, as a co-depositary of the treaty, and in accordance with past practice, we have made clear our willingness to contribute significantly more to conference costs than would be the case under the regular United Nations budget scale.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the United Kingdom's annual contribution to the costs of the conference on disarmament; and what consideration Her Majesty's Government are giving to offering an additional voluntary financial contribution towards these costs.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom contributes to the costs of the conference on disarmament through its contribution to the United Nations regular budget from which the conference is fully funded. No voluntary contributions are made to the conference on disarmament.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the position of Her Majesty's Government on the appointment of Miguel Marin Bosch of Mexico to be chair of the ad hoc committee on a nuclear test ban at the conference on disarmament.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We shall work constructively in the committee, under Señor Marin Bosch's chairmanship, for an effective comprehensive test ban treaty.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration has been given to the use of tactical air support for the opening of the humanitarian aid route between Split and Sarajevo; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: An aid route linking Split and Sarajevo via Gornji Vakuf is in regular use. Air support to open the route is thus not required.

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration he has given to withdrawal of British forces from Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: British forces will continue through the winter to support the UN in carrying out its humanitarian mandate. No decisions have yet been taken about the deployment of British forces thereafter.

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what opportunities have arisen during recent NATO meetings to discuss the possible use of air strikes against Bosnian Croat forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The NATO summit on 10-11 January reaffirmed the readiness of the alliance to provide close air support for UNPROFOR throughout Bosnia.

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what basis the decision was taken not to use air support for the protection of the United Nations safe haven at Mostar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: NATO has undertaken to make air power available to the UN Secretary General should he require it in support of the UNPROFOR mandate. The UN has not so far requested the use of this facility.

India (Human Rights)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received over human rights offences and disappearances in India; and what representations he has made to the Indian High Commissioner.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received various representations of human rights in India from a number of sources. We regularly raise our concerns with the Indian Government, including with the Indian high commissioner.

Canada (Environmental Protest)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Governments of Canada and British Columbia over the arrest of Cornelia Durrant, a British national, last November in connection with protests at Clayoquot Sound.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in his Department are covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Goodlad: All staff in the Department are covered by statutory sick pay. FCO staff number 6,220 and ODA staff number 1,128: a total of 7,348.

Dual-use Machine Tools

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to raise at the next Foreign Affairs Council of the European Union the role of the Dresdner Bank in financing the export of dual-use machine tools from the European Communities to various countries in the middle east in breach of EC agreements on export control restrictions.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. Bilateral channels exist to take up such matters as appropriate.

Colombia

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received over human rights offences and disappearances in Colombia; and what representations he has made to the Colombian ambassador.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We receive frequent representations. During my recent visit there I made clear to President Gaviria and his Government the concern felt in this country about human rights. We support the Colombian Government's efforts to tackle human rights abuses.

India

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will press the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva to express its concern at the human rights violations in Jammu and Kashmir and to send a fact-finding mission to investigate and report on the situation.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We are concerned by the human rights situation in Kashmir, and shall continue to express our views clearly to the Indian Government. Our approach to Kashmir at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva will be closely co-ordinated with our European partners.

Land Mines (Export)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his EC counterparts to prevent the export of land mines.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There have been no discussions.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Government Communications Headquarters

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to involve the private sector in the work of GCHQ; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: For many years GCHQ has used private sector contractors to provide various support services. There are no plans to change this practice.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards establishing a new scheme for St. Helenians to enable them to come to the United Kingdom for training and work experience.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

In order to mitigate the effects on the economy of St. Helena of the ending of the dependent territories quota scheme and in recognition of its unique position in being the only dependent territory in receipt of budgetary aid, the Government have decided to introduce a special arrangement, on a pilot basis, which will enable St. Helenians to come to this country to undertake training or work experience at a lower level than is normally permitted. The new arrangement will allow citizens of St. Helena to spend up to four years training towards vocational qualifications or up to two years gaining valuable work experience, while working with British businesses or other organisations. The Government hope that the new arrangement, which has been welcomed by the St. Helena Government, will benefit individuals and contribute to the economy of the island.

EMPLOYMENT

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many civilians were found guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: One employee was convicted of fraud in 1990. The person concerned was dismissed.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 1 February 1994]: Employees convicted of fraud would be subject to internal disciplinary proceedings. Each case would be treated on its merits, but in serious cases the normal penalty would be dismissal.

Unemployed Benefit

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of Employment Service claimants were paid the correct sum within three working days of signing on in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the proportion of Employment Service claimants who were paid correctly and within three working days of signing in the last year for which figures are available.

The Employment Service (ES) monitors both the accuracy of awards of benefit and the promptness of all payments made. However, our definition and measurement of promptness of payment is "the despatch of a payment on the day entitlement is established". We do not, I am afraid, collect information about payments in the terms requested by your question.

In 1992-93 we paid 96·7 per cent. of our clients accurately, and 97·5 per cent. of our clients promptly.

This exceeded both our Annual Performance Agreement and internal management targets.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of clients of the Employment Service are offered the option of having money sent direct to a bank or building society account rather than receiving a girocheque.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the proportion of clients offered the option of being paid directly into a bank or building society account.

It may be helpful if I explain that automated credit transfer facilities for the payment of benefits is a feature of a new computer system (NUBS2). The system is being installed into our offices on a rolling programme, due to be completed in September 1994.

Currently about 70 per cent. of clients are served by the new system, all of whom can chose to have their money paid direct into a bank or building society account. At the moment approximately 42,000 clients receive their payment in this way.

I hope this is helpful.

Citizens Charter

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when his Department published national citizens charter targets.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We have not published any national citizens charter targets for the Department as a whole. However, individual services across the Employment Department group which deal directly with the public have set and published their standards and targets in charters or charter statements of service standards. They include:

Employment Service's job seeker's charter—published December 1991 and currently being revised.

Redundancy payments service charter—second edition published January 1993.

Advisory, Conciliatory and Arbitration Service commitment—published May 1992.

The Health and Safety Executive's booklets "HSE and You" and "HSE—Working for Employers"—published January 1994.

Customer Survey

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when his Department last carried out its most recent annual national customer survey; and how many local customer surveys were carried out in 1992-93.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We have not carried out a national customer satisfaction survey for the Department as a whole.

However, individual services within the Department carry out annual surveys to get their customers' views about the services they provide. They include the following:

Employment Service
Redundancy payments service
Health and Safety Executive
Skills and enterprise network
Statistical services division

In addition, the Employment Service will be carrying out local customer surveys in all ES jobcentres in the spring.

Jobcentres

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what proportion of jobcentres displayed local targets as at July 1993 on (a) waiting times, (b) telephone answering, (c) promptness and accuracy in benefit payments and (d) information on local labour markets; and in how many cases these targets were being met;

(2) what proportion of jobcentres displayed at July 1993 (a) the name of the local manager and (b) the name of the area manager.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Hugh Bayley dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about how many Employment Service local offices displayed standards and targets, how many local offices met the standards, and how many local offices displayed the name and address of the local manager and area manager in July 1993.

The Jobseeker's Charter sets out our aim for our local offices (1,300 July 1993) to display standards of service. Between July and September 1993, 92 per cent. of local offices displayed standards and targets.

The information you have asked for is as follows:

WAITING TIME:

Clients waiting no longer than the 10 minutes standard: 1,170 offices; 90 per cent.

TELEPHONE ANSWERING TIME:

Calls answered within the 30 seconds standard: 1,170 offices; 90 per cent.

PROMPTNESS OF PAYMENTS:

98 per cent. of payments were made on time; on accuracy of payments of benefit you will wish to know that in the quarter July to September 1993 96·9 per cent. of payments were accurate. This is against a national target of 96·5 per cent.

LOCAL LABOUR MARKET INFORMATION:

Each local office has a target for the number of vacancies and number of placings they must achieve. We do not collect information about how many offices reach their target, but nationally, in the first six months of the operating year 1993-94, we placed over 859,000 people. This is 10 per cent. above our profiled target for this period.

Turning to your second question, this information is not available centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, I can assure you that all our local offices have been instructed to display the name and address of the local area managers.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of people attending jobcentres for advisory interviews in July 1993 saw the same person as they saw on their previous visit.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about what proportion of people attending advisory interviews in July 1993 were seen by the same person as they saw on their previous visit.

Unfortunately this information is not available in the form you request it. My local offices now deliver advisory interviews through teams of five or six people who focus their activities on particular sections of the unemployed register. This allows more continuity of contact to make sure the service we offer our clients is structured and co-ordinated.

When they attend for an interview, clients are seen by someone from the same team and, wherever possible, by the same person.

We do not collect statistics about what proportion are seen by the same person. However, I can assure you that we do believe that the arrangements we have in place represent the best available levels of service and that we are continually looking for further improvements.

I hope this is helpful.

Earnings

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many workers have earnings (a) above the national insurance contributions maximum payments ceiling and (b) below the lower earnings limit; and how many of these are women.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It is estimated that in April 1993 there were 2·9 million employees earning above the national insurance upper earnings limit and 3·2 million employees earning below the national insurance lower earnings limit. The corresponding numbers for women were 400,000 and 2·3 million respectively.

Sources: New earnings survey 1993—Employment Department.

Survey of personal income—Inland Revenue.

Disabled People

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many disabled people are in employment classified by standard industrial category.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The labour force survey asks people of working age if they currently have any health problem or disability which limits the kind of paid work they can do. Estimates based on answers to this question will include people with short-term health problems and disabilities as well as those registered as disabled.

The latest labour force survey estimates of the number of such people in employment by industry are given in the table:

People with health problems or disabilities in employment
Great Britain

	Thousands
Agriculture, forestry and fishing	37
Energy and water supply	15
Manufacturing	296
Construction	94
Distribution, hotels and repairs	288
Transport and communication	97
Banking, financial and business services	131
Other services	428
TOTAL all industry sectors[1]	1,406

[1] Total includes people with work place outside Great Britain and those who did not state industry.
Source: Labour force survey, summer 1993—not seasonally adjusted.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many disabled people are employed in (a) companies with between 20 and 99 employees, (b) companies with between 100 and 999 employees and (c) companies with over 1,000 employees.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available.

Brixham Jobcentre

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many staff are employed by his Department in the Fish Quay office at Brixham, providing administrative support for the jobcentre; and what assessment he has made of the cost to public funds of relocating them together with another jobcentre into a single location.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of staff employed in the Brixham Jobcentre and the assessment of the cost of relocating them together with another Jobcentre to a single location.

Within the Fish Quay office, eight staff are providing administration support to the Jobcentre. The decision to rehouse them into a single site has been taken in principle only. Until all suitable options have been explored the costings cannot be determined.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consideration was given to the future relocation of the Brixham jobcentre in Fore street before public funds were used on refurbishing it; and how much was spent on the refurbishment in the last two years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the consideration given to the future relocation of Brixham Jobcentre prior to the public funds being spent on refurbishment, and how much was spent on refurbishment in the last two years.

The refurbishment of the Brixham Jobcentre was completed in October 1991, as part of the National Employment Service Integration Programme. Subsequently, an increase in the number of people using the office has prevented a full service from being offered. It has been decided, in principle, to rehouse the Jobcentre in order to offer a better service to people, locally. No funds have been spent on refurbishment in the last two years.

I hope this is helpful.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 February, Official Report, column 725.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who are the members currently appointed to the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Health and Safety Executive has three members:

Director General:
J. D. Rimington CB

Appointed by the Health and Safety Commission with the approval of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Deputy Director Generals:
Miss J. H. Bacon and Mr. D. C. T. Eves

Appointed by the Health and Safety Commission with the approval of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and after consultation with the director general.

Docks and Ports (Deaths)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many deaths have occurred in docks or ports in each year from 1989; and what was the name of the deceased and the date and place of death in each case.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

Fatal injuries occurring within the docks and harbours industry (a) Reported under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Regulations, 1985 (RIDDOR), 1988-89—1992-93[1]

Year	Number of deaths
1988-89	10
1989-90	11
1990-91	2
1991-92	7
[1]1992-93	8

(a) As defined by (i) standard industrial classification 1968 minimum list headings 705 and 706 for the year 1988-89, (ii) standard industrial classification 1980 class 74 and activity heading 7630 for subsequent years.
[1] provisional.

It is not the policy of the Health and Safety Executive to disclose other information concerning fatalities without the knowledge and consent of the families concerned.

Community Action Scheme

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing the distribution of expenditure and places under the community action scheme in each standard region; and what are each region's figures as a percentage of the total.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about Community Action.

It may help if I explain that in the current financial year, £31·5 million has been made available to the Employment Services in order to set up and run Community Action. Of this £8·5 million has been allocated for programme expenditure, i.e., the money paid to providers contracted to deliver the programme. The attached table shows the regional breakdown of resource and allocation of places. This has been allocated to the nine Employment Service regions in direct proportion to the percentage of 12 months plus long-term unemployed people within each region.

A further £19 million of the budget allocation is used to cover the allowance payments to participants. Each participant on Community Action receives an allowance equivalent to their benefit entitlement plus £10 each week. This budget is held centrally. The remaining £4 million has been set aside to cover the costs of the Employment Service of setting up and running Community Action, the majority of this budget has been allocated to Employment Service regions on the same basis as the programmes money. A small proportion has, though, been retained centrally to cover Head Office running costs and the costs of producing forms and national publicity materials.

I hope this is helpful.

Table showing 1993-94 programme budget allocation and places for community action by employment service region

Region	Programme allocation £	Number of places	Per cent. of total
Northern	473,000	1,120	5·58
Yorkshire and Humberside	767,000	1,810	9·05
East Midlands and Eastern	761,000	1,800	8·98
London and South East	2,672,000	6,310	31·55
South West	613,000	1,450	7·24
Wales	400,000	940	4·72
West Midlands	929,000	2,190	10·97
North West	1,114,000	2,630	13·15
Scotland	742,000	1,750	8·76
Great Britain Total	8,470,000	20,000	100

Notes:

1. The average length of stay on community action is four months, therefore, 20,000 programme places would provide a total of 60,000 opportunities in a full year.
2. Additional amounts of £19 million to cover allowance payments to participants, and £4 million to cover ES running costs, are held centrally

Correspondence

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East will receive a reply to the letter he wrote on the Employment Service and enterprise councils on 28 July 1993, which was followed up by a reminder on 1 November 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Regrettably, no trace can be found of the hon. Member's letter of 28 July, nor his reminder of 1 November. I have written to the hon. Member offering a meeting at his earliest convenience.

Working Conditions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all proposed EC/EU measures of the past 10 years regarding working conditions which Her Majesty's Government (a) opposed and (b) supported.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 February 1994]: Since 1983, the Council of Ministers, including the UK, has agreed to over 50 measures relating to working conditions—covering measures in the field of employment law, social security arrangements and health and safety at work. The UK plays a full and constructive part in all negotiations on social affairs matters, adopting an approach on particular proposals or on individual parts of them, based on the Government's view of their merits, the need to achieve a sensible balance between social protection, competitiveness and employment growth, and the question of whether action is best taken by the Community or by member states. The UK has not voted against a single legislative proposal in the current EC social action programme and has one of the best implementation records of any member state. Details of measures adopted by the Council are contained in the "Directory of Community Legislation in Force", published by the, Official Journal of the European Communities, the 22nd edition of which is available in the Library.

Health and Safety

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all current effective legislation affecting health and safety matters.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 4 February 1994]: I have arranged for a list to be placed in the Library and will send a personal copy to the hon. Member.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 February 1994]: There is one shredding machine in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's office. Information is not held centrally for the numbers in the Department as a whole.

ENVIRONMENT

Empty Housing

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the proportion of residential housing stock owned by (a) local authorities, (b) housing associations, (c) private owners and (d) Government Departments, which were empty in each year from 1979.

Sir George Young: The numbers of their own dwellings reported by local authorities and housing associations in England as vacant on 1 April in each year from 1979 to 1993 were as follows:

In addition to providing information on those of their own dwellings that are vacant, local authorities in England are also asked to provide estimates of the numbers of private sector and other public sector vacant dwellings in their area on their annual housing investment programme returns. Estimates of the proportions of private sector dwellings that are vacant, based on these data and including estimates for those authorities which did not provide the information, are set out in the table. These proportions should be treated with care as there are doubts about the quality of some of the estimates provided by authorities.

Data on vacant Government Department-owned dwellings have been collected from Departments in recent years and the proportions reported as vacant are set out in the table. Corresponding figures for earlier years are not available. Most of the Government Departments' voids are Ministry of Defence properties. External consultants advised MOD that in order to meet the demand for married accommodation from entitled service personnel an overall 9 per cent. management margin of vacant properties, excluding those held vacant for major works or deployment, should be maintained. The task force on Government Departments' empty houses was set up to help bring this property back into use, and it is expected to present its final report to Ministers shortly.

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met representatives of organisations representing housing co-operatives to discuss funding and strategy; what is his policy regarding the development of housing co-operatives; what criteria he applies when determining financial assistance to housing co-operatives; what plans he has to encourage the development of housing co-operatives; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Arrangements for the development and funding of housing association co-operatives in England are the responsibility of the Housing Corporation and are set out in the corporation's housing co-operative strategy, which was published in March 1993. I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House. In the field of local authority housing, my Department is currently providing grant support for the development of 85 tenant management organisations including co-operatives. Details of the criteria for grants to such organisations will be made available in the near future, in the context of the new right-to-manage legislation.

Housing

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to repeal any part of subsection (i) of section 2 of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I refer my hon. Friend to paragraph 12.1 of the consultation paper "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies", which states that we have no plans to alter the categories of priority need.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the consultees to whom the consultation paper on access to local authority and housing association tenancies has been sent.

Sir George Young: Approximately 4,000 copies of the consultation paper have been sent out. Recipients include all English local housing authorities, the local authority associations, each hon. Member of this House with an English constituency, the Housing Corporation, the 200 largest housing associations operating in England, and a wide range of organisations with an interest in housing in the public, private and voluntary sectors.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the number of (a) owner-occupiers, (b) council tenants, (c) housing association tenants and (d) private sector tenants, including (i) protected tenancies and (ii) other tenancies; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The most recent information on the main tenure breakdown is from the 1992 Labour Force Survey. It shows that in England in 1992 there were an estimated:

13,200,000 owner occupiers
3,800,000 council tenants
600,000 housing association tenants
1,800,000 private sector tenants

My reply to my hon. Friend on 18 January 1994, Official Report, column 578, gave a provisional estimate from the first half year of data collection from the new survey of English housing of about 350,000 protected tenancies in England in 1993. This remains the current estimate. An equivalent figure for 1992 is not available.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for 1978-79 and each subsequent year for which data are available, the total number of dwellings let to new tenants by (a) local authorities and (b) housing associations, and of these, in each case, the number let to (i) homeless applicants and (ii) applicants from the waiting list, and the number which were first lettings of (iii) newly built and (iv) newly modernised buildings.

Sir George Young: The numbers of local authority lets to new tenants in England and the numbers of these lets which were to (a) households accepted under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 or the Housing Act 1985 and (b) applicants from the waiting list are given in the table. No information is collected centrally on lettings of newly built or newly modernised local authority dwellings.

[1]Figures for the number of housing association new lets in years before 1989-90 are estimates based on the data for England and Wales available for these years.

[2]Information on the number of first lettings of newly built and newly rehabilitated properties in 1992-93 that were to new tenants is provisional.

Sources: New lettings and new lettings to homeless applicants—Housing Corporation HAR10/1.
First lettings of newly built/rehabilitated dwellings—National Federation of Housing Associations CORE database.

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the actual numbers of dwellings which were (a) privately-owned, (b) rented from local authorities, (c) rented from housing associations and (d) rented from the private sector for 1970, 1979 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: Estimates of the stock of dwellings in England by type of tenure appear in "Housing and Construction Statistics, Great Britain". Figures for December 1970 appear in the 1970-1980 annual edition, table 107, those for 1979 are in the 1979-1989 edition, in table 9.3 and those for 1992, with provisional June 1993 figures, are in part 2 of the June 1993 quarterly edition, table 2.23.

Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Water Quality

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has reached agreement with the European Commission on changes to the requirements imposed on the United Kingdom by European Community laws on water quality; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The European Council in December asked the Commission to bring forward as soon as possible four framework directives to replace parts of existing Community laws on water quality. We welcome this decision to make water legislation consistent with subsidiarity and up-to-date science. The Commission and the Council must now ensure that the new and revised directives meet these criteria and are confined to essential quality and health parameters. Existing directives will remain in place until the Commission has brought forward its proposals and substitute directives have been agreed by the Council after consultation with the European Parliament.

Landfill Sites

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated reduction in waste sent to landfill sites in 1992-93 and 1993-94 because of the changes made by the packaging industry (a) throughout England and (b) in west Yorkshire.

Mr. Atkins: This information is not available. However, the producer responsibility group, in its report "Real Value, from Packaging Waste", presented to Ministers on 7 February, indicated that it would monitor this in future. A copy of the report is in the Library.

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated saving of waste to landfill sites because of recycling of waste materials and incineration by west Yorkshire for the period 1 April 1992 to 1 April 1993 to 1 April 1994.

Mr. Atkins: This information is not currently available. However, the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy produces an annual report on waste disposal statistics for local authorities and data for 1992-93 are due to be published by the end of this financial year. I have asked the institute to notify the hon. Member when the report is published. Provided the appropriate authorities reply to the institute's request for information, the information sought by the hon. Member should be provided by the report.

"London: Making the Best Better"

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses his Department received to the consultation paper "London: Making the Best Better".

Sir George Young: Responses are still coming in, but a total of 10,000 completed questionnaires had been received by the end of January 1994.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to (a) analyse and (b) publish the results of the consultation on his Department's publication "London: Making the Best Better".

Sir George Young: Analysis of the responses to "London: Making the Best Better" is in progress and we aim to publish a digest of the results in March.

Benzene

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of which are the main sources of exposure to benzene vapour in the environment; and if he will quantify the contribution made by each of those sources.

Mr. Atkins: The main sources of exposure to benzene vapour in the environment arise from the benzene content of ambient air and, in smokers, from cigarette smoke. Of the former, the greater proportion arises from the use, production and distribution of petrol. The recent report of the expert panel on air quality standards estimated that 78 per cent. of benzene emissions in the United Kingdom in 1991 arose from petrol engine exhausts. Cigarette smoke contains benzene and this may be the main source of exposure for a heavy smoker.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has given to the letter from the president of the Nuclear Control Institute in regard to the economic viability of reprocessing at THORP; and when he received the letter.

Mr. Atkins: The President of the Nuclear Control Institute's letter was received on 2 February. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will be replying shortly.

North Yorkshire County Council

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff were employed by the education department of North Yorkshire county council in the year before the implementation of the local management of schools; and what is the current level of employment in the department.

Mr. Baldry: North Yorkshire county council education department employed 7,763 full-time and 9,617 part-time staff in June 1989 and 6,521 full-time and 8,685 part-time staff in June 1993. The figures for June 1993 exclude staff in institutions which transferred to the Further Education Funding Council in April 1993.

Local management of schools was introduced in April 1990. Staff in locally managed schools remain employees of the local authority.

New Towns

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the contributions made by the Commission for New Towns to each former new town local authority for promotional activities each year since 1988.

Mr. Baldry: There have been no contributions by the commission to local authorities for promotional activities since 1988 although various promotion agencies, which include local authority representation, have received such contributions.

Inner City Areas

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been made to institutions of the European Communities regarding the application of community funds to the social and infrastructural re-invigoration of inner-city areas.

Mr. Baldry: The Government promoted a powerful case for increased assistance from the structural funds for inner city areas. As a result, Merseyside has gained objective 1 status from January 1994. Other inner city areas, including for the first time parts of London, have gained objective 2 status. We were disappointed that some urban areas proposed by the Government were omitted from the list of eligible areas agreed by the Commission. However, at 76 per cent. of our original bid for objective 2 funding, the United Kingdom has done better than almost every other member state.

Sponsor Ministers

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who is the sponsor Minister for (a) Birmingham Sandwell and Walsall, (b) Wolverhampton, (c) Nottingham, Rugby and Leicester, (d) Sheffield and Hull, (e) Newcastle, Tyne and Weir, (f) Leeds, Bradford and Kirklees, (g) Bristol, (h) Plymouth and (i) Stoke on Trent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The list of sponsor Ministers was placed in the Library of the House on 4 November 1993, and a copy of the list has been sent to the hon. Member. There has been one change to the list since 4 November; following the move of Lady Denton to the Northern Ireland Office, her responsibilities as sponsor Minister for Leeds, Bradford and Batley have been taken over by the hon. Member for Skipton (Mr. Curry).

Public Bodies

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the number of appointments he makes to those non-departmental agencies he has responsibility for and their budgets.

Mr. Baldry: This information is published annually in "Public Bodies", the latest edition of which was issued in December and is available in the Library.

Homelessness, Dewsbury

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are homeless in the parliamentary constituency of Dewsbury.

Sir George Young: The available data relate to local authority areas. The reported number of households accepted as homeless by Kirklees metropolitan council are given in the supplementary table to the quarterly Information Bulletin "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England"; copies of both are in the Library. The latest statistics are for the third quarter of 1993.

Environmental Trusts

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider providing core funding for existing environmental trusts providing the same services as groundwork trusts.

Mr. Atkins: Existing environmental voluntary organisations can apply for core funding under the Department's environmental action fund.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he is taking to encourage the efficient use of energy.

Mr. Atkins: The Department of the Environment's Energy Efficiency Office budget has been increased to more than £100 million for 1994-95, over 17 times the level of expenditure in 1979-80. It runs a comprehensive range of programmes and initiatives to encourage the efficient use of energy. In addition, the Department is taking a variety of initiatives with regard to publicly owned housing and, as set out in the answer given on 19 January to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) by my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) Official Report, columns 671-72, is considering proposals to strengthen the energy efficiency requirements of the Building Regulations. The Department's programmes, and their contribution to reducing carbon dioxide emissions and protecting the environment generally, are set out in the United Kingdom's report under the framework covention on climate change and in the United Kingdom's strategy for sustainable development, both of which were launched by the Prime Minister on 25 January 1994.

Coastal Marine Environment

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to improve the quality of the coastal marine environment.

Mr. Atkins: The Government's policies for protecting and enhancing the marine environment were summarised within "This Common Inheritance" in 1990 and reported upon in the 1991 and 1992 reports (Cm. 1655 and Cm. 2068 respectively). A further report is to be published shortly.

Halons

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how the Government propose to phase out the use of halons more rapidly than required by the Montreal protocol following the decision to establish a halon recycling scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: It is not Government policy to phase out the use of halons. Our policy, in line with that of the Montreal protocol on substances that deplete the ozone layer, and subsequent EC regulations, is to control the production and supply of halons, not their use. Production of halon was phased out by 1 January 1994.

The halon bank has been set up to enable recycled halons to be made available to service those halon users with a continuing need. The establishment of the bank is in accordance with decision IV/26 of the parties to the protocol agreed in November 1992 to encourage recovery, reclamation and recycling of halons. The UK halon bank was the first in the world and has helped to ensure that production of halon will not be necessary during 1994.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Baldry: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Small Cetaceans

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to publicise the United Kingdom's activities implementing the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas.

Mr. Atkins: The summary of action taken by the United Kingdom to implement the agreement has been published today. A copy has been placed in the House Library.

Recent activities have built on our already extensive range of laws intended to protect dolphins and other marine and land-based animals, and their habitats.

A co-ordinating committee has been established to ensure the objectives of the agreement were understood and acted upon by Government agencies. This has resulted in extensive co-operation between Government Departments, agencies, universities and voluntary bodies to identify priorities for action, set up a secretariat to run the agreement and begin vital research work.

Action taken by the Government to support the agreement includes financial contributions for a number of research projects: a two-year international survey of populations and distributions of porpoises and dolphins in the North sea and English channel, research into ways of deterring cetaceans from swimming into fishing nets, recording of beached animals and analysis of cause of death, and investigation of the problems presented by acoustic disturbance.

Taken together, these projects will provide a sound basis for future policies and programmes for effective and appropriate protection of these species on an international scale.

Canadian Rain Forest

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has made, in accordance with the objective of global conservation set out in the United Kingdom action plan for biodiversity, to the Governments of Canada and British Columbia over the logging of substantial areas of Canada's temperate rainforest.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have been asked to reply.

None. The Canadian Government and British Columbia authorities are well aware of public concern in the United Kingdom about logging.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office

15. Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are his policies for increasing the competitiveness of the Post Office.

Mr. McLoughlin: It is for the Post Office Board to ensure the competitiveness of the Post Office and for the Government to set the framework within which it does so. That framework is under consideration within the Post Office review, which is still continuing.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of post offices as at July 1993 displayed posters giving information on service targets and performance against them.

Mr. McLoughlin: As at July 1993 information about service targets and performance displayed on posters in post offices was as follows:

Royal Mail
All Crown, franchise and modified sub post offices displayed posters giving 1st class letter targets and performance on a quarterly basis for their local postcode area.

Post Office Counters Ltd.
All Crown offices displayed posters giving annual national targets for customer queuing times and performance of the individual office on a quarterly basis. In 1993-94 a rolling programme to introduce posters displaying queuing time targets is being implemented in the largest 5,000 agency offices.

Parcelforce
All Crown, franchise and modified sub post offices displayed posters, for a period of one month after the Post Office annual report and accounts for 1992-93 were published, giving national delivery targets and performance for inland services for that year.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the service targets set by the Post Office as at July 1993; and what was the performance against them.

Mr. McLoughlin: As at July 1993 the service targets set by the Post Office businesses were as follows:

Royal Mail
The 1993-94 annual targets for 1st class letter delivery—nationally and for each postcode area—are set out in detail in the Post Office's 1992-93 annual report and accounts. For 1993-94 the overall national target is to deliver 92 per cent. of 1st-class letters on the next working day after posting. For the April-June 1993 quarter in the York postcode area the overall performance for 1st class letter delivery by the next working day was 91 per cent. against a local annual target of 92 per cent.

Post Office Counters Ltd.
For all Crown and franchise offices an annual target of 96 per cent. of all customers to be served within 5 minutes was set for 1993-94. For the quarter 22 April-14 July 1993 performance against this target was 97·8 per cent. In addition, this target is being extended during 1993-94 under a rolling programme to 5,000 of the largest sub post offices.

Parcelforce
National annual delivery targets for 1993-94 and performance for the quarter April-June 1993 are as follows:

	Target Per cent.	Performance April-June '93 Per cent.
Parcelforce Datapost 10	99·0	96·9
Parcelforce Datapost 12	99·0	97·5
Parcelforce 24	99·0	95·7
Parcelforce 48	98·0	93·9
Parcelforce Standard	94·0	95·0

Electricity

16. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to refer PowerGen and National Power to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

33. Mr. Eastham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to refer PowerGen and National Power to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

34. Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to refer PowerGen and National Power to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Heseltine: The Director General of Electricity Supply has said that he will decide shortly whether to make a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Space Launch Agreement

17. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the agreement between the EC and the Russian Federation on space launch services.

Mr. McLoughlin: A draft agreement has been negotiated by the European Commission and the Russian Space Agency governing Russian access to the international market for space launch services between 1995 and 2000. Conclusion of the agreement is still being considered both by the member states of the European Union and by the Russian Government.

Aerospace Industry

18. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent discussions he has held with members of the aerospace industry about the prospects for the industry.

19. Mr. Orme: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last met representatives of the British aerospace companies to discuss future prospects for the industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: My Department maintains a close and continuing dialogue with aerospace industry on a wide range of issues.

Chinaware

20. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance his Department is giving to promote British chinaware in United Kingdom embassies and high commissions overseas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The full range of overseas trade services are avilable to the British chinaware industry for their export campaigns. In addition, I hope shortly to be able to announce formally the establishment of a DTI tabletop advisory group. This will include manufacturers of china, glass, cutlery and table linen. The group will work with the DTI, manufacturers and retailers to promote the sectors' competitiveness and sales both at home and overseas.

Gas

21. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the President of the Board of Trade by how much the price of gas to the domestic consumer has fallen since privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Domestic gas prices for all consumers have fallen by 22 per cent. in real terms since privatisation.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many domestic gas consumers use (i) 100 therms, (ii) 200 therms, (iii) 300 therms, (iv) 500 therms, (v) 1,000 therms and (vi) 2,000 therms a year; and what is the forecast percentage change in cost of those levels of consumption as a result of the abolition of the monopoly control over the domestic gas tariff.

Mr. Eggar: British Gas estimates of the number of domestic gas consumers in different ranges of consumption are as follows:

Analysis of British Gas domestic tariff sales (September 1992 estimate)

Range therms per year	Number of customers
0-100	1,325,311
101-200	964,173
201-300	1,392,542
301-500	3,871,768
501-1,000	8,121,502
1,001-2,000	1,965,922
over 2,000	152,482
	17,793,700

Source: Monopolies and Mergers Commission, Gas and British Gas plc, Volume 2, Appendix 4.1, Table 2.

Abolition of the monopoly will expose British Gas to competition which should lead to reduced prices to domestic consumers. A joint DTI/OFGAS public consultation document, to be published soon, will discuss the operation of the competitive market and the arrangements for regulating the transition to full competition.

Recycling

22. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to encourage industry to increase the use of recycled materials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: We have been encouraged by the recycling rates achieved in recent years. Around 30 per cent. of container glass, for example, was recycled in 1993, compared with only 20 per cent. in 1990.

The producer responsibility initiative that we launched in July 1993 is aimed at encouraging commerce and industry to increase recycling rates further.

West Midlands (Regeneration)

23. Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what practical steps he is taking to encourage commercial regeneration in the west midlands.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government are committed to regeneration throughout the United Kingdom. In the west midlands there is a wide range of Government-funded support services available.

Insolvency

24. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many investigations are currently being carried out by the Insolvency Service; and how many were carried out during (a) 1980 and (b) 1985.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Under the Insolvency Act 1986 the Official Receiver has a duty to investigate the affairs of each company wound up by the courts and the conduct and affairs of every bankrupt except where an order for summary administration has been made.

There were 6,910 winding-up and receiving orders made in 1980 and 12,477 made in 1985. In 1993 there were 8,361 winding-up orders and 31,025 bankruptcy orders including 5,357 summary cases.

28. Mr. Wicks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on Government policy towards insolvency.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Government believe that it is important to have a civilised, orderly and equitable method for dealing with financial failure of individuals and businesses and for tackling fraud and malpractice where they occur. The insolvency legislation seeks to achieve this end. It is kept under continual review.

Defence Technology Transfer

25. Mr. Patchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to assist with technology transfer from defence based industries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: A number of my Department's schemes assist technology transfer, including transfer from defence-based industries.

Electrical Equipment

26. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further representations he has received from business or consumer organisations about banning the sale of electrical equipment without pre-fitted plugs.

Mr. McLoughlin: Representations from business and consumer organisations were received during the formal consultation on the proposed regulations last year. Also, a number of meetings were subsequently held with officials. There was general support for the proposed regulations.

However, the European Commission is still seeking clarification on a number of points which is delaying the progress of the proposed regulations. I am hopeful that these matters will be resolved shortly.

Nuclear Review

27. Mr. John Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the terms of reference of the nuclear review.

Mr. Eggar: The Government will announce the terms of reference for the review and how it will be conducted as soon as possible.

South East (Growth)

29. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what initiatives his Department has taken in the past 12 months to stimulate growth and job creation within the South East.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government are committed to stimulating growth and job creation throughout the United Kingdom. Assisted area status and objective 2 status have been granted to parts of the South East in the past 12 months.

International Competitiveness

30. Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further assessment he has made of Britain's international competitiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: The Government have announced that they will publish a White Paper on competitiveness later this year.

31. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many directors have been disqualified during the years (a) 1980, (b) 1985 and (c) 1991.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The number of directors disqualified in 1980 was 62; in 1985 it was 120; and in the financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92 was 420 and 460 respectively.

32. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of fixtures and fittings in his Department's new offices.

Mr. Eggar: In the last and current financial years my Department has not moved into any new offices in central London.

35. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has had any recent discussions with representatives of the motor industry concerning future exports.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has not discussed this subject with industry representatives recently, but my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade met representatives from the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders on 1 February to discuss, among other matters, issues relating to the export of automotive products.

36. Mr. Gapes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he next plans to visit Ilford to discuss the economic situation.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has no current plans to do so.

Arms Trade

37. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has on the value of (a) British and (b) Japanese arms exports in the most recent years for which comparable figures are available; and what proportion this represents of total exports from those countries.

Mr. Needham: Information on United Kingdom defence exports can be found in table 1.11 of UK Defence

Statistics 1993 edition, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. For 1992, United Kingdom exports of identified defence equipment amounted to £1,506 million, representing 1·4 per cent. of total visible exports. Comparable figures for Japan are not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Telecommunications for Disabled and Elderly People Committee

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Committee on Telecommunications for Disabled and Elderly People.

Mr. McLoughlin: Appointments to the Advisory Committee on Telecommunications for Disabled and Elderly People are the responsibility of the Director General of Telecommunications. However, I understand that the current members are:

Chairman
Mrs. Jean Gaffin
Members
Mrs. Sheila Barrows, MBE
Mr. David Dunsmuir

Malaysia (Exports)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West (Mr. Williams) of 1 February, Official Report, column 612, if he will list exports to Malaysia under standard international trade classifications (a) 792, (b) 793 and (c) 981.29 for 1982 to 1993.

Mr. Needham: The information is given in the table.

Value of exports to Malaysia

(£000's)

Year	SITC 792	SITC 793	SITC 981.29
1982	6,976	338	NA
1983	8,054	2,318	NA
1984	8,712	192	NA
1985	CC	CC	NA
1986	3,785	228	NA
1987	2,461	2,077	NA
1988	CC	CC	CC
1989	CC	CC	CC
1990	CC	CC	0
1991	6,174	789	0
1993	CC	CC	CC

Notes:
SITC—Standard International Trade Classification.
792—Aircraft and associated equipment; spacecraft (including satellites) and spacecraft launch vehicles; and parts thereof.
793—Ships, boats (including hovercraft) and floating structures.
981.29—Munitions of war and parts thereof, not elsewhere specified.
CC—Figures not available due to commercial confidentiality.
NA—The SITC was revised in 1988. As a result, exports prior to 1988 corresponding to the current heading 981.29 cannot be separately identified.

Disqualification Unit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the full complement of staff in his Department's disqualification unit; and how many are currently in post.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The complement of permanent staff of the disqualification unit is currently 50·5. There are 47·5 staff in post, in addition to which there is a total of 11 staff seconded from the private sector, on loan from other Government Departments or employed on a casual basis.

Mr. Roger Levitt

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will review the bankruptcy laws in the light of Roger Levitt's discharge from bankruptcy.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have no plans to do so.

Competitiveness Unit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list each subdivision of his competitiveness unit; together with an outline of their work programme.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the Minis 93 returns, and the DTI functional directory, both of which are in the Library of the House. A new branch is being established to spread best purchasing practice in both the public and private sectors. The Minis 94 returns will set out its work programme.

Coal

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he takes to ensure that coal imported to the United Kingdom from Colombia is mined under conditions which do not breach international standards on the use of child labour; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have received assurances from the Colombian authorities that none of the United Kingdom's coal imports from Colombia are produced by child labour, and that their Government are attempting to eliminate the practice where it does occur in illegal family-run mines. Most of the coal produced in Colombia for the United Kingdom comes from the El Cerrejon mine which is run by Exxon to high standards. Representatives of the United Kingdom's two major coal importers have been to that mine to inspect conditions and are satisfied that no children are employed there.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to safeguard the environment in areas likely to be affected by the granting of compulsory rights orders by the local authority after privatisation of the coal industry.

Mr. Eggar: The Government have announced a review of the regime for compulsory access to land for minerals extraction contained in the Mines (Working Facilities and Support) Act 1966, which applies to all minerals including coal. The intention of this review is to produce an integrated regime for access to minerals that will be appropriate for the next century. As a transitional measure during the review, the Government intend to retain the compulsory rights order (CRO) provisions of the Opencast Coal Act 1958, but only until the end of 1999.

It is the Government's intention that CROs should be available to opencast operations as a matter of last resort only. The Coal Industry Bill would transfer to the Coal Authority the power to make CROs, but it is intended that the authority should not exercise this power unless it is satisfied that the applicant has made all reasonable efforts to secure the rights by agreement, but this has not been possible because: the owners of the land are too numerous, or cannot be identified; or the owner(s) do not have power to grant the rights sought; or the owner(s) have unreasonably refused to negotiate, or sought unreasonable terms. To come into force, a CRO must be confirmed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, or for Scotland or Wales as appropriate. My right hon. Friends will confirm a CRO only if they are satisfied that it is in the public interest to do so.

As now, CROs will only be used in exceptional circumstances. There is no reason at this stage to think that the use of CROs will more or less likely in any area of Britain's coalfields.

All new opencast development proposals will of course require planning permission and will continue to be scrutinised by planning authorities. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has recently issued draft revised guidelines, which set demanding environmental tests for the industry.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what safeguards and compensatory arrangements he plans after privatisation of the coal industry to protect local communities and individuals from pollution of rivers and streams by old coal workings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Government will ensure that all British Coal's current responsibilities will continue to be discharged following privatisation. The Coal Authority will be responsible for water pollution from abandoned mines, except to the extent that any part of the responsibility may be passed to the private sector through leases.

All discharges into controlled waters, including any from abandoned mines, will continue to be subject to the pollution control regime of the Water Resources Act 1991. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is currently reviewing the legal framework governing discharges from abandoned mines in general.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to offer to the private sector further pits closed by British Coal.

Mr. Eggar: The Government are committed to ensuring that any closing pits are made available to the private sector.

To date, 28 pits have been made available by British Coal for lease/licence. Decisions on lease/licence are a matter for British Coal.

British Coal has indicated that the corporation is unlikely to offer any further closing pits for lease/licence. It is the Government's intention, therefore, to offer such pits in parallel to the privatisation regional packages. Such pits would meanwhile be kept on care and maintenance basis. Detailed arrangements will be announced within the next few weeks when expressions of interest are invited from potential bidders.

The chairman of British Coal has assured me that no equipment will be removed from the pits proposed for closure at general review meetings last week unless it is essential for safety reasons or the reserves of any of the pits are reallocated to adjacent mines.

Clothing and Textiles

Ms Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the latest progress on the final discussions on the clothing and textile section of the GATT round.

Mr. Needham: The final GATT Uruguay round textiles and clothing agreement sets out the methodology for the phase-out of the multi-fibre arrangement (MFA) over a 10-year period which will commence once the detail of the complete GATT package has been agreed.

The MFA phase-out will be in four stages, each consisting of the liberalisation of some quotas and an increase in the level of those quotas not eliminated. Detailed work on the content of each stage of the phase-out phase-is not yet completed although it has been agreed that smaller supplying countries will benefit sooner than the larger suppliers.

The phase-out of the MFA will be balanced by improved GATT rules to deal with unfair trading practices, better intellectual property rights and lower tariffs in many export markets. We have pressed the European Commission to seek improvements in the tariff reductions offered by some countries and it is currently continuing negotiations with India, Pakistan, Indonesia and Hong Kong with a view to achieving greater concessions than those offered at present. Negotiations will if necessary continue until Ministers sign the final GATT act in April.

Land Mines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licences have been granted in the last 10 years for self-neutralising or self-destructing anti-personnel land mines.

Mr. Needham: It has been the policy of successive administrations not to disclose details about export licences that have been issued. In this case, in addition, the information requested could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Scotch Whisky (Chile)

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if Her Majesty's Government intends to request the European Commission to initiate GATT proceedings against the Chilean Government on account of their failure to respond to Her Majesty's Government's representations about their discriminatory taxation treatment of Scotch whisky.

Mr. Needham: My Department is in close touch with the Scotch Whisky Association about discriminatory taxation in Chile. Once it is clear what effect the outcome of the Uruguay round has had on this problem, all the options for future action including action by the European Commission in the GATT, will be considered.

Alcohol (Taxation)

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations have been made to the Japanese Government about the need for the outstanding liquor tax discrimination within the spirits sector to be eliminated this year.

Mr. Needham: The Government have made a number of high level representations to the Japanese Government in recent months regarding the continuing tax discrimination against foreign liquors in that country. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister raised the issue with the Japanese Prime Minister both in person during his visit to Tokyo in September 1993 and subsequently by letter. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade raised the issue with Japanese Ministers during his visit to Tokyo in January. I have also lobbied the Japanese Government, and the European Commission is actively pursuing the matter. This is an issue which concerns us greatly and one on which we are regularly in touch with the Scotch whisky industry.

Power Transmission Lines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will meet the chairman of the National Grid Corporation to discuss the allegations of ill health caused by electro-magnetic radiation fields given off from overhead transmission cables and electricity sub-stations.

Mr. Eggar: I meet the Chairman of National Grid Corporation from time to time to discuss a range of issues.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response he has given to the letter from the President of the Nuclear Control Institute in Washington DC in regard to the economic viability of reprocessing at THORP; and when he received the letter.

Mr. Eggar: The letter arrived on 2 February 1994. I shall be replying in due course.

Nuclear Industry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he received the annual report and accounts for British Nuclear Fuels for 1992-93; and if he will make a statement on the delay in completing these accounts.

Mr. Eggar: The annual report and accounts for British Nuclear Fuels plc for 1992-93 were published on 2 February 1994 and, in accordance with section 14 of the Atomic Energy Authority Act 1971, laid before both Houses of Parliament. On the question of timing, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 16 December 1993, Official Report, column 756.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the basis of his decision of 27 January not to refer the joint venture proposal involving British Nuclear Fuels plc, Ultra-Centrifuge Nederland NV, Uranit GMBH and Urenco Ltd. to the Monopolies Commission under the Fair Trading Act 1973.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: In accordance with advice from the Director General of Fair Trading, I decided not to refer the proposed joint venture between British Nuclear Fuels plc, Ultra-Centrifuge Nederland NV, Uranit GMBH and Urenco Ltd. to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) because it did not in my view raise competition or other relevant concerns warranting scrutiny by the MMC.

Oil Sales

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the monthly sale of oil in (a) monetary value and (b) tonnage from the United Kingdom to Greece in each month since 1984.

Mr. Eggar: Data on monthly exports of oil by the United Kingdom to Greece since 1984 are available from the monthly Central Statistical Office publication "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom". From July 1992 the exports are as follows:

United Kingdom oil[1] exports to Greece

Motor Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect of the takeover of Rover by BMW on the share of the United Kingdom car market taken by imports.

Mr. Sainsbury: We would expect the acquisition of Rover by BMW to strengthen Rover's competitiveness still further, thus increasing the ability of United Kingdom-based manufacturers to increase their share of the United Kingdom market.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made as to the effect on United Kingdom car manufacturers of being taken over by foreign companies.

Mr. Sainsbury: The effect on car manufacturers being taken over by foreign-owned companies will vary from case to case.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made as to the effect of United Kingdom membership of the EC on United Kingdom car plants being owned by foreign companies.

Mr. Sainsbury: None.

Manufacturing Assets (Foreign Companies)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the proportion of the value of manufacturing assets owned by foreign companies in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) France and (d) Italy.

Mr. Sainsbury: Information is not available in the form requested.

Indonesia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total Export Credits Guarantee Department exposure outstanding in Indonesia.

Mr. Needham: At 31 March 1993 the total Export Credits Guarantee Department exposure outstanding on Indonesia was £1,177·2 million.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what levels of export credit guarantees have been provided to Indonesia in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham: The Export Credits Guarantee Department's annual report details the value of guarantees issued for capital goods and projects each year for the main markets. The value of such guarantees for Indonesia in each of the last five years is as follows:

	£ million
1988-89	67·0
1989-90	52·3
1990-91	149·6
1991-92	126·8
1992-93	448·8

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of Export Credits Guarantee Department credit for Indonesia has been allocated to defence contracts in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham: Of the guarantees issued by the Export Credits Guarantee Department in support of capital goods and project exports to Indonesia, the following proportion has related to exports of defence equipment in each of the last five years:

	Per cent.
1988-89	4·2
1989-90	0·0
1990-91	1·7
1991-92	1·7
1992-93	97·3

Company Voluntary Arrangements

Mr. Dykes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on progress being made in the consultations with outside interested parties on the company voluntary arrangements document issued by the Insolvency Service in October 1993.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The deadline for responses to the document has been extended to 31 March 1994. More than 40 have been received so far and many more are expected. The views expressed will be carefully considered.

Management Bids

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give details of the management bids under each of the Minis rounds by each agency chief executive and departmental head together with the current staff-in-post numbers.

Mr. Eggar: The process of resource allocation within the Department is an internal matter for the Department. The final allocation to each management unit is published annually in Minis.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many tenders were received for the contract for the review of the Insolvency Service which was awarded to Stoy Hayward.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Three tenders were received and all three parties were interviewed before the contract was awarded.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much the Stoy Hayward report cost.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: This information is commercially confidential.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library the minutes of the Department's resources management group held on 13 July 1993 relating to the staffing needs of the Insolvency Service.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: No, the discussions of the Department's Resource Management Group are an internal matter for the Department.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many complaints have been received under the Insolvency Service published standards by (a) the inspector general and chief executive, (b) official receivers and (c) the President of the Board of Trade for each of the last two years.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Insolvency Service Standard, published in March 1993, has been in place for less than a year. In that time no letters have been received under it by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The Inspector General and Agency Chief Executive has received letters relating to 23 cases under its terms. Complaints made to official receivers which are satisfactorily dealt with at that level are not recorded centrally.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place the Stoy Hayward report into the Insolvency Service in the Library.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: As announced on 7 February, a summary of the report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many tenders were received for the second stage review of the privatisation of the Insolvency Service.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: A letter of invitation to bid for the second phase of the review was issued on 4 February 1994.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the projected budgets and staffing levels for the Insolvency Service for the next three years.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The allocation of budgets and manpower to the Insolvency Service for 1994-95 has yet to be made. Budgets and staffing levels for future years will depend on the outcome of future Public Expenditure Surveys.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will detail moneys paid into the Insolvency Service account in respect of interest on the money received by liquidators and invested for each of the past five years, together with details of the amounts paid to the commissioners of the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The details are as follows:

Year ended 31 March	Interest paid (net of tax) £'000	Amounts paid to Inland Revenue £'000
1989	1,887	662
1990	2,030	677
1991	1,700	499
1992	1,949	562
1993	1,946	804

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many temporary staff were employed by the Insolvency Service in January 1993, April 1993 and January 1994; and how many he estimates will be in post in April.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The number of casual staff employed by the Insolvency Service in January 1993, April 1993 and January 1994 was as follows:

	Number
1 January 1993	164·5
1 April 1993	190·5
1 January 1994	241

The level of resource for the Insolvency Service for 1994-95 has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how he defines the term, mechanical processing work, used in his announcement of the review into the future of the Insolvency Service.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The term is used loosely to describe those activities routinely involved in case administration as opposed to investigation.

Market Testing

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will highlight the areas market tested in the Department, the cost of each market test; and how many tests were awarded in-house.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has completed market tests in the following areas; office and financial management service, internal consultancy, and oil and gas support programmes. Within these area, in 11 individual tests service delivery was retained in house. Market test costs are being finalised for publication in the "Citizen's Charter Second Report".

Overseas Project Board

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how the members of the Overseas Project Board are chosen; and what criteria are used for their selection;

(2) who are the present members of the Overseas Projects Board; when they were appointed; what are their occupations; which firms employ them; what were the reasons for their selection; and what is their term of office;

(3) what is the role of the Overseas Projects Board; and when it was established.

Mr. Needham [holding answers 8 February 1994]: The Overseas Projects Board (OPB) provides expert advice to DTI Ministers and their officials on issues affecting UK industry's ability to complete effectively for major projects overseas and servces as a focal point for industry to communicate its views to Government. Appointments are made by the Minister for Trade usually for three years. The aim is to have on the OPB senior businessmen and others who have experience of major projects overseas. The names of the current members, their occupations, employers, and the dates of their appointments are as follows:

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff in his Department are covered by statutory sick pay.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 8 February 1994]: Approximately 12,700 staff in the Department are eligible to receive statutory sick pay. This total includes Departmental staff on loan or secondment out of the Department.

HEALTH

Hormone Replacement Therapy

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a table showing the total expenditure on (a) hormone replacement therapy and (b) etidronate prescribed by general practitioners in each family health services authority area and NHS region for each of the last two complete years; and if she will also express this as an expenditure figure per head of the total population in each area, and also as an expenditure figure per head for women aged 45 years and over.

Dr. Mawhinney: The net ingredient cost for products used for hormone replacement therapy in each family health services authority area and national health service region for 1991 and 1992 will be placed in the Library. Information for the drug disodium etidronate cannot be supplied as it is commercially confidential.

Opticians

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last discussed form AG3 with opticians; what assessment she has made of form AG3 with respect to the optical section in particular; whether people likely to need this form are likely to be able readily to understand it, and what assessment she has made of whether opticians find the form to be simple and straightforward.

Dr. Mawhinney: Planned changes to form AG3 are discussed periodically with the optical profession, most recently as part of a wider review of national health service forms and leaflets. In addition, family health services authorities provide comprehensive guidance to opticians about the national health service low-income scheme and form AG3 in order that they may give effective advice to patients. There are no grounds for believing that the form is other than simple and straightforward to use.

Advisers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the advisers to her Department for each of the professions allied to medicine, stating in each case whether they are full-time appointments, for what duration the appointments have been made and the method by which the appointees were selected; and if she will outline her policy on the future of such appointments.

Mr. Sackville: The Department obtains advice in relation to the professions allied to medicine from professional staff employed within the Department and from a variety of outside expert sources, depending on the nature of the advice required. It is not our practice to publish details of individual appointments.

Electric Power Lines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been (a) sponsored or (b) undertaken within her Department on the potential risks of overhead power cables and electricity transmission stations; and in what form these have been published.

Mr. Sackville: The Department funds the National Radiological Protection Board which undertakes a programme of research into the effects on health of electromagnetic radiation. This includes sources of EM radiation such as power lines and electrical equipment. The board publishes its work in various documents, reports and other scientific forms.

Patients' Views

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the companies commissioned by her Department to carry out polling and market research about patients' views in the year to 1 April 1993; and if she will list the areas of research, the questionnaires to be used and the groups to be questioned.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of Health commissioned four market research projects about patients' views in the year to April 1993. These were:

Subject	Questionnaires	Groups
Pregnancy Booklet	Omnibus Survey	Pregnant Mothers
Oral Syringe	Group discussions/ interviews	Parents of children having treatment/ had treatment
NHS Waiting Lists	Group discussions/ interviews	Sample of general public
Health Information Service	Group discussions/ interviews	Sample of general public

The companies commissioned to carry out these projects were Research Surveys of Great Britain, the Qualitative Consultancy, Counterpoint Research and Craig Ross Davidson.

Since 1990 the Department has contributed towards the cost of the British social attitudes survey carried out by social and community planning research, which monitors trends in social attitudes towards a range of issues including health and health services.

The Department has also had questions included in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys general household survey on general practitioner attendances, hospital in-patient stays, out-patient visits and day cases.

Care Plans

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of national health service patients had written community care plans at the time of their discharge from hospital in 1992-93.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mentally Ill People

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the changes in the number of places in staffed residential care homes catering primarily for people who are mentally ill or have learning disabilities (a) in the South Birmingham health authority area, (b) in the West Midlands health authority area and (c) in England in each of the last five years divided into publicly owned, privately owned and voluntary sector owned.

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is shown in the table.

Number of places in staffed residential care homes catering primarily for people who are mentally ill or have learning disabilities by sector, at 31 March 1988 to 31 March 1992

[1] On 1 April 1991 South Birmingham merged with Central Birmingham to produce the single district health authority, South Birmingham. To reflect this, the combined figures have been given for each year prior to the merger.

Waiting Times

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each health authority in England as at July 1993, whether it had published a guaranteed maximum waiting time for patients seeking (a) hip and knee replacements and (b) cataract removals; and what waiting times were guaranteed by each authority that had done so.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under the patients charter, local health authorities are expected to make available detailed information on health services, including quality standards and maximum waiting times. Local standards are not monitored separately, but as a minimum all must meet the national guarantee that all patients waiting for a hip or knee replacement or a cataract operation are treated within 18 months.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the subjects on which her Department or its predecessors formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by her to an executive agency.

Mr. Sackville: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

Whooping Cough

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has about any recent change in the incidence of whooping cough; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Although the current winter is one in the epidemic cycle when increases would have been expected in whooping cough notifications, they have remained at exceptionally low levels.

Provisional notifications in 1993 were 4,030 against 11,663 in 1989, the comparable year in the epidemic cycle. These very low notifications reflect the very high immunisation coverage of 93 per cent. at November 1993.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she has taken to ensure that all those children who were not vaccinated for whooping cough but who, following the change in medical advice, might be considered suitable for vaccination, have been contacted and given the opportunity to receive the vaccination.

Mr. Sackville: It is for individual general practitioners to identify children who in the past did not complete their whooping cough immunisation.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what directions she has issued, following the change in medical advice given three years ago on the use of the whooping cough vaccination for children with a family history of fits.

Mr. Sackville: Advice on whooping cough immunisation was issued to all doctors in the United Kingdom in July 1992 in the memorandum "Immunisation against Infectious Disease", copies of which are available in the Library. This provides guidance for doctors, practice nurses and health visitors on the use of the vaccine in children with a variety of family or personal histories.

Orthodontic Treatment

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many practising orthodontists work in the NHS in each health authority area in England.

Dr. Mawhinney: Any dentist who has the necessary facilities, experience or expertise may provide orthodontic treatment.

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the average waiting time for orthodontic treatment for each health authority area in England.

Dr. Mawhinney: A full comparison of average in-patient and day case waiting times for the orthodontic specialty is not possible because health authorities may record orthodontic treatment under different categories, for example, out-patient activity or general surgery.

Benzene

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her Department's assessment of the health hazard posed by benzene vapour releases from petrol.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Ms Jackson) on 26 January at columns 297-98.

Leeds Healthcare

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to ensure that the circumstances identified in the health service commissioner's report on Leeds healthcare failure to provide long-term health care to a patient seriously incapacitated after a stroke are not repeated elsewhere; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: As part of the new community care arrangements we have required health and local authorities to agree their respective responsibilities for long-term care. This should be done in the light of their assessment of the best way to provide a comprehensive service to meet the needs of their local populations. We have also required them to agree co-ordinated hospital discharge arrangements. In addition, the chief executive of the National Health Service Management Executive wrote to all health authority managers, trust chief executives and unit general managers on 20 January 1994, EL(94)8, to remind them of the importance of having in place explicit and comprehensive discharge procedures which should be reviewed regularly. Copies of the letter are available in the Library.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many live births there were in 1993.

Mr. Sackville: A provisional estimate of the number of live births occurring in England and Wales in 1993 is 674,000.

West Midlands Patient Transport Service

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the West Midlands health authority received a request for arbitration concerning the patient transport service; and from whom.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for West Midlands Health. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Bryan Baker, chairman of that authority, for details.

Pharmaceutical Industry

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the prospects of the pharmaceutical industry.

Dr. Mawhinney: The pharmaceutical industry has a long record of success in the United Kingdom. The industry employs about 80,000 people in the United Kingdom and has a positive balance of trade—estimated at about £1·5 billion for 1993, the second largest contribution to the United Kingdom balance of trade. We expect the industry to continue to be successful in the years to come.

James Paget Hospital, Gorleston

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the guarantees she has given on the presumption that following the dismantling of the Great Yarmouth and Waveney district health authority on 1 April, the James Paget hospital, Gorleston, shall be deemed the local hospital for the people of north Suffolk; and what qualifications to these guarantees she now expects to make.

Mr. Sackville: The East Anglian regional health authority has given a comprehensive package of guarantees to the people of Great Yarmouth and Waveney. Ministers would expect the guarantees to be honoured or to have explained, in clear terms, why that was not possible. Copies of the guarantees will be placed in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those topics on which it is not her practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if she will list any recent changes in the practice of her Department.

Mr. Sackville: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

SCOTLAND

Mr. Douglas Mason

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what way Mr. Douglas Mason has been commissioned, employed or retained by his Department, or any agency, organisation, company or body appointed or funded by his Department, at any time during the last three years; what were his functions, responsibilities and duties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Mr. Douglas Mason has been a member of Glenrothes development corporation board since 1 January 1985, when he was appointed as a local authority member; he was last reappointed on 1 January 1992 and his current period of office is expected to run until 31 December 1995 when the corporation is due to be wound up. The duties involved are attendance at the corporation's meetings, which are normally held once a month, and any such tasks as may from time to time be allotted to individual members. The responsibilities of the development corporation are laid out in section 3 of the New Towns (Scotland) Act 1968 and the constitution and proceedings of development corporations covered by schedule 2 of the Act. Appointees to a development corporation also receive a copy of the code of conduct for board members. I have arranged for a copy of that code of conduct to be placed in the Library of the House. Mr. Mason has not been commissioned, employed or retained otherwise by my Department or any of its agencies. I am not aware if he has been so engaged by any other body funded by my Department.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1990-91 after 28 November 1990, 1991-92, 1992-93 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Lang: My ministerial colleagues and I have a single travel budget so I am unable to provide a budgetary figure. Details of actual expenditure from the use of public transport for the period 28 November 1990 until 31 January 1994 are as follows:

	Internal (£)	Overseas (£)
28 November 1990 to 31 March 1991	3,180	375
1 April 1991 to 31 March 1992	8,066	5,636
1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993	6,495	5,045
1 April 1993 to 31 January 1994	5,144	11,406

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the terms of reference of the public inquiry on the electricity interconnector with England.

Mr. Stewart: The application by ScottishPower to upgrade the existing 275 KV transmission line between Strathaven and Harker to 400 KV was referred to a public inquiry in 1991. This was conducted by a reporter from the Scottish Office inquiry reporters unit. His minute of appointment required him to report to my right hon. Friend on the placing above ground of transmission lines in certain defined areas for the reason that the proprietors had refused to give consent to the placing thereover of the said lines and to consider the objections to the erection of the said lines.

Children in Hospital

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the number of children at present inappropriately placed in long-stay hospitals.

Mr. Stewart: Excluding those on respite care, there are currently 21 children aged 15 or under who are long-term residents in NHS facilities, of which only five are located in a hospital. It is for individual health boards, as purchasers of health care, together with the other care agencies to assess whether continuing in-patient care is appropriate to an individual child's needs.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what target date he has set for the discharge of those children with disabilities who are being inappropriately cared for, at present, in long-stay hospitals; and what progress has been made since the publication of the White Paper, "Scotland's Children", on finding appropriate accommodation and support for such children.

Mr. Stewart: We have established that there is only a small number of children under 16 who are long stay residents in national health service facilities. Many have complex needs and we will be discussing with health boards and social work departments the best form of facilities for them.

Renfrew Health Care Trust

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the responsibilities of the Renfrew Health Care Trust; if he will list the members of the trust; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Renfrewshire Healthcare was established as an NHS trust on 6 December 1993 and as a "shadow" trust has the limited functions of entering into NHS contracts and other contracts including contracts of employment, acquiring or disposing of land and other property, and doing such other things as are necessary to prepare the Trust for full operation from 1 April 1994. From that date the Trust's functions will be to own and manage Dykebar, Hawkhead, Bridge of Weir, Merchiston, Johnstone and Ravenscraig hospitals and any establishments, facilities and support services associated with those hospitals. In so doing the Trust will be responsible for achieving such financial objectives as are set for it by the Secretary of State.

The members of the Trust are:

Chairman
Dr. John Moffat
Non-executive Directors
Mr. Basil Baird
Mrs. Margaret Foggie
Mrs. Jean Goldie
Mr. John Hornibrook
Mr. David McNiven
Chief Executive
Mr. Ken Brewer
Medical Director
Dr. John McCurley
Director of Finance
Mrs. Lyn Hollis
Director of Personnel
Mr. Malcolm Dickinson
Director of Nursing
Still to be appointed.

Exports

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the value of exports which derive from each local authority district in Scotland, expressed both in cash terms and as a percentage of the total; if he will also show the estimated per capita value of these exports for each district; and if he will make a statement on the variations between districts.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available. However, the Scottish Council Development and Industry, which produces the Annual Survey of Scottish Manufactured Exports, also compiles reports commissioned by a number of local enterprise companies. These reports are published and are available from SCDI.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the executive agencies which are responsible to his Department.

Mr. Lang: I am responsible for five executive agencies in the Scottish Office. These are:

Scottish Prison Service
Scottish Office Pensions Agency
Scottish Agricultural Science Agency
Historic Scotland
Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency

In addition, I am responsible for two independent departments which are also executive agencies. These are the Registers of Scotland and the Scottish Record Office.

I have announced that the student awards branch of the Scottish Office will become an executive agency from 5 April 1994. The fisheries research service and roads directorate of the Scottish Office and the Scottish Court Service, part of the Scottish Courts Administration, are currently under consideration for executive agency status.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of Alzheimer's disease have been identified within Scotland; how many of those affected are (a) hospitalised, (b) in residential care and (c) being cared for in the community; and what further assistance he proposes to provide to carers.

Mr. Stewart: The figures requested are not available. However, there were 4,666 patients with dementia in mental illness hospitals and psychiatric units at the end of 1992. There were 4,145 people in residential homes for the elderly reported by the homes as being mentally confused at 31 March 1992. Estimates suggest that there are up to about 90,000 people suffering from some form of dementia. An estimated 60 per cent. of these suffer from Alzheimer's disease.

Local authorities have lead responsibility for assisting carers. It is for authorities to decide the particular services which they provide, drawing on the substantial resources provided for the implementation of community care.

Stoddard's Carpet Factory

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last visited Stoddard's carpet factory in Elderslie; what plans he has to make a ministerial visit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend visited Stoddard's factory in 1987 as the Scottish Office Minister with responsibility for industry and home affairs. He has no plans to re-visit the factory. There have been more recent visits to the factory by our officials.

Fox Hunting

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ban fox hunting on all land over which he has jurisdiction.

Sir Hector Monro: No.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department now recognises the classification of myalgic encephalomyelitis as a disease by the World Health Organisation; what plans he has to give health boards guidance on the treatment of this disease; what funds he will make available for research into its prevention and cure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The version of the international classification of diseases currently in operation in Scotland is the ninth revision, ICD9, which does not have a specific code for myalgic encephalomyelitis, ME, although it can be recorded under "unspecified encephalopathy". The next revision, ICD10, which has a code for "Benign Myalgic Encephalomyelitis", is expected to come into operation in Scotland in spring 1996.

As a matter of principle, the Government do not issue clinical guidance, since that is the responsibility of the medical profession.

The chief scientist office of the Scottish Office Home and Health Department is always prepared to give consideration to applications for scientifically bases research projects related to ME.

CPC (United Kingdom) Ltd.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of CPC (United Kingdom) Ltd., to discuss the continuance and development of their food manufacturing operation in Paisley; when he next plans to meet them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has had no meeting with representatives of CPC (United Kingdom) Ltd. to discuss the future of the company's operation in Paisley, and he has no plans for such a meeting. Our officials in Locate in Scotland, however, have met representatives of the company and are maintaining contact.

Co-operative Movement

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans Her Majesty's Government have to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the founding of the co-operative movement by the Rochdale pioneers.

Mr. Stewart: The Government have no such plans.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the places which are being considered as future venues for meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Grand Committee is a Committee of the House of Commons and accordingly responsibility for arranging meeting venues lies with the authorities of the House.

OPEN Project, Paisley

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide funding which will allow the one person employment network project in Paisley, operated by ENABLE from urban aid funding services, to extend its catchment area beyond areas of priority treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The area covered by the OPEN project was defined in the application for urban programme support submitted by Strathclyde regional council in November 1991. Extending the project's boundaries would be a matter for the regional council. Urban programme support is available only in those areas designated as eligible for such funding.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the shortfall of provision of sheltered housing to meet known needs in Renfrew district; how long it will take at current expenditure levels to match provision to need; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A comparison between the actual number of sheltered housing units in Renfrew district notified by the district council and the guideline figure of need estimated in accordance with the Scottish Office Environment Department circular 8/91 "Housing and Community Care" suggests that there may be a shortfall of 466 units in the district. It is, however, for the local authority to make its own estimate of the level of need and set targets for meeting that need based on its knowledge of local circumstances and other competing priorities for investment.

Local Housing authorities are not expected to provide all sheltered housing in their district, but to work with other housing agencies, including Scottish Homes, to meet local needs. Renfrew District Council should take into account the contribution of Scottish Homes and other housing providers when setting targets for meeting their estimated need for sheltered housing.

Ambulance Service

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the number and grades of the operational staff employed by the Scottish ambulance service in each area or division in each year since 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is shown in the following table. The whole-time equivalent number of operational staff has risen from 1,720 in 1984 to 2,195 in 1994—an increase of nearly 28 per cent.

Carpet Manufacturing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the state of the carpet manufacturing industry in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: The latest full year figures show that the output of the Scottish carpet industry increased by almost 6·5 per cent. between 1991 and 1992. However this was against the background of a downward trend in output since 1989. Employment in the industry has been broadly stable since 1991 at around 1,500 employees.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to promote on the international market carpets designed and manufactured in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish carpet industry can benefit from a wide range of advice and assistance available from Scottish trade international, including the Government's overseas trade services. These include support for participation in industry specific overseas trade fairs. The Scottish Enterprise-funded Scottish textile design development scheme places design graduates with Scottish textile companies to assist in improving their design awareness and capabilities. The Scottish carpet industry has benefited from this scheme.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the precise duties and responsibilities of each Minister in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The information requested by the hon. Member is included in the Cabinet Office publication "List of Ministerial Responsibilities". Copies are distributed to hon. Members by the Vote Office.

Councillors (Expenses)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase the (a) special responsibility payments, (b) allowances, (c) subsistence allowances and (d) travelling expense rates of elected members of Scottish local authorities in the forthcoming financial year.

Mr. Stewart: The system of councillors' allowances and the travel and subsistence allowances scheme are currently under review.

Coylton-Ballantrae Power Line

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the organisations which have submitted objections to the proposal by Scottish Power to construct a power line from Coylton to Ballantrae, and the total number of members of the public and hon. Members of both Houses of Parliament who have submitted objections by the final date designated for the submission by such non-statutory bodies and individuals.

Mr. Stewart: The 17 organisations listed below have submitted objections to the proposals.

Association for the Protection of Rural Scotland
Ayrshire Tourist Board
Barr Community Council
Barhill Community Council
Burns Country Tourist Association
Coylton Branch SNP
Coylton Community Council
Crosshill, Straiton and Kirkmichael Community Council
The Grey Man Hillwalking Club
Leitrum Stop the Pylons Movement (Republic of Ireland)
National Farmers Union—Ayr Area
Pinwherry Community Association
Pinwherry Community Council
Scottish Agricultural Organisation Society Ltd.
Scottish Landowners Federation
Scottish Wildlife Trust
Stonehouse Heritage Group

In addition, approximately 5,500 representations have been received from members of the public and hon. Members of both Houses of Parliament.

Scottish Co-operative Development Company

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the role of the Scottish Co-operative Development Company in economic development; what support is offered by his Department and by Scottish Enterprise; what guidelines he has issued to local enterprise companies on their relationships with the Scottish Co-operative Development Company; and if he will allocate additional funding to the Scottish Co-operative Development Company for the development of a phoenix unit.

Mr. Stewart: The Government acknowledge that the Scottish Co-operative Development Company has performed a valuable role in helping to establish business co-operatives. One of the company's main sources of income is the urban programme, which is funded by the Scottish Office. The company currently receives no funding from Scottish Enterprise. It is open to local enterprise companies to contract with the Scottish Co-operative Development Company as they see fit; my right hon. Friend has issued no guidelines on this matter.

The question of funding for a phoenix unit will be considered when the company submits its proposals to the Scottish Office.

Co-operatives

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to encourage the development of retail, wholesale and manufacturing co-operatives.

Mr. Stewart: Co-operatives have benefited and will continue to benefit from the range of Government policies designed to encourage the development of small and medium-sized businesses. Scottish Office funding for a number of co-operative projects has been made available through the urban programme, and applications for funding for other such projects can still be made.

Patients

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many patients have been treated in national health service hospitals' private facilities in each year since 1987-88;

(2) how much income has been generated by private patient facilities in national health service hospitals in each year since 1987-88.

Mr. Stewart: The number of private patients and the income generated are as follows:

Financial year	Number	Income £
1987-88	1,300	1,060,660
1988-89	1,139	1,078,452
1989-90	1,301	1,224,720
1990-91	1,430	1,354,542
1991-92	1,567	1,935,616
1992-93	[1]1,209	1,357,570

[1] Provisional figure.

Dementia

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many beds are provided for people with dementia by each health board in Scotland and expressed as a percentage of the elderly population.

Mr. Stewart: The number of patients in psychogeriatric beds in hospital with a diagnosis of dementia as at 31 March 1993, the latest date for which complete information is available is shown in the following table.

As at 31 March 1993

	Patients in hospital with a diagnosis of dementia	Percentage of population 65+
SCOTLAND	5,364	0·7
Argyll and Clyde	393	0·6
Ayrshire and Arran	298	0·5
Borders	157	0·8
Dumfries and Galloway	188	0·7
Fife	430	0·8
Forth Valley	223	0·6
Grampian	658	0·9
Greater Glasgow	1,003	0·7
Highland	217	0·7
Lanarkshire	417	0·6
Lothian	716	0·6
Orkney	—	—
Shetland	—	—
Tayside	599	0·9
Western Isles	65	1·2

These figures exclude those in geriatric units with diagnosis of dementia for whom separate information is not centrally held.

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish targets for the reduction of NHS continuing care provision for elderly people and people with dementia for each health board by (a) 1996 and (b) 2001; and if he will explain the criteria on which these targets are based.

Mr. Stewart: There are no set targets for the reduction of NHS continuing care provision. It is for individual health boards to determine future in-patient bed numbers, based on assessment of patients who are likely to require continuing specialist medical and nursing supervision.

The scale and pace of any patient transfer programme is subject to local negotiation and agreement between the health and local authorities and founded on the basis of individual patient assessment.

Hospital Staff Redundancies

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of redundancies among national health service hospital staff (a) by grade and (b) by reason for each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Stewart: Statistics on the redundancies in the NHS in Scotland are not collected centrally other than in respect of staff who are both over 50 years of age and have at least five years' reckonable service for superannuation purposes where a benefit is immediately payable under the National Health Service (Compensation for Premature Retirement) (Scotland) Regulations 1981. The total number of such premature retirement awards for the years since 1988-89 is as follows:

Year	Number of cases
1988-89	354
1989-90	1,040
1990-91	480
1991-92	625
1992-93	759

A breakdown by hospital staff only and by grade and by reason of redundancy is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Homicides (Firearms)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many homicides involving (a) shotguns and (b) other firearms have taken place as a result of domestic incidents in each police force area in each of the last 10 years; and how many of the victims in each case were women.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information held on homicides gives details of the relationship between the victim and the accused but does not separately identify incidents involving shotguns from those involving other firearms.

The available information is given in the table:

Total victims of homicide where the method of killing was shooting and the victim was a sibling, parent, spouse, whether separated or otherwise, cohabitee, lover or boyfriend etc., 1983-92[1]

Local Government Pensions

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he has to give to local authorities on enhancing the pensions of senior local government officers who choose to retire early; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The arrangements under which local authorities can make compensation payments to enhance the pensions of staff who retire prematurely on redundancy or in the interests of the efficiency of the service are set out in the Local Government (Compensation for Premature Retirement) (Scotland) Regulations 1979, as amended.

These arrangements are currently being reviewed, in consultation with the local authorities.

Cumbernauld Airport

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the sum realised from the sale of Cumbernauld airport.

Mr. Stewart: The airport was advertised for sale by Cumbernauld development corporation in 1993. Two formal offers were received and the development corporation sold the airport at a price of £71,000 to the existing operator and sitting tenant. The new owner is legally bound for the next 10 years to repay to the corporation any financial gains achieved from a change in use of the airport or 50 per cent. of any financial gains if the new owner extends at his cost the runway within five years from the date of sale. These conditions are intended to ensure that the new owner continues to operate and develop the airport for the benefit of the Cumbernauld area.

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost of constructing Cumbernauld airport.

Mr. Stewart: A grass-surfaced airstrip was constructed by Cumbernauld development corporation in the 1950s. Information about the costs of construction and minor improvements in the period to 1986 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In 1987 the corporation constructed an asphalt runway, apron and taxi-ways, hangarage and terminal buildings at a cost of £2·27 million, £0·97 million of which was provided by the European regional development fund.

Council House Sales

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total income received by each district council from the sales of council houses in each of the past five years; what percentage of these have been reclaimed by his Department, and what is the projected figure, from each council, for the building of new council housing in the next financial year.

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The following table gives details of district council receipts from the sale of council houses for the years 1988-89 to 1992-93. The Department does not reclaim any such receipts.

Information on the numbers of new council houses which district councils plan to build in the next financial year is not held centrally.

Torness (Spent Fuel)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 1025, when he expects to make an announcement on the public inquiry into the spent fuel store at Torness.

Mr. Stewart: I have nothing to add to my earlier answer.

Boundary Commission

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the present members of the Boundary Commission for Scotland; and for what terms they have been appointed.

Mr. Lang: The members of the Boundary Commission for Scotland are:

Madam Speaker, ex-officio, Chairman.

The Hon. Lord Davidson—appointed as deputy chairman by the Lord President of the Court of Session on 25 September 1985 and subsequently re-appointed.

Professor Urlan A. Wannop—appointed by the Secretary of State for Scotland on 6 June 1983 and subsequently re-appointed.

Mr. Adam R. Napier—appointed by the Secretary of State on 2 May 1985 and subsequently re-appointed.

The appointed member's terms of office expire on 31 December 1996.

Community Action Volunteers Scheme

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, if child care provision or payments for the cost of child care or care of infirm relatives will be made available for participants on the community action volunteers scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mrs. Maria Fyfe, dated 9 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Employment has asked met to reply to your question to the Secretary of State for Scotland about Community Action as this programme is being delivered by the Employment Service.

In line with other Employment Service programmes, there are no specific arrangements to provide child care or expenses to cover the cost of child care or care of infirm relatives for Community Action participants.

Community Action is, though, a part-time programme consisting of a minimum of 18 hours work experience and three hours jobsearch activity each week. This allows some flexibility in participation and programme providers are encouraged to exercise this flexibility in order to allow people with caring responsibilities to attend. At their discretion, providers are able to make child care facilities available to participants. A part of the payment made to providers can be used as a contribution for this purpose.

Participation in the programme is, though, in all cases, voluntary.

I hope this is helpful.

Business Bureaucracy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives his Department have undertaken to reduce bureaucracy for businesses in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The Scottish Office, in common with all Government Departments, actively pursues the objectives of the deregulation initiative. These include the removal or streamlining of regulations which add to business costs and threaten competitiveness. It is intended that the regulatory burden on business be as light as possible without reducing important standards of protection for individuals, business or the environment. The current main elements of the deregulation initiative include the publication of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill. Details of other measures are contained in a variety of booklets published by, and available from, the Department of Trade and Industry deregulation unit. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many landowners in Scotland are receiving annual payments under the arable area payments scheme in the latest financial year of (a) up to £100,000, (b) between £100,000 and £500,000, (c) between £500,000 and £1,000,000 and (d) over £1,000,000; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 February 1994]: Under the arable area payments scheme in the current financial year, 9,401 payments of up to £100,000 were made to Scottish producers and a further seven payments of between £100,000 and £500,000. There have been no payments in excess of £500,000.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many cases payments to farmers and landowners under the arable area payments scheme have been withheld or recovered in Scotland; what is the amount of money withheld or recovered in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 February 1994]: Every case in which payments have to be withheld or recovered, for whatever reason, is examined very carefully and applicants have an opportunity to comment before a final decision is taken. This means that it is only possible to provide very provisional figures at this stage. Over 20 cases have so far been reduced or withheld entirely but there are further cases still under consideration. These figures exclude penalties for late applications and adjustments made following corrections notified by the applicant under the special arrangements which applied in 1993 for dealing with genuine errors in the completion of the IACS forms. The total amounts withheld in individual cases vary considerably.

Abortion

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish figures for the number of terminations of pregnancies occurring in Scotland in 1992 (a) by age, (b) by district health authority and (c) by gestation and the numbers being carried out within and outside the national health service.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 8 February 1994]: The information requested is published in "Scottish Health Statistics 1993", which is available in the Library of the House.

Roman Catholic Schools

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the Archbishop of Glasgow, in respect of a meeting to discuss the implications for Roman Catholic schools of local government reorganisation; and what response he has made.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend and I have corresponded on a number of occasions with the Roman Catholic Church authorities, including the Archbishop of Glasgow, about representations which the Church has made about local government re-organisation and we have indicated our willingness to meet to discuss matters further.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Security Commission.

Mr. Waldegrave: The members of the Security Commission are:

Mr. John Mellon
Mr. Eric Nicoli
Mr. Nick Phillips
Mr. Richard Spelman

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the subjects on which the Office of Public Service and Science or its predecessors answered parliamentary questions but which are not referred by him to an executive agency.

Mr. David Davis: Next steps agency chief executives would usually be asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in their agency's framework document.

Bills (Drafting)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will consider allowing hon. Members to seek advice from parliamentary counsel on the drafting of parliamentary Bills which have been duly presented to the House.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the letter I sent him on 10 January.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Waldegrave: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many employees were judged to be guilty of fraud in his Department in each year since 1989; and how many were dismissed.

Mr. Waldegrave: In the Departments and agencies for which I am responsible, and in other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office vote, the figures are:

	Employees judged to be guilty of fraud	Employees dismissed
1989	Nil	—
1990	[1]Nil	—
1991	2	1
1993	2	2

[1] Two loaned officers were included in the response of their parent Department.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his Department's policy for dealing with employees found guilty of fraud.

Mr. Waldegrave: Employees found guilty of fraud in my Departments are dealt with under their disciplinary procedures and where appropriate the criminal code. The disciplinary procedures provide for a range of penalties including dismissal.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the board of the Arts Council.

Mr. Brooke: The current members of the Arts Council of Great Britain are as follows:
Lord Palumbo of Walbrook (Chairman)
Denys Hodson (Vice Chairman)
Beverley Anderson
William Brown
Professor Christopher Frayling
Peter Gummer
Sir Ernest Hall
Michael Holroyd
Thelma Holt
Clare Mulholland
Mathew Prichard
Clive Priestley
Stella Robinson
Prudence Skene
Anthony Smith
Robert Southgate
Professor Colin St. John Wilson

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the reduction in the television licence fee for registered blind persons was first introduced; when it was set at £1·25; and what plans he has to increase it.

Mr. Brooke: The reduction in the television licence fee for registered blind people dates from the introduction of combined television and radio licences in 1946, when registered blind people became entitled to a reduction equivalent to the amount of the radio licence fee. This reduction replaced free radio licences for registered blind people, a concession believed to have been first introduced in 1926. Radio licences were abolished in 1971. The reduction in the television licence fee for registered blind people has remained at £1·25 ever since. The Government have no plans at present to increase the value of the concession.

National Lottery

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps he proposes to take to ensure that tickets for the national lottery are not sold to children, or in inappropriate places.

Mr. Brooke: I have today laid before this House regulations under section 12 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 to establish a number of restrictions on the manner in which national lottery tickets may be sold. Specifically, these regulations prohibit:

the sale of tickets to any person under the age of 16;
the sale of tickets in the street or at a person's home;
sales of tickets in licensed betting offices, at racetracks, in amusement arcades, and in any bingo or gaming club;
the sale of tickets by unattended vending machines.

These regulations will ensure that the sale of national lottery tickets is properly controlled without creating unnecessary restrictions which would interfere with the selected operator's ability to make the lottery the great success we all expect.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made as to the adequacy of the administrative arrangements for the Arts Council as a channel for distributing money flowing from the proposed national lottery.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The Arts Council has been selected as a channel for distributing national lottery money, because of its experience and expertise in arts funding. The council is currently setting in place the necessary administrative arrangements, which I have no doubt will be adequate to discharge its responsibilities effectively.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Brooke: There has been no change in this Department from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Royal Palaces

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, columns 513-14, regarding accommodation at the occupied royal palaces, on what basis and by whom it is determined which staff pay rent, how it is assessed and reviewed and by whom; to whom it is paid; and how many pay rent for accommodation relating to each of the households.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 7 February 1994]: As a general rule, more senior staff pay rent and more junior staff have the benefit of accommodation taken into account in determining wage levels. The postholders who pay rent were determined in discussion with the Treasury some years ago.

Rent, referred to as official accommodation deduction, is paid by 35 of the 220 employees to whom accommodation is provided. The rent or OAD is set at 8.5 per cent. of pre-tax salary, as notified by the Treasury. The amount deducted therefore increases automatically in line with salary increases. Those who pay rent are all employees of the Queen's household. The benefit of paying the reduced salary—the gross salary less the OAD—accrues to the account from which the salary is paid, principally the Queen's civil list or the grant in aid.

For other employees, the value of accommodation is taken into account in determining wage salary levels. In the past, this was not done on a consistent basis for all employees. However, since the revised civil list arrangements were entered into with effect from 1 January 1991, the household has undertaken a complete review of its grading and salary structure, including the introduction of performance-related pay, and pay levels for each post now take into account the value of the benefit of accommodation on a formalised basis. For the majority of the residences, which are modest flats or cottages, the value is taken as the local authority rent for a similar-sized property. The account from which the salary is paid again benefits from the reduced salary cost.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the maximum permitted speeds and minimum permitted altitudes for Royal Air Force Vulcan aircraft, prior to their withdrawal from the strike/attack role, during low-level sorties while deployed to Nellis air force base, Nevada, for Red Flag exercises.

Mr. Hanley: Although records of heights and speeds flown by RAF Vulcan aircraft overseas are not available, inquiries indicate that the maximum permitted speed of 350 knots and minimum height of 300ft, which applied in the United Kingdom low-flying system, were also observed by Vulcan aircrew participating in red flag exercises; where appropriate aircraft would, however, have been authorised to fly down to 100ft to allow them to take full advantage of the weather conditions and facilities offered by these exercises.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose of recording the noise level generated by Hawk aircraft flying at 150ft during Exercise Luce Belle.

Mr. Hanley: A recording of the noise generated by the Hawk aircraft at 150ft was taken during Exercise Luce Belle on the basis that the minimum authorised altitude for the aircraft is 100ft above ground level as explained in my answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 819, to the hon. Member.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level sorties were flown over the United Kingdom by each specified foreign air arm in each month since September 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of sorties flown by aircraft of foreign air forces in the United Kingdom low-flying system in each month since September 1993 to December 1993, the most recent month for which figures are available, were as follows:

	October	November	December
Netherlands	—	—	—
France	—	2	—
Italy	—	8	—
Denmark	—	—	3
United States of America	—	—	—
Germany	—	—	—
Belgium	—	—	—
Canada	—	—	—
Spain	—	—	—
Portugal	2	—	—
Turkey	—	—	—
Total	2	10	3

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of low-flying sorties carried out by each aircraft type in each month since June 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of low-flying sorties by aircraft type carried out in the United Kingdom for the period July 1993 to December 1993, the most recent month for which figures are available, were as follows:

Aircraft Type	July	August	September	October	November	December
Buccaneer	100	139	115	137	74	54
Harrier	733	406	388	543	486	471
Hawk	1,793	1,400	1,474	1,101	1,137	486
Jaguar	625	505	444	617	301	390
Jet Provost	76	69	50	43	—	—
Tornado	2,045	1,953	1,893	1,958	1,504	1,280
Tucano	871	939	801	636	468	380
F-15	235	325	352	178	279	288
F-111	266	205	130	62	34	5
Other Aircraft (including helicopters)	4,887	3,712	4,871	3,613	3,984	2,315
Total	11,631	9,653	10,518	8,888	8,267	5,669

The figures in the table do not include the number of sorties flown within LFA 10 as the information is not yet available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information was available to his Department on the frequency of night low flying over the Western Isles, Orkney and Shetland when the decision was made not to include those areas in the system of numbered night low-flying areas; and if he will make a statement on the means used (a) to deconflict aircraft flying at low level at night over these areas and (b) to identify the aircraft involved in the event of a public complaint about military low flying at night over these areas.

Mr. Hanley: Information available to my Department indicates that only a small amount of night low flying is carried out in these areas, the majority of which is conducted during exercises. Deconflicting arrangements are made during the planning and briefing for such exercises. No complaints about night low flying over these areas have been received in the last five years.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of complaints received from addresses in each of the low flying areas in the United Kingdom in 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Low flying area	Numbers of complaints or inquiries
1	278
2	836
3	19
4	368
5	516
6	374
7	556
8	232
9	69
10	14
11	388
12	230
13	25
14	459
16	583
17	531
18	205

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current minimum annual number of low-level flying hours required for combat ready Tornado GR1 pilots to maintain their currency to fly at 250ft; and what is the specified period of time beyond which pilots who have not flown at 250ft are required to carry out requalification.

Mr. Hanley: A Tornado GR1 pilot is required to complete a minimum of 80 low level sorties during annual training. Each low level sortie must include a minimum of 20 minutes of low flying at 250ft. There is no specified period of time beyond which re-qualification becomes necessary. However, if a combat ready pilot is unable to fly at low level for a period of time his squadron will implement a programme of workdown training prior to authorising him to resume unrestricted low flying at 250ft.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which document contains the regulation requiring that fixed low-flying routes are (a) used as little as possible and (b) replaced are regular intervals; and what maximum interval between such replacements is stipulated.

Mr. Hanley: The regulation requiring fixed routes to be used as little as possible and to be replaced at regular intervals is contained in the United Kingdom military low flying handbook. The stipulation is that fixed routes must be replaced at least twice a year.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the maximum permitted speeds and minimum permitted altitudes for Royal Air Force Vulcan aircraft, prior to their withdrawal from the strike/attack role, while conducting low-level training from Goose Bay, Canada; and if any such training was conducted outside fixed low level training routes.

Mr. Hanley: Although records of heights and speeds flown by RAF Vulcan aircraft overseas are not available, inquiries indicate that the maximum permitted speeds of 350 knots and the minimum height of 300ft, which applied to the United Kingdom low flying system, were also observed at Goose bay, apart from rare occasions when Vulcans were permitted to fly down to 100ft in preparation for red flag exercises. None of these sorties would have taken place outside fixed low-level training routes.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the operating authorities of low flying areas 2P, 3, 9 and 10 are permitted to allow fast jet aircraft to enter their low flying area when helicopters are also operating in the area at low level.

Mr. Hanley: Yes, the co-ordinating authorities of low-flying areas 2P, 3, 9 and 10 may, at their discretion, authorise fixed wing aircraft to enter the areas when helicopters are operating at low level.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of low-flying movements in the United Kingdom low flying system in 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The number of low-flying movements carried out in the United Kingdom low flying system in 1993 was 262,973. These figures do not include the number of movements flown within the newly created low-flying area 10. Statistics for this area are not yet available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying sorties were flown over the United Kingdom by (a) Hercules aircraft and (b) all types of helicopters during 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of low-flying sorties carried out in the United Kingdom by Hercules aircraft and helicopters during 1993 were as follows:

Year	Hercules	Helicopters
1993	2,242	41,493

These figures do not include the number of sorties flown within low-flying area 10 as this information is not yet available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to restricting the low flying avoidance area status of gliding sites on weekdays to those locations whose operators have been advised by his Department of specific weekday activity.

Mr. Hanley: The Civil Aviation Authority provide the location and operating times of all glider sites to the headquarters, military air traffic operations. Sites operating on a weekday are granted avoidance status on the basis of the information provided.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current minimum annual number of flying hours required for combat-ready Tornado GR1 pilots to maintain their currency to fly using terrain-following radar in instrument meteorological conditions (a) in daylight and (b) at night; what is the specified period of time beyond which a qualification to fly in these conditions lapses; and what changes have taken place in these requirements since 1989.

Mr. Hanley: A combat ready Tornado GR1 pilot is required to complete a minimum of eight hours automatic terrain following radar—TFR—flying per year. No distinction is made between TFR flying in instrument meteorological conditions—IMC—by day or night. IMC TFR currency lapses if no qualifying sortie has been flown in the last 30 days. Once a pilot's TFR currency has lapsed he is required to complete a single 20 minute TFR sortie in visual meteorological conditions—VMC—prior to recommencing IMC training. Since 1989 the currency requirement for IMC TFR flying has reduced from 60 days to 30 days.

USAF F-15E

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the report on the recent noise measurement trial involving the US air force F-15E aircraft.

Mr. Hanley: A final analysis of the results of the F-15E noise trial is not yet available. A copy of the report of the trial will be placed in the Library of the House when it has been completed.

Air Misses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the date, location, aircraft type involved, altitude and joint airmiss working group determination of risk category and cause, for each air miss involving a military aircraft in 1993.

Mr. Hanley: I will arrange for a copy of the list of all airmiss reports involving military aircraft in 1993, and which have been investigated to date by the joint airmiss working group, to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the joint airmiss working group report on the air miss between an RAF Tornado and a Jet Ranger helicopter over Caithness on 8 April 1992.

Mr. Hanley: A copy of the report is being placed in the Library of the House.

Salisbury (Disturbance)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement in respect of the disturbance caused by troops from the 22 Royal Engineers and the 1 Battalion Irish Guards in Salisbury.

Mr. Hanley: On the night of 20-21 January in Salisbury two groups of soldiers were involved in a fight near a taxi rank. The military authorities are taking appropriate disciplinary action.

No civilians were involved in the incident, no serious injuries were sustained and there was no damage to property.

HMS Birmingham (Sabotage)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the results of the investigations carried out in respect of the suspected sabotage on HMS Birmingham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The investigations into the alleged sabotage onboard HMS Birmingham are continuing. I will write to the hon. Member once these have been completed.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence is not allocated his own individual budget for travel purposes.

From our records, the costs of his internal and overseas travel from 11 April 1992 to 31 January 1994 can be assessed as follows:

	Internal £	Overseas £
1992-93 (from 11 April 1992)	37,146	222,464
1993-94 (to date)	43,365	187,153

Figures are approximate and cover the costs of Royal Air Force and civil flights. The 'internal' column includes some flights to Europe which it has not possible to identify separately in the time available.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what ministerial visits have been made by representatives of his Department, over each of the last three years to (a) Indonesia, (b) Jordan, (c) Oman, (d) Nigeria, (e) Ecuador, (f) Malaysia and (g) India; and what was their main purpose in each case.

Mr. Hanley: Official visits by Ministers to the countries listed have been as follows:

Indonesia
Secretary of State—1991, 1993
Under-Secretary of State (Armed Forces)—1991

Jordan
None

Oman
Secretary of State—1992, 1994
Minister (Defence Procurement)—1991, 1992, 1993

Nigeria
None

Ecuador
Minister (Defence Procurement)—1992

Malaysia
Secretary of State—1991, 1993
Minister (Defence Procurement)—1991
Under-Secretary of State—1992, 1993
Under-Secretary of State (Armed Forces)—1991

India
Under-Secretary of State—1993

Ministerial visits are generally made to maintain and improve our defence relations with the host country. In each case a broad range of issues was discussed.

RAF Chivenor

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the value of all refurbishment, upgrading and new build work carried out at RAF Chivenor over the last five years.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the Answer I gave on 16 December 1993, Official Report, columns 918-19.

HMS Britannia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates and places visited by HMS Britannia during its 1993 Mediterranean, Gulf and Indian ocean tour; which United Kingdom companies used the tour to promote their wares; what was the total cost of the tour; and what percentage of this cost was met by the companies.

Mr. Hanley: During HM Yacht Britannia's 1993 tour of the Mediterranean, Gulf and Indian ocean, port visits were made on the following occasions:
Gibraltar—20-21 September
Malta—24 September-1 October
Souda Bay—3 October
Istanbul—5-9 October
Piraeus—11-14 October
Cyprus—16-25 October
Djibouti—1 November
Dammam—7-9 November
Abu Dhabi—10-12 November
Bombay—15-19 November
Aden—24-25 November
Suez—30 November
Souda Bay—2 December
Gibraltar—6 December

Opportunities were taken to promote British business during the vists to Istanbul and Bombay. At Istanbul the following companies attended, under the auspices of British invisibles:
Barclays de Zoete Wedd
Barings International Finance
Barings PLC
Barings Security Ltd
Clyde and Co
Coopers and Lybrand
Hill Samuel Bank
Kleinwort Benson PLC
McKenna and Co
SG Warburg and Co Ltd
SG Warburg Group PLC

At Bombay, the royal yacht hosted 95 British companies; I shall place a copy of the list of these companies in the Library of the House.

We do not maintain information on the costs of individual tours. Companies are required to pay additional costs associated with the hospitality afforded them.

Belize

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are currently in Belize; and what plans there are to change this level in the next three years.

Mr. Hanley: Plans to evolve the British garrison in Belize into a training presence were announced to Parliament on 13 May 1993 by my right hon. Friend the Member for Watford at column 561. The draw-down of the garrison accordingly began on 1 January 1994 and there are currently around 1,300 service and civilian personnel in Belize. The draw-down will be completed by the end of September 1994. Thereafter, we plan to begin a programme of jungle training deployments from the United Kingdom, hosted by a resident training team in Belize.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what recent assessment has been made of persistence in the oceanic environment of chemical weapon agents used in (a) Operation Harness, (b) Operation Ozone and (c) Operation Negation in the Bahamas in the 1940s and 1950s;

(2) what recent assessments have been made by his Department into the persistence in the environment of chemical pathogens used in Operation Cauldron in Scottish waters off Stornaway in 1952 and Operation Hesperus in Scottish waters in 1953.

Mr. Hanley: These are matters for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment—CBDE—under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham S. Pearson to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 9 February 1994:

Parliamentary Questions 26 and 519, Order Papers 2 and 3 February 1994

1. Your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what assessment has been made of the persistence in the environment of the biological agents used in Operations HARNESS, OZONE and NEGATION in the Bahamas in the 1940s and 1950s and in Operations CAULDRON and HESPERUS in the Scottish waters in 1952 and 1953 have been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The biological agents in these trials were disseminated from point sources either instantaneously or for a few minutes. As soon as the agents began their down-wind travel as an aerosol, the living microorganisms started to die naturally as a result of exposure to such factors as solar radiation. In addition, the agent would be diluted continuously to an increasing extent in the atmosphere so that the concentration rapidly dropped below one that might present any danger. Finally, gravitational forces would cause agent particles to be deposited on the sea. Any agent particles falling into the sea would be massively diluted as well as killed by the bactericidal and virucidal effects of the sea water.

3. Thus dilution into the atmosphere, deposition of particles into the sea and the progressive decay of the microorganisms with ensuing loss of viability and infectivity meant that the biological agent aerosols have a finite life. In effect, the biological agents ceased to exist after some period of time and distance down-wind.

4. Conditions were selected for these trials and downwind safety areas delineated from which shipping was kept away to ensure that there was no hazard to the public or to the environment.

Service Personnel (Scotland)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a table showing the numbers of service personnel stationed in Scotland during each of the last 15 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of United Kingdom regular forces stationed in Scotland, as at 1 July 1993, were as follows:

	Number
1979	19,016
1980	18,088
1981	18,943
1982	19,005
1983	18,732
1984	20,646
1985	20,108
1986	19,701
1987	19,627
1988	19,288
1989	20,035
1990	19,253
1991	18,246
1992	18,760
1993	19,000

Gulf War (Foreign Government Payments)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what payments the British Government received from foreign Governments following the conclusion of the Gulf war; on what conditions the money was paid out; and on what it was spent;

(2) if he will list the items on which the £660 million donated by the Kuwaiti Government to the British Government following the conclusion of the Gulf war was spent;

(3) whether any of the £660 million paid by the Kuwaiti Government to the British Government following the conclusion of the Gulf war was given on the understanding that it would be paid to British service men as a bonus; and what amount was so paid;

(4) what conditions were attached to the payment by the Kuwaiti Government to the British Government of £660 million following the conclusion of the Gulf war.

Mr. Hanley: Cash contributions made by other Governments towards the cost of the Gulf conflict are detailed in the answer given my right hon. Friend the Member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Hamilton) on 16 November 1992, Official Report, columns 46-47. These contributions, including that of the Government of Kuwait, were made unconditionally, save for those from Japan and Norway, who requested that their contributions be for logistical costs.

Apart from £25,000,000 contributed by Japan taken as an appropriation-in-aid of the Defence Budget in 1990-91, cash contributions were accounted for as consolidated fund extra receipts in the defence appropriation accounts, and thus offset the Government's increased expenditure arising from the conflict. Details of the Government's additional costs are listed in the minutes of evidence, pages 2 and 3, of the fifty-fifth report of the Committee of Public Accounts.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Hanley: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Dwellings

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number and location of (a) dwellings and (b) vacant dwellings by his Department in (i) London, (ii) Birmingham, (iii) Lancashire and (iv) Berkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: As at 31 December 1993 the Ministry of Defence owned the following dwellings and vacant dwellings in London, Birmingham, Lancashire and Berkshire.

Total dwellings	London	Birmingham	Lancashire	Berkshire
Service married quarters	3,764	102	425	1,245
MOD Civilian Houses	0	0	0	219
Total	3,764	102	425	1,464
Vacant Dwellings
Service married quarters	567	40	46	71

Total dwellings				London	Birmingham	Lancashire	Berkshire
	MOD Civilian Houses	0	0	0	44
	Total	567	40	46	115

The majority of the vacant married quarters were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work or modernisation or were already allocated to Service families who were due to move in shortly. In addition 229 vacant married quarters in London and 206 tenanted civilian houses in Berkshire were in the process of being sold.

Service Pay Award

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what savings will result from the decision to award pay rises to service personnel in two stages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The cost in 1994-95 of implementing in full the recommendations of the Armed Forces Pay Review Body from 1 April 1994, which were higher than for any other of the report groups, would be some £206,000,000. Staging of the award with all personnel receiving an increase of 2·7 per cent. on 1 April and the balance of the award on 1 January 1995, is estimaed to cost £166,000,000 in 1994-95. The saving is therefore £40,000,000.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans he has to review pay, allowances, and terms of employment for service personnel; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has for the appointment of an independent body who will review pay, allowances, and terms of employment for service personnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: In the light of changes in military commitments and deployment patterns, plans are in hand for a major independent review of service career and manpower structures and terms and conditions of service, to ensure that we have arrangements which are appropriate to the early part of the 21st century. We envisage that a review team comprising an independent Chairman and some three or four independent members should undertake such a study, which is expected to last about a year. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, hopes to make appointments to the team shortly. The Armed Forces Pay Review Body will separately make recommendations to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in the normal way on the levels of service pay in 1995-96.

Performance Pay

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which management consultants have been appointed to examine performance pay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The MOD like other Government Departments, has introduced a system of performance related pay for its civilian staff based on overall annual staff report markings. This has been entirely achieved by the effective use of my Department's manpower and expertise, as well as through consultation with other Government Departments undergoing the same process. The use of external management consultants was unnecessary.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 7 February 1994]: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has one paper shredding machine in his private office. Records of the number of such machines in my Department are not held centrally and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

RAF Expenditure (Curtains)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total expenditure by the RAF on curtains in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 7 February 1994]: In common with many other Defence accommodation stores, curtains are purchased on a tri-service basis; expenditure on those bought for the RAF is not recorded separately and could not be made available without disproportionate cost.

RAF Innsworth (Accommodation)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been spent on improving accommodation assigned to (a) commanding officers, (b) other officers and (c) other ranks at RAF Innsworth in each year for the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 7 February 1994]: At RAF Innsworth, in financial year 1992-93 some £38,000 was spent on improving accommodation assigned to commanding officers and some £7,000 on improving accommodation assigned to other officers; there was no such expenditure on accommodation assigned to other ranks. There was no expenditure on improving accommodation in financial year 1991-92 and there has been no such expenditure in financial year 1993-94.

Haymes Garth

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what money has been spent on new curtains for Ministry of Defence property near Cheltenham known as Haymes Garth in each of the last three years;

(2) how much money has been spent on improving Ministry of Defence property near Cheltenham known as Haymes Garth in each of the last three years.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 7 February 1994]: Expenditure at Haymes Garth in financial year 1991-92 comprises some £3,000 on maintenance; in financial year 1992-93 comprised some £250,000 on maintenance, fittings and improvements, which included some £33,000 on new curtains and window treatments and some £31,000 on improvements to the property. There has been no such expenditure in Financial Year 1993-94.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who are the members currently appointed to the Occupational Pensions board.

Mr. Hague: Members currently appointed to the Occupational Pensions Board are:

Mr. Peter D. Carr, CBE—chairman
Miss Harriet Dawes—deputy chairman
Mr. Ron Amy
Mrs. Rosemary Brown
Mr. Robin Ellison
Mr. Alan Herbert
Mr. Andrew Lyburn
Mr. Alan Pickering
Mr. William Ramsay
Mr. Martin Slack
Mr. Ken Thomas
Miss Patricia Triggs

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who are the members currently appointed to the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council.

Mr. Scott: The current members of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council are:

Professor J. M. Harrington CBE, chairman—Professor of occupational health, university of Birmingham.
Mr. P. E. Arscott OBE—Health and safety consultant.
Dr. J. Asherson—Head of health and safety and land use, CBI.
Miss J. C. Brown—Independent researcher in social policy.
Mrs. J. Carter—Member of TUC general council.
Professor M. J. Cinnamond—Professor of otorhinolaryngology, Queen's university of Belfast.
Dr. D. N. M. Coggon—Reader in occupational and environmental medicine, MRC environmental epidemiology unit.
Professor A. D. Dayan—Professor of toxicology, St. Bartholomews hospital medical college.
Dr. C. P. Juniper—Senior medical adviser, Unilever plc.
Mr. T. Mawer—Lawyer.
Professor A. J. Newman Taylor OBE—Consultant physician, National Heart and Lung Institute.
Mr. R. Pickering—National president, GMB.
Dr. L. Rushton—Senior lecturer in medical statistics, university of Nottingham.
Dr. C. Taylor—Chief medical officer, British Steel.
Mr. O. D. Tudor—Assistant secretary, TUC.
Mrs. M. Twomey—Member of TUC.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who are the members currently appointed to the Central Adjudication Services.

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State appoints the chief adjudication officer, CAO, and the chief child support officer, CCSO. Mr. Ken Bellamy CBE, a full-time civil servant, is currently appointed as both CAO and CCSO. He heads Central Adjudication Services and is responsible for the recruitment of his support staff, who are also civil servants.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Hague: The travel and subsistence budget for all Department of social security Ministers and their private office staff was set at £364,817 for 1992-93 and £381,234 for 1993-94. There is not a separate allocation for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State within that.

Actual expenditure on the Secretary of State's travel within this country was £512·50 between 11 April 1992 and 10 April 1993 and £349·30 from 11 April 1993 to date. The expenditure on overseas travel for the same periods was £4,788·51 and £184·54 respectively.

In addition, the Secretary of State has the use of a car from the Government car service. The cost of this service was £48,642·40 for 1992-93 and £37,425·50 for 1993-94 up to the end of December 1993.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for sickness and incapacity benefits were referred to the regional medical services in each quarter since January 1992; how many of these cases resulted in medical examinations; and what were the outcomes (a) where examinations took place and (b) where they did not.

Mr. Scott: Latest available figures are in the table.

Correspondence

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to receive and respond formally to letters from right hon. and hon. Members marked for his personal attention; if he will make it his policy to ensure that letters to him are not referred to the chief executives of executive agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: Next steps agency chief executives are asked to reply on operational matters of their agencies and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in the agency's framework document. Before letters are transferred to chief executives they are always seen by Ministers to decide whether or not a ministerial response is appropriate.

Retirement Pensions (Women)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of women who could have received 25 per cent. retirement pension for some years before their husbands retired if they had revoked their election timeously and paid modest class 1 contributions.

Mr. Hague: Records are not kept in a way which would enable a reliable estimate to be made.

Benefits Agency

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) in what circumstances the Benefits Agency informs citizens of gaps in their contributions; and if it is practice to inform citizens in time to make up these contributions before the year in which they reach pensionable age;

(2) what policy or guidelines his Department has laid down for the executive agency on advising married women who have elected to pay reduced contributions about the state of their contribution record;

(3) if he will issue new instructions that married women or widows paying reduced contributions are advised about their records several years before reaching pensionable age in order to be in time to make a choice on changing to full contributions.

Mr. Hague: Approximately 18 months after the end of each tax year the Contributions Agency issues statements to those people who, according to their records, have paid insufficient national insurance contributions for that year to count towards entitlement for the basic state retirement pension or widows pension.

The statement gives details about the amount of voluntary contributions the person needs to pay to make up the deficiency for that year. Voluntary contributions must be paid within six years of the end of the tax year in question, but in any case they should be paid before the date of claim to retirement pension in order to maximise benefit entitlement.

The statements are targeted towards those who are most likely to benefit from information about the deficiency in their contribution record. There are therefore a number of circumstances where the statements are not issued, for example where the person is aged 59 or over for a woman or aged 64 or over for a man, where no currrent address is held or the person is known to be abroad or where no contributions were received for the year in question and the preceding year. Even so, the latest issue entailed some 3·5 million statements.

Married women who have elected to pay reduced rate contributions were exercising a free choice, no longer available, and would usually expect to rely on their husband's national insurance contribution record in order to qualify for a basic retirement pension. The implications of that choice were set out in an explanatory leaflet accompanying the election form.

This Department does not inform such women of deficiencies in their contribution record because they have exercised a choice not to pay standard rate contributions. It is however open to any person, including women who have elected to pay reduced rate contributions, to request information about their contribution record or a forecast of their expected state retirement pension from the Benefits Agency. If a woman has elected to pay reduced rate contributions, the pension forecast will tell her that if she wishes to improve her benefit position by paying more years of full conrtributions, she will have to cancel her election to pay reduced rate contributions. From then on she would be able to pay contributions which do count towards retirement pension, subject always to her achieving a minimum entitlement of 25 per cent.

The Department is continually looking at ways of developing procedures to make information even more readily available to people about benefits and contributions.

Industrial Diseases

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each year since 1989, by institution or individual the total level of award, all research grants awarded by the DSS/DHSS which have involved research into occupational diseases.

Mr. Scott: Since 1989 this Department has commissioned one piece of research into occupational diseases, a study of lung cancer risk in pottery, refractory and sandstone workers. The value of the award is £36,400 to the department of occupational medicine at the National Heart and Lung Institute, and the centre for occupational health at the university of Manchester. Further details are in the Department's research yearbook, for 1992-93, copies of which are available in the Library.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the industrial injuries benefit scheme.

Mr. Scott: Last year, the Government announced a long-term review of social security expenditure. Under the long-term review, each part of the social security programme will be examined to ensure that the objectives are right for the 1990s. Nothing is exempt from that review.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 628, how many Christmas cards he and his Ministers sent out in 1993; and at what cost.

Mr. Hague: Seven hundred and ten cards were obtained from the Charity Christmas Card Council at a cost of £282·49. Most of the cards were sent out by second-class post.

Disablement Benefits

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the results of studies carried out in the course of developing the new incapacity for work test for incapacity benefit.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 31 January, Official Report, columns 583-84.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy that attendance at rehabilitation courses will be regarded as a period of incapacity to work in relation to eligibility for disability working allowance.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration his Department has given to defining unemployment benefit as a passport for disability working allowance for otherwise eligible people.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Alfred Moris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to increase the margin above family credit to provide an incentive for appropriate persons to claim disability working allowance.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the difference between the current number of disabled people receiving the disability working allowance and his Department's original forecast; and how he accounts for the difference.

Mr. Scott: The current caseload is 3,405. The original estimate was that about 50,000 people might be entitled to disability working allowance, which was introduced as a completely new benefit in April 1992 and can, of course, be expected to take a number of years to become established. We have commissioned extensive independent research to help evaluation and this is expected to be completed in 1996.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his present estimate of the number of people now receiving invalidity benefit who will not qualify for the benefit by which it is being replaced;

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of people now receiving invalidity benefit who will not qualify for the proposed new incapacity benefit and who, being unable to work full time, will have to seek income support.

Mr. Scott: Our current estimate is that around 200,000 people receiving invalidity benefit in April 1995 may be excluded from receiving incapacity benefit by the proposed new medical test during the first two years. It is not possible to give an accurate assessment of how many will have to seek income support.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has had from national organisations of and for disabled people about his proposal to discontinue invalidity benefit; what replies he has sent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have received a large number of comments on our proposals, mainly in response to the consultation document on the proposed new medical incapacity test. We will be publishing a report on the outcome of the consultation exercise, which ends on 11 February. The national disability organisations which have responded include the following:

Cancer Relief Macmillan Fund
The Churches Council for Health and Healing
The Disabled Living Foundation
The Disability Alliance
The Disability Benefits Consortium
The Disablement Income Group
Ileostomy Association of Great Britain and Ireland
The Mental Health Foundation
Mobility Trust
The Multiple Sclerosis Society of Great Britain and Northern Ireland
Pensioners and Disabled Alliance
National Back Pain Association
National Schizophrenia Fellowship
National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities
National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux
The Neurofibromatosis Association
The Pain Society
Scottish Association for Mental Health
The Stroke Association

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) for each of the administrative regions of the Benefits Agency in the United Kingdom, how many women have (a) had an increase of invalidity benefit suspended, (b) applied for that suspension to be lifted and (c) had the suspension lifted;

(2) for each of the Benefits Agency district offices in Wales, how many women have (a) had an increase of invalidity benefit suspended, (b) applied for that suspension to be lifted and (c) had the suspension lifted.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 8 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about women in receipt of invalidity Benefit (IVB) in the United Kingdom, and more specifically Wales, who, at age 60, have had an increase of IVB suspended.

The information is not available in the exact format requested. This is because the statistics provided are for Great Britain rather than the United Kingdom (the United Kingdom including Northern Ireland). I have therefore appended the information that is available for the United Kingdom which has been collated into Benefits Agency Area Directorates, within which there are a number of District and Benefit Offices. The information for Wales has been broken down by Benefit Agency District, each District comprising of a District Office and one or more Benefit Offices.

The information given is that available at the last working day of August 1993, the last for which detailed information is, at present, held.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) on what basis he will assess extreme hardship in individual cases of women over 60 years whose invalidity benefit increase is being suspended;

(2) what discretion he has to lift the suspension of invalidity benefit increase for women over 60 years in Wales in cases of extreme hardship; and what are the limits on the lifting of the suspension in terms of the income of the women concerned.

Mr. Scott: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's discretion to take account of extreme hardship in deciding whether to impose or lift suspension of benefit is exercised on his behalf by Benefits Agency staff. Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency will write to the hon. Member with further information.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 8 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Services has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about women in receipt of Invalidity Benefit (IVB), who at age 60 have had an increase of IVB suspended.

Regulation 37A of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations provides that where a decision by a Social Security Commissioner is being appealed to the Courts, payment of benefit in any cases affected by the decision may be suspended by the Secretary of State (SoS) pending the outcome of the appeal. Payments of Invalidity Benefit to women over 60 are currently being suspended under this regulation pending the resolution of a case which is before the Court of Appeal.

The power to suspend is discretionary. The SoS therefore also has discretion not to susped if it would be inappropriate to do so, for example if it would cause exceptional hardship in an individual case. This discretion is exercised on the SoS's behalf by Benefits Agency (BA) staff.

There are no set criteria for lifting suspensions. Each case is considered in relation to the personal circumstances of the customer. However, the BA, conscious of the requirement to treat all customers fairly, has recently issued guidelines on the question of hardship to all local offices. They stress that cases have to be looked at individually and that, while it is not possible to state in hard and fast terms what constitutes exceptional hardship, a number of factors need to be borne in mind by staff considering hardship applications.

These include the fact that hardship will arise only in exceptional circumstances; that prior to the Commissioner's decision IVB would have been reduced to the rate of the Retirement Pension that would otherwise have been payable; that Income Support and Social Fund are available to meet financial hardship; and that the onus is on the customer to prove that hardship exists rather than on the Agency Department to disprove hardship.

The guidance also gives two examples of circumstances in which exceptional hardship might be considered. These are:—

(i.) where it is already known or suspected that a customer has a terminal illness and is likely to die before the outcome of the appeal is known; and

(ii.) where the customer has been led to believe that benefit will continue at the higher rate and has entered into a financial commitment on that basis.

It is not inevitable that exceptional hardship would be found to exist in these sort of situations. Nor are they the only situations in which exceptional hardships would be considered. Nevertheless they provide examples of what "exceptional hardship" might mean and indicate that such cases can be expected to arise only rarely.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Scott: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Overseas Pensions

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many United Kingdom citizens are entitled to overseas pensions not exceeding £500 per annum to which contributions were made before 1970 and which are not remitted to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hague: The Department does not hold this information.

Benefits Office, Paisley

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the planned operational opening date of the new Benefits Agency office in Paisley; how many staff will be deployed to this office; how many new (a) full-time and (b) part-time jobs will be created; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The opening of a new Benefits Agency office in Paisley is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 8 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the new Benefits Agency office in Paisley.

The planned operational opening date of the new office is Spring 1995. At this stage I cannot give a more specific date as work on the site commenced in November 1993 and we have assumed approximately 18 months for a new building from start to finish.

As the 1995/96 resource allocations are not yet known it is not possible to be precise about the number of staff in the new office. However, on current projections, the new office is expected to house around 245 staff in total—around 220 Benefits Agency staff (including Sector Fraud), around 15 Contributions Agency staff and around 10 Child Support Agency staff.

It is not anticipated that any new jobs, either full time or part time, will be created in Benefits Agency, Contributions Agency or Child Support Agency. This is a move of an existing organisation from a very poor and inadequate building to a new custom built premises to provide improved quality services for customers and staff alike.

The Renfrew District Manager, Colin Wright, will be happy to provide you with any further progress reports should you require them.

I am sorry that I cannot be more precise with the information I have provided at this stage, but I hope you find my reply helpful.

Local Offices

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many Benefits Agency local offices displayed information on their local performance in July 1993; and what indicators were used;

(2) what new national targets for benefit services were published in 1992-93; and what reports were published by the Benefits Agency on how it performed against existing targets;

(3) how many Benefits Agency districts had published local performance targets by July 1993; and to what extent they were being met.

Mr. Burt: Performance targets within the Benefits Agency are a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the agency's chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 8 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking about local and national performance targets within the Benefits Agency (BA).

I am pleased to say that by the end of January 1993 all BA districts had published Local Charter Standard Statements which included local performance targets. Information as to how individual districts performed against these targets is not available as it is not collated centrally. I have, however, provided at appendix A the national year to date performance against targets, as at December 1993, for District benefits.

Local Charter Standard Statements are displayed in all local offices and contain local standards of service. As many local standards are focused on the specific needs of the local customer population it is not possible to give a complete list of all indicators used. However, in general, Income Support clearance targets, Social Fund clearance targets, and waiting times are the most likely, and most usually displayed.

From April 1994 we will be collecting centrally information on how districts are performing against national targets.

Details of the new national targets for benefit services published in 1992-93 are provided at appendix B. These include targets for new benefits introduced, and new targets for existing benefits. The Benefits Agency Annual Report and Account published in July 1993 provides details on how the Agency performed against existing targets.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of local offices have been refurbished since June 1991.

Mr. Burt: The refurbishment of DSS local offices is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 8 Feburary 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the proportion of local offices which have been refurbished since June 1991.

All local offices will undergo some form of refurbishment in the course of the year. This can range from simple redecoration, through the upgrading of specific areas, to large scale works involving the decanting of staff whilst major structural work is carried out.

Minor refurbishment (costing less than £5,000), to improve both staff and public areas as part of general building management, is carried out at the discretion of local management. Records of this type of work are not collated centrally, and it is not therefore possible to give details of this work since June 1991.

However, figures for refurbishment projects costing more than £5,000, ie the refurbishment of a public caller area, are collated centrally, and are available. Records of these projects indicate that since the start of the 1991-92 financial year 68 per cent. of DSS local offices have been refurbished in some way or another since April 1991.

Visits to Employers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many special educational visits to employers were made by the Contributions Agency for the year 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993.

Mr. Hague: The administration of national insurance is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 8 February 1994:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency I am responsible for answering questions about relevant operational matters. I have been asked to reply to your question about how many educational visits the Agency made to employers between 1 July 1992 and 30 June 1993.

The Agency makes two types of visits to employers for educational purposes—educational visits and educational surveys. An educational visit is normally undertaken at an employer's request to provide assistance and advice on any aspects of the National Insurance (NI), Statutory Sick Pay (SSP) and Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP) schemes. An educational survey, in addition to providing such assistance and advice, also includes a detailed examination of the employers NI, SSP and SMP records. Educational surveys are usually initiated by the Agency and are undertaken where employers are considered, in the light of the Agency's experience, likely to be at a greater risk of making mistakes in fulfilling their NI, SSP or SMP responsibilities. They can also be undertaken in response to an employer's request.

In the year between 1 July 1992 and 30 June 1993 the Agency made 2,318 educational visits and 27,569 educational surveys.

Service by Telephone

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what new measures the Benefits Agency took in 1992-93 to improve service by telephone.

Mr. Burt: Measures to improve the standard of telephone service within the Benefits Agency are a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the agency's chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 8 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about measures taken by the Benefits Agency took in 1992-93 to improve service by telephone.

On 9 September last year the Secretary of State announced a national programme whereby all Benefits Agency District Offices will provide a One Place service by July 1994, and part of this service includes customers being able to obtain, by telephone, advice and information on Benefit Agency benefits from their local office.

The National Customer Service Definition issued to all managers states the minimum hours that local office switchboards must be open, and offices are required to publish these hours. Offices will also make provision for dealing with customers who contact the office outside normal switchboard hours.

The Benefits Agency is committed to improving accessibility for all our customers, including those who are hard of hearing. All offices/units have been encouraged to install the Minicom and/or Typetalk facilities (both are text telephone services).

The Department has, for some years, operated a policy of replacing old and new inadequate telecommunications equipment. In April 1992 this was turned into a formal roll out programme which identified and replaced ageing and substandard switchboards in offices, with modern, digital switchboards. These replacement switchboards provide the technical platform and facilities to support the customer services and organisational initiatives developed in other areas of the Benefits Agency.

In April 1993 this roll out programme was integrated with Benefits Agency Estates' programme and the implementation of IT equipment, to provide a comprehensive technical base from which to provide a uniform service. This integrated programme is ongoing and will continue for the next 3-5 years.

At the Fylde Benefit Directorate there has been an enhancement to the telephone service provided during 1992-93. Measures undertaken include an increase in the number of consoles on the Fylde switchboard together with requisite staffing, and also the introduction of Direct Dial IN (DDI) to the 8,000 or so telephone extensions located on sites occupied by the directorate lines. The Central Inquiry Handling Service (CEHS), renamed Customer Care Helpline in early October 1993, has had line capacity increased from 120 to 192 with staffing to match. Additionally opening hours were extended in March 1993 to cover the timeband 07.30 to 18.30.

The Family Credit helpline launched in April 1993 deals with an average of 35,000 calls per week and on average 85 per cent. of those calls are answered within five rings.

The Benefit Enquiry Line (BEL) was also extended in April 1993 to provide a form completion service for a range of incapacity and disability benefits. Its opening hours were extended to cover the time band 8.30-18.30 Monday to Friday and 9.00-13.00 Saturday. The equipment was further enhanced in March 1993 and now has the capacity to cope with over 100 work stations. In April 1992 40 advisers were employed with the number rising to 81 by March 1993. During 1992-93 approximately 17,000 customers telephoned BEL and used the Forms Completion Service.

The Child Benefit Centre ran a pilot study last year offering a more personalised and complete service for its customers. Following the success of this pilot, the Centre embarked on a major overhaul of its internal structure, and widely publicising a list of direct dial numbers. The Child Benefit Centre is now handling three times as many calls compared to this time last year.

Following a review of the Freeline service, a project manager was appointed last year to take forward a programme of improvements aimed at making the service more widely available to customers. Five Freeline centres have installed Automatic Call Distribution (ACD), which allocates calls to lines on a strictly first come first served basis. The indications are that the ACD has been effective in reducing call waiting times. It is hoped to install ACD equipment in the remaining five centres, and to open an 11th Freeline centre later this year, which will improve the service still further.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Privatisation

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 15, regarding firms which do not comply with his department's guidelines over privatisation bids, what plans he has to disqualify CNN Data Company from tendering for the DSS Longbenton national insurance computor processing contract.

Mr. Hague: The administration of national insurance is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Nicholas Brown, dated 8 February 1994:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency I am responsible for answering questions about relevant operational matters. I have been asked to reply to your question about possible plans to disqualify CCN Datacom BV from tendering for the computer processing of National Insurance records.

When I wrote to you on 24 January 1994 in response to your earlier question I explained the procurement policy adopted by this Agency in its Market Testing (not privatisation) activities. CCN Datacom BV were invited to tender for the Contributions Agency's Data Entry operation along with the current In-House service provider and 3 other private sector companies. As part of that process, everyone invited to tender is entitled to seek clarification of the Agency's requirements.

A representative of CCN Datacom BV, apparently acting on her own initiative, telephoned an ex-colleague who now works within the data Entry Group of this Agency, seeking information about the current operations. This approach was not in accord with the Agency's requirements for the supply of information. The incident was immediately and thoroughly investigated. It was concluded that no evidence exists that any information of a confidential nature or which could give the company an unfair advantage had been disclosed.

CCN Datacom BV has stated that it was unaware of the action of the employee and has apologised for the breach of procedure.

After a careful review of the facts it was decided that there were insufficient grounds for excluding the company from the tender exercise. The 2 key issues in reaching this decision were that the approach was at a level where information of any significance was unlikely to be forthcoming and in fact no information of any importance was passed over to the company. Nevertheless, CCN Datacom are now well aware of the Agency's view on the matter, and that even relatively minor breaches of the correct procedure will be taken extremely seriously.

I hope that I have clarified the facts of the matter but if you do have any further queries I would be pleased to discuss them with you.

National Insurance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make an estimate of the cumulative spending and savings made on the various changes to national insurance benefits since 1979, in the format of his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) of 6 July 1992, Official Report, columns 85-86.

Mr. Hague [holding answer 25 January 1994]: Such information as is readily available is given in the table. Meaningful estimates of the cumulative expenditure effects of earlier policy measures could not be derived, except at disproportionate cost.

(a) All figures are expressed in millions. They are in cash terms except for the totals which are expressed in real terms (1993-94 prices).

Child Support Agency

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security at what rate the Child Support Agency charges interest on arrears.

Mr. Burt: Where an absent parent does not within 28 days enter into an arrears agreement or where he does not keep to the terms of the agreement interest is charged on the arrears of child maintenance at a rate of 1 per cent. above the base rate current at the time. Where an agreement is entered into and for as long as its terms are adhered to no interest is payable.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many of the applications to the Child Support Agency between April and December 1993 involved absent parents on income support; and how many of these absent parents on income support are now having £2·20 deductions made from their benefit;

(2) how many section 18 reviews of child support officers' decisions had been requested by the end of 1993; how many of these had been resolved by that date; in how many of those the decision had been advised; and what is the average number of weeks that the outstanding reviews have been awaiting decision in each Child Support Agency centre;

(3) how many section 6 child support applicants have argued that they are at risk of harm or undue distress to date; in how many of these cases the reasons were accepted by the Child Support Agency; in how many of those cases the reasons were accepted by the Secretary of State without the need for an interview, by the Secretary of State after interviewing the parent with care, or by the child support officer; how many parents with care subsequently gave the authorisation or information; and how many reduced benefit directions have been issued in the first nine months of the Child Support Agency's activity;

(4) how many maintenance applications had been terminated without a maintenance assessment by the end of 1993; and if he will give a breakdown of these cases, in particular giving the numbers due to section 6 applicants withdrawing claims for income support and family credit;

(5) how many child support accounts had been set up by the Child Support Agency by 31 December 1993; how many of these accounts had arrears outstanding at that point; how many arrears notices had been issued; and how many deductions of earnings orders had been issued by the Child Support Agency by the same date;

(6) how many maintenance application forms have been issued to family credit claimants to date; how many of these have resulted in a maintenance assessment to date; and of those how many of the accounts are in arrears;

(7) what proportion of the existing income support parent with care caseload has been taken on by the Child Support Agency by the end of 1993; and what proportion he estimates will be taken on by April 1994;

(8) how many maintenance assessments had been issued by the end of December 1993; how many of these were category A interim assessments; how many category B interim assessments; and how many were nil assessments;

(9) how many of the letters requesting appeals against child support officers' decisions to child support appeal tribunals have been received within the 28-day limit; and how many of those received after the 28-day limit were accepted because of special reasons;

(10) how many appeals had been made to child support appeal tribunals by the end of 1993; how many of these appeals have been heard by that date; and in how many of those the child support officer's decision has been overturned.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 8 February 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security on a number of aspects about the operations of the Child Support Agency.

The number of maintenance assessments made in the period from 5 April 1993 to 31 December 1993 involving absent parents who were in receipt of income support was 24,300. I understand that to the quarter ending 30 November 1993, the Benefits Agency had made deductions from income support in 6,330 cases.

From 5 April 1993 to 31 December 1993, section 18 reviews had been requested in 12,000 cases. 2,100 of these had been cleared and the decision revised in 1,100, of them. The 9,900 cases in action reflects a rise in numbers in recent weeks. Information on clearance times is being collected but, because of relatively low volumes of cleared cases, is not yet statistically valid.

From 5 April 1993 to 31 December 1993, the cases of 35,600 parents with care were considered in relation to the requirement to cooperate. Of cases so far completed, good cause was accepted in 20,500, the absent parent was named in 7,100, and 160 were referred to the Benefits Agency to consider implementation of a Reduced Benefit Direction. No information is kept as to the numbers of cases where good cause was accepted without any interview of the parent with care by a member of the Agency's staff.

From 5 April 1993 to 31 December 1993, 79,800 cases were cleared without a maintenance assessment. Of these, 32,600 were withdrawn. As, to date, 96 per cent. of parents with care have been in receipt of a prescribed benefit, it can be assumed that this will apply to nearly all the withdrawn applications.

From 5 April 1993 to 31 December 1993, 183,000 maintenance application forms were issued to parents with care on family credit. You also asked how many of these have resulted in a maintenance assessment, and how many of the accounts are in arrears. I am afraid that we do not collect information that breaks down maintenance assessments or account activity according to the benefit status of the parent with care.

At 31 December 1993 the Agency had taken on 275,700 existing income support cases. It is estimated that by April 1994, around 290,000 cases will have been taken on.

At 31 December 1993, a total of 121,600 maintenance assessments had been completed. Of these 41,000 were interim maintenance assessments, where the Agency did not have sufficient information to make a full assessment, and 28,300 were assessments where the absent parent was assessed as having insufficient income to pay any maintenance other than the £2·20 deduction from benefit. It is not possible to provide separate figures for Category A and Category B interm maintenance assessments.

At 31 December 1993, I understand that the Child Support Appeal Tribunal Central Office (CSATCO) had received 577 valid letters of appeal within the 28 days time limit. A total of 81 letters of appeal had been received that were outside the 28 day time limit, and all of these were accepted as valid by the resident chairman of the Child Support Appeals Tribunal.

At 31 December 1993, the Agency had received 535 appeals from CSATCO and 48 resulted in tribunal hearings. Of those heard, 10 resulted in the Child Support Officer's decision being overturned.

You also requested information on child support accounts, arrears and deductions from earnings orders. I regret that the information is not currently available.

I hope that you find this reply helpful.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of replies issued by the Child Support Agency in response to individual inquiries from right hon. and hon. Members are in standardised format; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 9 February 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the use of standardised replies from the Child Support Agency to Members' letters.

The Agency does not issue standardised replies to Members although standard paragraphs may be included, for example, to explain the provisions of legislation or to give some background to the Agency's operations. Where correspondence concerns an individual client, the Agency seeks to address the specific concerns raised by the Member on behalf of the constituent.

I hope that you find this reply useful.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Departments each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Nelson: The table gives the value of committed expenditure, at current prices, for consultancy contracts awarded to Her Majesty's Treasury since August 1991. Information going back beyond August 1991 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Year	Value (excl. VAT) £

1993	1,004,407
[2]1994	446,645

[1] August-December.
[2] To date.

Similar information relating to the Chancellor of the Exchequer's other Departments is not held centrally.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his plans for the rate of insurance premium tax, which is currently charged at 3 per cent.

Sir John Cope: The Government's proposals for the insurance premium tax are included in the Finance Bill currently in Committee. The rate chosen reflects careful consideration of a range of factors, particularly the revenue yield and the impact on the taxpayer.

Utilities (Privatisation)

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table outlining privatisation receipts for (a) BT, (b) British Gas, (c) regional electricity companies and PowerGen and National Power and (d) regional water boards for each year following privatisation of each utility until 1993 and also including projections to 1994-95.

Mr. Dorrell: The table shows the information requested. In addition to proceeds from the sale of shares, privatisation proceeds include the redemption of preference shares, loan stock and debentures.

Subcontractors (Taxation)

Mr. Burns: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends to take forward the proposals for the construction industry tax deduction scheme in the 1991 Inland Revenue consultative document, "Taxation of Subcontractors in the Construction Industry".

Mr. Dorrell: It is the Government's intention, subject to other priorities, to include measures in the next Finance Bill to implement some of the recommendations in the 1991 consultative document "Taxation of Subcontractors in the Construction Industry", together with the recommendations of a later efficiency scrutiny. These changes will come into effect after the introduction of the proposals for self-assessment and the simplification of personal tax in the current Finance Bill. The Inland Revenue will be consulting on how this will be done.

Capital Allowances

Mr. Burns: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the availability of capital allowances for enterprise zone buildings brought into use two years ago.

Mr. Dorrell: Under section 10B of the Capital Allowances Act 1990, capital allowances at the 100 per cent. enterprise zone rate remain available for a period of two years after a building is brought into use, so long as the building was brought into use on or after 16 December 1991.

As announced on 13 January, Official Report, column 249, the Government will be bringing forward legislation during the Committee stage of the Finance Bill to amend a defect in the capital allowances legislation as it affects long leases given in return for a capital sum. The Government are conscious that, until the legislation is published, there will inevitably be some uncertainty for investors about the detailed conditions under which capital allowances will be available. In cases where entitlement to capital allowances under section 10B's two-year rule was shortly to expire at the time of the announcement, this uncertainty may have had the effect of preventing some investors from making a claim under the rule. That is clearly an unfair situation in which to place such investors.

Accordingly, we propose to bring forward a provision in the Committee of the Finance Bill which will give until 31 August 1994 for qualifying expenditure to fall within the section 10B rule. This will apply to cases where, under this section, the two-year period would have expired on or after 13 January 1994 and not later than 31 August 1994.

Maintenance Payments (Taxation)

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the number of taxpayers who will be affected by the restriction of tax relief on the first £1,720 of maintenance payments to 20 per cent. in 1994-95 and 15 per cent. from 1995-96;

(2) what will be the effect on revenues in 1994-95 and in a full year of (a) restricting tax relief on maintenance payments up to £1,720 to 20 per cent. and (b) the withdrawal of relief on payments made to or for the benefit of children when they reach 21 years;

(3) what he estimates to be the effect on revenues in 1995-96 and in a full year of proposals to reduce tax relief on the first £1,720 of maintenance payments from 20 per cent. in 1994-95 to 15 per cent. in 1995-96.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 1 February 1994]: It is thought that some 400,000 people making maintenance payments may be affected, although payers who are liable to tax at the lower rate only will not be affected by the restriction of relief to 20 per cent. in 1994-95. Approximate estimates of the revenue effects of restricting the relief based on a projection of information from the 1991-92 survey of personal incomes are given below.

£ million

	Revenue yield in
	1994-95	A full year
Restriction to 20 per cent.	25	30
	1995-96	A full year
Further restriction to 15 per cent.	15	20

It is not possible to provide a precise estimate of the small yield from the withdrawal of relief on payments made to or for the benefit of children when they reach 21 years.

Contraband

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what quantities and value of contraband (a) tobacco, (b) drugs, (c) alcohol and (d) other was seized by Customs and Excise in the last year for which statistics are available and in each of the five previous years;

(2) what quantity of and value of contraband alcohol was seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the last year for which statistics are available; how it was disposed of, and at what cost; and what are the comparable figures for any previous years for which statistics are available.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 8 February 1994]: The amounts and street level values of the main drug types seized by Customs and Excise for the past six calendar years are as below.

Drug type	Weight (kilogrammes)	Total value (£ millions)
1993
Synthetics	1,096
Cannabis	53,157
Cocaine	748	518
Heroin	561
1992
Synthetics	348
Cannabis	44,556
Cocaine	2,250	545
Heroin	449

Heroin	331
1988
Synthetics	18
Cannabis	44,018
Cocaine	283	185
Heroin	230

For single market excise-related offences the quantities of goods seized, and the amount of duties involved, for 1993 are as follows:

	Duty £
1,355,485 cigarettes and cigars	132,059
10,191 kg tobacco	945,684
753,012 litres alcoholic drinks	590,025

Methods of disposal of alcoholic drinks include pouring down the sewer and the use of land-fill sites. Further details of contraband seizures before 1993 and of methods and costs of disposal could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department and its predecessors each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is available for the period 1987 to 1993, and details are shown in the table. Other information can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Disqualification Unit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cases have been reported to his Department's disqualification unit in each year since 1987; how many of these have been subject to full investigation; and how many have been successfully prosecuted.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Detailed information is not available in this form requested by the hon. Member. The following information is however available:

	Reports of misconduct made to disqualification unit	Cases identified as prima facie meeting evidential criteria	Number of individual directors whom directions given	Number of directors against who disqualification orders were made
1987-88	3,499	n/a	251	130
1988-89	4,209	n/a	419	293
1989-90	3,444	n/a	462	288
1990-91	4,508	n/a	449	251
1991-92	6,171	906	700	326
1992-93	6,710	877	564	446

Notes:

1. The figures quoted in the first two columns are for the number of companies reported on or identified.
2. The number of directions given or disqualification orders made in a particular year do not necessarily relate to reports made or cases identified in that year.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the average length of time taken to investigate a case reported to his Department's disqualification unit in each year since 1987; and what was the median time taken to investigate such reports.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The information requested by the hon. Member for Newcastle Upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) is not maintained by my Department.

Teaching Company Schemes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing the distribution of live teaching company schemes as at 31 December 1993, by region; and which schemes started and terminated in 1992 and 1993.

Mr. McLoughlin: Tables showing the requested information relating to teaching company scheme, TCS, programmes are as follows:

1. TCS Programmes by region as at 31 December 1993

Region	Company sites
	Number	Percentages
East Midlands	35	7·2
London	22	4·5
North East	87	17·8

Government Chemist

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions within the last five years the laboratory of the Government chemist has been asked to advise on export licence applications; and what internal transfers of resources are made to the laboratory in recognition of these services.

Mr. McLoughlin: Between 1989 and 1994 the LGC has provided advice to the relevant parts of DTI on 312 occasions. The LGC has charged the DTI the full economic cost of providing this service.

Expo '92

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the final accounts have now been settled for his Department's costs towards Expo '92 in Seville; what was his Department's total contribution; and whether this figure includes the costs of meeting the costs of Joanna Bickerton Associates.

Mr. Needham: The final accounts for DTI's contribution towards Expo '92 in Seville are nearing completion and should be finalised by the end of March. These accounts will include the costs of settlement with Joanna Bickerton Associates.

Disqualification Unit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cases were reported to his Department's disqualification unit for each year since 1987 which failed to come before the court because they had exceeded the statutory limitation period.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The precise details requested by the hon. Member are not maintained by the disqualification unit. However, expiry, actual or imminent, of the two-year period is the principal reason why cases which otherwise broadly meet the evidential requirements are not pursued. The number of such cases was as follows:

Financial year	Number
1991-92	369
1992-93	332
[1]1993	551

[1] Nine months to 31 December 1993.

Information on prior years is not available.

Timeshare

Mr. Hunter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make representations to the European Commission for the inclusion in the draft directive on timeshare of payment of limited deposits by timeshare purchasers, as requested by the United Kingdom timeshare industry.

Mr. McLoughlin: I am aware of the concerns expressed by the timeshare industry in this matter, but I regard the prohibition on the payment of deposits during the cooling-off period proposed in the draft timeshare directive as important for consumer protection. In any event, political agreement on the directive has been reached.

New Businesses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many new businesses were started in the past year; how many people they employ; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 9 February 1994]: Estimates of numbers of small business start-ups are produced by Barclays and NatWest. Their latest estimates indicate that there were around 400,000 new start-ups in 1993.

Estimates of employment in new firms are not available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 9 February 1994]: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Indonesians have been supported by Her Majesty's Government since 1975 to study in Britain.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since 1975 we have provided some 3,000 awards for Indonesians. Precise figures could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who are the members currently appointed to the Wilton Park International Advisory Council.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Wilton Park International Advisory Council consists of the ambassadors and high commissioners of all OECD embassies and high commissions in London. The countries currently represented are: Austria, Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey and the USA.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Goodlad: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Accounting Officers

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since 1979 a Foreign Secretary has issued a direction to an accounting officer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: Since 1979, there has been a ministerial direction to ODA's accounting officer on one occasion, in 1991 in respect of the Pergau hydro-electric project in Malaysia. No ministerial directions to the FCO's accounting officer have been issued since 1979.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now referred by him to an executive agency.

The Attorney-General: No parliamentary questions have to date been referred by me to the Government Property Lawyers, the only executive agency in the Departments for which I am responsible. The subjects which I would normally expect to refer are the day-to-day operational matters of the agency and the provision of conveyancing and lands advisory services by the agency, subjects for which the chief executive has delegated responsibility as set out in the agency's framework document.

Prosecution Witnesses

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Attorney-General what proportion of prosecution witnesses in July 1993 had to wait more than two hours before being called to give evidence.

The Attorney-General: No figures are available for July 1993. A census of six CPS areas during the last two weeks of March 1993 showed that 42 per cent. of witnesses waited less than two hours and 58 per cent. had to wait more than two hours.

A further pilot study in four Crown court centres between 1 September 1993 and 30 November 1993 showed that 48·5 per cent. of witnesses waited less than two hours and 51·5 per cent. more than two hours. A nation-wide monitoring survey will commence on 1 April 1994.

The samples to date have been analysed to identify the principal reasons for extended waiting time for witnesses. The objective is to use such information in co-operation with other agencies to bring about reduced waiting times in future.

Hizb ut Tahrir

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what action is being considered by the prosecution authorities over racist material issued by the Hizb ut Tahrir organisation; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service does not maintain a central record of cases referred to it. Inquiries have been made of CPS headquarters staff but no cases concerning the Hizb ut Tahrir organisation are presently being considered at headquarters. If the hon. Member will identify to me when and where any such material has been referred to the CPS I will make further inquiries.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who are the members currently appointed to the disability living allowance advisory board.

Mr. Scott: The current membership of the disability living allowance advisory board is as follows:—

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who are the members currently appointed to each of the war pensions committees.

Mr. Hague: In view of the considerable length of this reply, I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security who are the members currently appointed to the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions.

Mr. Hague: The members currently appointed to the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions, who all act in a voluntary capacity, are as follows:

Membership of the Central Advisory Committee

Mr. M. B. Day, MBE
Councillor T. S. Deeming, MBE
Mr. P. H. Dixon, OBE, MA

Brigadier H. L. B. Salmon, OBE
Major J. Paxman

Child Support

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the regulations under the Child Support Act 1991 affecting the definition of a second family and on his proposals for phasing in of payments where there is another child in a second marriage.

Mr. Burt: The term "second family" is not used in the Child Support Act or associated regulations. The previous phasing in provisions have been extended to include absent parents whose new child support liability is over £60 a week. An absent parent can qualify for phasing if he is part of a family containing children, including step-children, or has care of a child for at least two nights a week, had an existing court order or written agreement for maintenance at 4 April 1993, and has his payments increased by more than £20 a week when maintenance is assessed under the Act.

Under the original phasing arrangements, where the new assessment does not exceed £60 weekly, the increase is limited to £20 for the first 12 months. Under the new arrangements, where the assessment is over £60, the increase is phased in over an 18-month period, in six monthly steps of £20, or 25 per cent. of the difference between the old and new amounts if this is higher.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what definition he has accepted as a second family in the operation of the Child Support Act 1991.

Mr. Burt: The Child Support Act does not use the term "second family". It does, however, contain provisions which take account of the presence of a new partner or step-children in the household or new children of the absent parent.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the operation of the Child Support Agency where existing court arrangements are satisfactory to both parties concerned.

Mr. Burt: Parents are free to come to, or continue with, their own arrangements for child maintenance, where the parent with care is not receiving income support, family credit or disability working allowance.

However, when one of these benefits is in payment then the taxpayer also has an interest, and it is right that the Child Support Agency should become involved to ensure that a realistic level of maintenance is paid.

Mr. Renton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to propose further changes in child support maintenance in respect of partners who have remarried and are now bringing up a second family; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The changes to the child support scheme which were introduced from 7 February, particularly the extension to the provision for phasing in payments of maintenance and the significant increases in the protected income margins, will help many absent parents with second families. The Government intend to monitor the effects of these changes carefully, and will continue to keep the scheme under scrutiny.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the timing of changes announced to the operation of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The changes were introduced from 7 February. The formula changes will apply from that date; the new phasing provisions are being implemented over three months, with the phasing period running from the date of reassessment.

Labour Statistics

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the United Kingdom, under 21 years of age, are currently unemployed but not in receipt of unemployment benefit.

Mr. Burt: From the latest available information in the 1990 and 1991 family expenditure surveys, the number was 340,000.

Notes:

1. In the family expenditure survey people referred to as the economically active unemployed are those who are out of work, available for work, intending to work, and have either sought work within the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained.
2. This estimate will include some people who have made a claim for unemployment benefit but have not yet received it.
3. The family expenditure survey is based on a sample of households and therefore subject to sampling error.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many men in the United Kingdom are currently unemployed and economically active, but are not receiving unemployment benefit, or any other social security benefit;

(2) how many women in the United Kingdom are currently unemployed and economically active but are not receiving unemployment benefit or any other social security benefit.

Mr. Burt: From the latest available information in the 1990 and 1991 family expenditure surveys, it is estimated there were 260,000 men and 130,000 women.

Notes:

1. In the family expenditure survey people referred to as the economically active unemployed are those who are out of work, available for work, intending to work, and have either sought work within the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained.
2. This estimate will include some people who have made a claim for state benefits but have not yet received benefit.
3. The family expenditure survey is based on a sample of households and therefore subject to sampling error.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the United Kingdom are unemployed and receiving sickness benefit to the latest available date.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested.

In the period 1 April 1991 to 4 April 1992—the latest period for which information is available—802,000 spells of sickness benefit commenced. In 405,000 of the spells the person stated they had not been in employment prior to claiming.

Notes:

1. Figures based on a 1 per cent. sample of claims in Great Britain rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Sickness benefit will not have been paid in all spells.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children there were in families receiving supplementary benefit in (a) England and (b) the north-west region of England in 1979; and how many children there were in families receiving supplementary benefit/income support in (i) England and (ii) the north-west region of England at the latest available date.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the tables:

Number of children in families receiving supplementary benefit in 1979

Region	Number of children
North West England	Not available
England	757,000

Number of children in families receiving income support in 1993

Region	Number of children
North West England	426,000
England	2,550,000

Notes:

1. Sources: Supplementary Benefit Statistics Annual Inquiry, November 1979.
   Income Support Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, February 1993.
2. The figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Children are defined as being under 16 years of age.
4. The North West Region is the North West Social Security Administrative Region as used by the Department prior to 1988. Information for this region is not available for 1979.
5. Income support replaced supplementary benefit in April 1988.

Industrial Injuries Advisory Council

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council to complete its inquiry into occupational rhinitis.

Mr. Scott: A report from the council is expected within the next few months.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when each current member was appointed to the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council; what was their date of appointment and expected duration of service; and what are the companies, organisations or bodies they represent and their particular professional expertise or specialisation.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table.

Member	Date first appointed	Profession
Professor J. M. Harrington, CBE, chairman	14 August 1981	Professor of occupational health
Mr. P. E. Arscott, OBE	14 March 1991	Health and safety consultant
Dr. J. Asherson	9 January 1990	Head of health and safety, CBI
Miss J. C. Brown	1 October 1986	Researcher in social policy
Mrs. J. Carter	1 March 1993	Member of TUC General Council
Professor M. J. Cinnamond	1 January 1987	Professor of otorhinolaryngology
Dr. D. N. M. Coggon	9 December 1987	Reader in occupational and environmental medicine
Professor A. D. Dayan	17 May 1990	Professor of toxicology
Dr. C. P. Juniper	5 May 1986	Senior medical adviser in industry
Mr. T. Mawer	1 September 1992	Lawyer
Professor A. J. Newman Taylor, OBE	1 December 1983	Consultant physician
Mr. R. Pickering	12 February 1991	National trade union president
Dr. L. Rushton	31 January 1994	Senior lecturer in medical statistics
Dr. C. Taylor	10 May 1993	Chief medical officer in industry
Mr. O. D. Tudor	12 February 1991	Assistant secretary, TUC
Mrs. M. Twomey	1 May 1992	Member of TUC

Note:

Chairman and members are normally appointed for a period of three years and can be reappointed for further three-year terms. Members are appointed for the expertise they bring to the council's deliberations, rather than to represent particular organisations, although the CBI and TUC each nominate four members.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he last met the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Scott: The last formal meeting took place on 21 November 1991 when I was invited by the council to attend one of its regular meetings. Informal meetings with the chairman are held about once a year to discuss matters of current interest. The last meeting took place on 23 December 1992.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department last discussed occupational rhinitis with the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council.

Mr. Scott: There have been no formal discussions about occupational rhinitis between the Department and the council. Members of the Department attend council meetings on a regular basis as observers and provide information on request. The council last discussed occupational rhinitis at its meeting on 18 November 1993.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Renton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average time that it takes the Child Support Agency to answer letters from hon. Members; and if he will issue instructions that this time should be at least halved.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Tim Renton, dated 10 February 1994:

I have been asked to reply to your Question to the Secretary of State about the time it takes the Agency to respond to letters from honourable Members.

All letters from Members of Parliament addressed to me are acknowledged and I aim to respond within an average of 20 working days. Press interest has stimulated a great deal of correspondence from constituents and although that target is not being met at the moment, the necessary steps are being taken to ensure that correspondence from Members will be answered as promptly as possible.

I hope you will find this reply helpful.

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Warwick and Leamington may expect a reply from the Child Support Agency to his detailed written representations on behalf of Mrs. Fiona Dennehy of Leamington Spa, made on 25 September 1993, 26 October 1993, 24 November 1993 and 5 January 1994.

Mr. Burt: I understand that Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive of the Child Support Agency replied to my hon. Friend about this case on 8 February 1994.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which benefit or benefits claimants of incapacity benefit will receive while their claims after 197 days are being assessed and in the 1994-95 financial year, what level of funding this will represent (a) for each individual per week and (b) in the full financial year per individual; what is the total spend nationally on such benefits in the financial year 1994-95; and what is his planned spend on incapacity benefit for the financial years 1995-96, 1996-97 and 1997-98.

Mr. Scott: After 28 weeks of incapacity, incapacity benefit recipients will receive the higher rate short-term benefit. They will receive this rate of benefit while they are being assessed under the new objective medical incapacity test. As the new benefit will not be implemented until April 1995, there are no financial implications for the financial year 1994-95. The estimated total cost of incapacity benefit for the years 1995-96 and 1996-97 is £8,100 million and £7,550 million respectively. A figure for 1997-98 is not yet available.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list, by county area, those magistrates courts which have been closed since April 1992 and those magistrates courts which he expects to be closed by April 1995.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The provision of magistrates' courthouse accommodation is a matter for the courts' committee for the area concerned in conjunction with the local paying authority; there is no requirement of notification to the Lord Chancellor. The Department has no central record of the number of magistrates' courthouses that have been closed or are scheduled to be closed. A local authority that is aggrieved by a decision of a magistrates court committee to close a courthouse has the right of appeal to the Lord Chancellor. In 1993 the Lord Chancellor dealt with six appeals. There are no appeals currently outstanding.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received from representatives of outer London magistrates courts concerning the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill [Lords].

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor has received 118 responses from representatives of the outer London magistrates courts service to the consultation documents issued by his Department. In addition to this he has received in the region of 80 letters from hon. Members for constituencies in the outer London area concerning the Police and Magistrates' Courts Bill. There have been approximately 300 letters from members of the magistrates courts service overall and other interested bodies; it is not possible, however, to give an accurate figure of those from representatives of the outer London service since this information is not recorded. The Lord Chancellor and I have also met representatives of the outer London action group, and the Lord Chancellor will continue to correspond with them.

Courts (Opinion Surveys)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what surveys to obtain the views of those using the courts system were carried out between 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993; and what were the results of these surveys.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Between 1 July 1992 and 30 June 1993, local surveys of court users were conducted by 15 courts and a national survey of court users was conducted by the National Consumer Council. Generally, the surveys showed that the improved standard of customer service in the courts was well received, although areas for improvement were also highlighted.

Crown Courts

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many Crown court centres (a) had and (b) had not established an information point by July 1993.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Eighty eight Crown court centres had established information points and four had not.

Juveniles (Non-attendance at Court)

Mr. Marland: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, on how many occasions cases have had to be postponed because juveniles in the care of a local authority have failed to attend in the latest convenient period for which figures are available; and what is the average cost of each such case.

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information is not available and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Juries

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what proportion of jurors sat on trials on days when they attended a Crown court in 1993.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Of the total number of days attended by jurors in the Crown court during 1993, days or part-days spent sitting on trials accounted for just over 77 per cent.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when new versions of (a) the summons letter to jurors and (b) the explanatory leaflet for jurors were last issued.

Mr. John M. Taylor: New versions of the jury summons and the explanatory leaflet for jurors were issued in April 1993. These were brought into immediate use except in London where, for technical reasons, introduction was deferred until November 1993.

Witness Summonses

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures have been taken since July 1992 to make the order to witnesses to attend court clearer and less formal.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Since last May, recipients of witness orders have also been given an explanatory letter from the clerk to the justices which sets out in clear, easily understood terms, what the witness can expect to happen in the Crown court. We will be putting forward proposals to remove the requirement to serve witness orders, when the next legislative opportunity arises. Witnesses will continue to receive the explanatory letter as this contains all the relevant information about their attendance at court.

Visa Applications's

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the current waiting time for appeals to be heard against refusal of settlement visa applications from spouses and fiances or fiancees in India.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The immigration appellate authorities do not differentiate between countries of origin in allocating hearing dates. The current average time between the IAA receiving a certificate of readiness from a party to the date of a long, three-hour, hearing in London and at the provincial centres are as follows:

	Weeks
Thanet House	14
Hatton Cross	12
Birmingham	10
Manchester	14
Leeds	8
Glasgow	11

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the current waiting time for appeals to be heard against refusal of settlement visa applications from spouses and fiances or fiancees in Pakistan.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The immigration appellate authorities do not differentiate between countries of origin in allocating hearing dates. The current average time between the IAA receiving a certificate of readiness from a party to the date of a long, three-hour, hearing in London and at the provincial centres are as follows:

	Weeks
Thanet House	14
Hatton Cross	12
Birmingham	10
Manchester	14
Leeds	8
Glasgow	11

Legal Aid

Mr. Steen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the hon. Member for South Hams may expect an answer to his letter of 24 January concerning the matter of Miss Hale's court case proceedings with the central London county court and the legal aid system.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I aim to reply to hon. Members' letters within 20 working days of receipt, although of course I always attempt to deal with urgent matters well within that time. I expect to reply to the substantive issues raised in the letter referred to within the normal target period, but there are a number of issues which may require further investigation.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to each of the advisory committees on legal education and conduct.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The current membership of the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee on legal education and conduct is set out below. The membership of sub-committees of the main committee is an internal matter for the main committee, which is independent of the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Membership of the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee on legal education and conduct—at 3 February 1994

Mrs. Liliana Archibald
Professor Richard Card
His Honour Judge John Gower QC
Eric Hammond OBE
Brian Harvey
John Hosking CBE
Patrick Lefevre
Luke March
The Reverend Dr. Colin Morris
Dr. Claire Palley
Ms Usha Prashar
Nicholas Purnell QC
Peter Scott QC
Graham Smith CBE
David Ward
David Wilkins
The Committee's current chairman is Lord Justice Steyn.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to each of the advisory committees on general commissioners of income tax.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. At 1 January 1994 there were 78 advisory committees with a total of 483 members. If the hon. Member wishes me to give the names of members of particular advisory committees I shall be pleased to do so.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to each of the advisory committees on general commissioners of income tax for Northern Ireland.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The names of the members currently appointed to the two advisory committees on general commissioners of income tax for Northern Ireland are as follows:

Eastern advisory committee

Chairman:
Colonel J. E. Wilson

Members:
W. J. Hall, Esq
M. W. S. MacLaran, Esq
Miss C. MacMahon
Mrs. J. Stewart
Sir Myles Humphries
J. J. Leslie, Esq, DL

Western advisory committee

Chairman:
J. T. Eaton, Esq

Members:
G. Broderick, Esq
D. F. Desmond, Esq
J. Grew, Esq
Mrs. M. I. G. Welsh
R. W. Wilson, Esq
C. A. J. Anderson, Esq
W. D. Smyth, Esq

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to each of the advisory committees on justices of the peace in England.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The Lord Chancellor is responsible for the appointment of members of advisory committees in England and Wales with the exception of the Duchy of Lancaster where it is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy. Within the Lord Chancellor's area of responsibility there are 94 advisory committees with a total membership of 940. There is no secrecy about the membership of advisory committees but to provide the names of every member could only be achieved at disproportionate cost. If the hon. Member wishes to know the names of the members of a particular advisory committee, the Minister responsible will be pleased to oblige.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Palaces

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, what is the total rent received from the accommodation of the occupied royal palaces listed in his answer; what is the range of rentals; and how many of the rented units have (a) four bedrooms and (b) five bedrooms.

Mr. Sproat: Of the 54 properties listed rent is paid by those occupying 11. The rent amounts in aggregate to £22,704 per annum. The rent is set at 6 per cent. of the occupant's after-tax salary, which is equivalent to a deduction of 8·5 per cent. of pre-tax salary. Of the 11 apartments in respect of which rent is paid, five have four bedrooms, one has five bedrooms and one has six bedrooms. A further £46,000 per annum is paid in respect of other residential properties not included in the 54 referred to above, making a total rent deduction of £69,000 per annum. In addition to this the benefit of housing taken into account in determining wage and salary levels in the household's new grading structure amounts to approximately £480,000 per annum.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what records are kept of the official use of the official reception rooms at the accommodation for members of the royal family in the occupied royal palaces;

(2) by what criteria residents are selected for the grace and favour accommodation at the occupied royal palaces.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 7 February 1994]: My Department has overall responsibility for the maintenance of the properties within the occupied royal palaces estate. How these properties should best be used, either by members of the royal family or by employees and pensioners, in fulfilling the requirements and functions of the head of state is however a matter for Her Majesty the Queen.

Grace and favour accommodation is provided to members of the royal family in accordance with long-established practice. It is in keeping with the style and dignity of the monarchy and national prestige that the more immediate members of the royal family should be appropriately housed and a London residence is needed to entertain and undertake official duties on behalf of the Queen. How members of the royal family use the apartments allocated to them in fulfilling their duties in support of the Queen as head of state, including the use of official receptions rooms, are also matters for Her Majesty the Queen.

The criteria adopted when allocating residential accommodation to employees and pensioners are summarised below.

As regards employees, accommodation is provided to facilitate the better performance of the person's duties and recruitment and retention, in line with long-established practice. Apartments are allocated to employees by broad category of post and by location—for example, mews stable staff in London are housed in the flats above the London mews stables—or according to the post which they hold—for example, there are apartments in St. James's palace which have been occupied by successive masters of the household, marshals of the diplomatic corps and keepers of the privy purse—or according to need and availability, with available accommodation being allocated to staff whom the household most requires to be housed. There are approximately 500 official employees in the royal households and accommodation is not therefore available to all staff.

Official staff may be provided with accommodation on retirement if they have been housed as employees for 20 years or more and if finding their own accommodation after such a long period would cause difficulties and be a poor reward for long and loyal service. It is accordingly generally only the more junior employees who are provided with pensioner accommodation.

There are in addition to the 23 pensioners who were previously official employees and who are provided with accommodation, four grace and favour pensioners, all of whom were provided with accommodation some time ago. There are unlikely to be grace and favour pensioners in the future. Grace and favour pension accommodation is provided at the Queen's discretion. The military knights are retired Army officers who have some ceremonial duties to perform at Windsor castle and are required to live there. Nominations are submitted by the Defence Secretary for approval by the Queen.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 3 February, Official Report, columns 846-47, to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West on the costs of refurbishment at occupied royal palaces, what information is available on refurbishment costs in 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 8 February 1994]: In 1990-91 information on recorded expenditure is not readily available. However, the following sums were included in budgets:

	£ 000s
Kensington palace
Apartment 1A (HRH The Princess Margaret)	25
Apartment 1 (TRH The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester)	8
Apartment 10 (TRH The Prince and Princess Michael of Kent)	11
St. James palace
Clarence House
Apartment in the occupation of Her Majesty
Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother	35
TOTAL	79
In 1989-90, the expenditure was:
Kensington palace
Apartment 1A	19
Apartment 1	13
Apartment 10	23
TOTAL	55
St. James's palace
No recorded expenditure

National Lottery

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the percentage restriction on the commission of the national lottery pools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: None. The percentages will be proposed by the applicants within the competitive tendering process organised by the director general.

Unicorn Heritage plc

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 621, on remission of debts on grants, (1) what alternatives were considered before writing off the loss of Unicorn Heritage plc on what grounds none of them were considered feasible; and what actions were taken to effect recovery of the sum loaned;

(2) what appraisal was made of Unicorn Heritage plc before writing off its losses and the money loaned to it.

Mr. Sproat: The alternative to writing off the debt owed by Unicorn Heritage plc would have been to ask the English tourist board to continue to seek recovery of the debt. This alternative was not considered feasible because it was clear there was no further practical action that the board would take, since the company's liquidators had stated categorically that there were no funds available to repay unsecured creditors.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have (a) been abolished or (b) created since the establishment of his Department.

Mr. Sproat: Since the establishment of my Department, none of the non-departmental public bodies which it sponsors have been abolished and none have been created.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are his powers of direction in respect of chairmen of non-departmental public bodies funded by his Department.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 7 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State does not have powers of direction in respect of the chairman of non-departmental public bodies funded by my Department. It is the boards of such bodies which are subject to certain provisions as regards direction in legislation and the financial memoranda setting out the relationship between the Department and each body.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's office; and which appointments have been so notified and consulted upon since the establishment of his Department;

(2) which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Sproat: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Grants (Remission of Debts)

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 621, on remission of debts on grants, what is the delegated limit of a grant that can be written off by a sponsored body.

Mr. Sproat: Different conditions and levels of delegation have been agreed over time for each body sponsored by my Department. The levels are set in the bodies' financial memoranda and may be changed when the financial memoranda are reviewed or when new central guidance is issued. If the hon. Member would care to write to me separately saying which particular body or bodies he is interested in, I will provide him with the appropriate information.

Taiwanese Tourists

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many tourists are reported to have arrived in this country from Taiwan in each of the last three years.

Mr. Sproat: According to the international passenger survey, the number of Taiwanese residents visiting the United Kingdom was 32,000 in 1990, 34,000 in 1991 and 40,000 in 1992, the latest available year. All these estimates are subject to sampling error.

Paper Shredders

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many paper shredding machines there are (a) in his private office and (b) in his Department.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 7 February 1994]: My Department has two paper shredding machines, one of which is in the Secretary of State's private office.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 10 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 10 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has had from professors of law in Scotland about the issue of precedent, and the possibility of holding a trial of the alleged Libyan suspects for the bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received no such representations.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy at his forthcoming meeting with his Irish counterpart to discuss the Irish Government's view of THORP.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) of 2 February, Official Report, column 702, if he will raise with the Presidents of the European Commission and European Council of Ministers the possibility of making an exception to the convention of confidentiality covering correspondence between the Commission and member states in the case of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield.

The Prime Minister: No.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will seek to establish from Lord Justice Scott whether he objects to the release by Government Departments of memoranda and other documents that they have submitted for consideration by his inquiry.

The Prime Minister: No. Lord Justice Scott has discretion, subject to consultation on sensitive and classified material, to publish evidence submitted to his inquiry in his final report. The Government do not intend to anticipate his decisions.

Cabinet Committees

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish an updated list of the ministerial committees of the Cabinet.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 February 1994]: A reply will be sent shortly.

Moscow (Visit)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will raise the issue of the slaughter of seal pups in Russia with Boris Yeltsin during his visit to Moscow.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 February 1994]: I do not expect to do so. However the Russian authorities are aware of the public concern in the United Kingdom, and our embassy will continue to raise this subject with the Russians whenever the opportunity arises.

EMPLOYMENT

Manufacturing Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the weekly United Kingdom earnings figures for manufacturing shown in the November issue of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development main economic indicators adjusted to the same base date as the corresponding figures in table 18.11 of the September issue of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics"; what is the figure in the latter table; and what factors lay behind the discrepancy.

Miss Widdecombe: The weekly manufacturing earnings figures for Great Britain, compiled by the OECD from published figures and shown in the November issue of OECD main economic indicators are incorrect. The figures in the latest, January 1994 edition, accurately reflect the manufacturing earnings figures published in the monthly digest of statistics converted to a base date of 1985.

The earnings indices shown in table 18.11 of the monthly digest of statistics are the results of the monthly wages and salaries survey by the Employment Department.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who are the members currently appointed to the Women's National Commission.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As Government co-chairman, Baroness Denton of Wakefield, Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, is the only appointed member of the Women's National Commission, WNC. The 50-member organisations of the WNC chooses its own representatives to sit on the commission.

Labour Statistics

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in the United Kingdom are currently unemployed, economically active, but not in receipt of unemployment benefit; and what were the equivalent figures for May 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: For the current data, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlisle) on 26 January 1994, Official Report, column 285-86. The equivalent information for 1979 is not available.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people would have been registered as unemployed in 1978 if the figures had been treated on the same basis as 1994.

Miss Widdecombe: Claimant unemployment figures based on the current coverage of the count are available from the Department's consistent seasonally adjusted series. This gives the average level of claimant unemployment in the United Kingdom in 1978 as 1,144,000.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met representatives of organisations representing housing co-operatives to discuss funding and strategy; what is his policy regarding the development of housing co-operatives; what criteria he applies when determining financial assistance to housing co-operatives; what plans he has to encourage the development of housing co-operatives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: There is no housing co-operative movement in Northern Ireland. As there is no demand for housing co-operatives, there are no plans at present to encourage their development.

General National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what plans he has to introduce general national vocational qualifications in Northern Ireland's schools and colleges; what representations he has received concerning GNVQs in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what study his Department has made of the provision of general national vocational qualifications in Northern Ireland's schools and colleges; what reports his Department has commissioned into their provision; if he will make the results of the reports available to both the House and the general public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: General national vocational qualifications, GNVQs, were introduced into a small number of schools and further education colleges in Northern Ireland in September 1992. The Northern Ireland Department of Education inspectorate carried out a survey of this provision during the 1992-93 academic year, which concluded that a satisfactory start had been made. Indeed, first results indicate that the proportion of Northern Ireland students who achieved a full GNVQ at intermediate level at the end of 1992-93 was significantly higher than the national average. While I have no plans to publish that survey I intend to publish a report on the present, much larger, phase of GNVQs at the end of current academic year.

Private Patient Facilities

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much income by region has been generated by private patient facilities in national health service hospitals in each year since 1987-88.

Mr. Amcram: The information requested is as follows:

Year	£
1987-88	1,551,399
1988-89	1,941,697
1989-90	1,954,145
1990-91	2,049,903
1991-92	2,429,774
1992-93	3,179,440

NHS Redundancies

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of redundancies among national health service hospital staff (a) by grade and (b) by reason for each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Ancram: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The latest available information is for external consultancy contracts awarded in the 1992-93 financial year, which amounted to the value of £16,399,560. This, at constant 1994 prices, would be £16,932,545.

SCOTLAND

Minor Surgery

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will increase the amount of minor surgical procedures which can be undertaken by each general practitioner in each quarter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 26 May 1993, Official Report, columns 498-99.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) date, (b) country of destination, (c) purpose and (d) cost of each official visit abroad made by (i) the Lord Advocate and (ii) the Solicitor-General for Scotland since their appointments; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The details of the overseas visits by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate and the Solicitor-General for Scotland are as follows:

Date	Country	Purpose
Lord Advocate
16–17 May 1992	France	Franco-British Legal Conference
19–22 May 1992	Belgium	Meeting of Presidents and Senior Prosecutors of the Supreme Courts of the Member States of the European Communities
7–8 October 1992	United States of America	Meeting with Assistant Attorney General Mueller regarding Lockerbie investigation
14 November 1992	France	Speech to Journées sur les Justices D'Europe
26–27 March 1993	Eire	Address on Subsidiarity to Bar European Group Conference
13–15 September 1993	United States of America	Meetings regarding Lockerbie with new Assistant Attorney General
9 October 1993	Austria	Council of Europe Summit Meeting
15–19 November 1993	Mauritius	Conference of Commonwealth Law Ministers
Solicitor-General
9–10 June 1992	Cyprus	18th European Ministers of Justice Conference
3–7 August 1992	Canada	Reform of Criminal Evidence Conference
8 December 1992	France	Representing Her Majesty's Government in case of McMichael v. United Kingdom
3–8 May 1993	Cyprus	10th Commonwealth Law Conference
22 June 1993	Switzerland	Informal meeting of European Ministers of Justice

The cost of such travel is not recorded in a form which allows the amounts for each visit to be identified, and not all costs are necessarily borne by the Crown Office. Nevertheless, the total cost of Ministers' overseas visits is estimated to be in the order of £10,000.

Forestry Commission (Privatisation)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will seek the advice of the new advisory panel on sustainable development on the issue of the privatisation of the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro: The forestry review group has been asked to review the options for the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands in which privatisation is only one of the options being considered by the group. Forestry Ministers will consider what advice, further to that to be offered shortly by the review group, we should seek in coming to decisions. A full process of consultation is planned.

Cervical Smears

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the average time that patients currently wait for the results of cervical smear tests in each health board area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe), Official Report, 21 January column 759, 3 February, column 929 and 4 February, column 962.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen or lost from his Department in the last five years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Lang: A variety of minor items are periodically reported missing. The following more substantial items have been formally recorded since 1988 as losses to the Scottish Office, including those attributable to theft.

Year and Item	Approximate value £
1988
Cash	400
1989
Motor Car	2,000
Furniture/Machinery	3,800
1990
Furniture	1,595
1991
Video Equipment	749
1992
Video Equipment	359
Motor Car	2,650
Computer Equipment	3,500

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to implement the changes to the procedures of the Scottish Grand Committee set out in the White Paper, "Scotland in the Union: A Partnership for Good".

Mr. Lang: I am today placing in the Library of the House proposed amendments to standing orders and an explanatory note. The amendments will implement our commitment in the White Paper to expand the role of the Scottish Grand Committee. They reflect discussions I have had with the Opposition parties. The amendments provide for the Grand Committee:

to consider the principle of Bills relating exclusively to Scotland;
to hold debates on subordinate legislation;
to hold up to 12 general debates a year, with Opposition parties able to choose subjects for some of them;
to put questions to Ministers, both from the House of Commons and the House of Lords; to receive oral statements from Ministers; and to hold adjournment debates.

The amendments will be tabled in due course.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to each of the health boards in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow, (Dr. Godman), Official Report, column 52.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the members currently appointed to each of the national health services trusts in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman), Official Report, column 53.

HEALTH

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practices have received the preparatory management allowance for general practice fundholding in two or more years running; and in which family health service authority and regional health authority they are located.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is available from regional health authorities, which manage the general practitioner fundholding scheme.

Patient Transport Service

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she has received a copy of the arbitration decision in respect of the patient transport service contract for North Staffordshire;

(2) who were the arbiters in respect of the appeal by the Staffordshire ambulance trust against the letting of the patient transport services contract in North Staffordshire by the North Staffordshire hospital trust in respect of services for the North Staffordshire trust and North Staffordshire health authority combined health care;

(3) if she will place in the Library a copy of the arbitration procedure and decision in respect of patient transport services contract for North Staffordshire.

Mr. Sackville: The issue was the subject of conciliation, not arbitration. The conciliators were the chief executive of West Midlands health and a representative of the National Health Service Management Executive. Copies of the letters sent to all parties following conciliation, along with guidance on the conciliation process used, EL(91)11 and EL(93)10, will be placed in the Library.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation the North Staffordshire district health authority undertook with local authorities in respect of the comprehensiveness of their patient transport services specification in so far as it related to combined health care services in accordance with the commitments given in "Forward in Health: Health Strategy and the Authority's Business Plan in 1993-94 and 1994-95."

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for North Staffordshire health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Mr. M. J. Proctor, for details.

NHS Management Costs

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the annual cost of national health service management in the parliamentary constituency of Dewsbury (a) in 1987-88 and (b) in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: The pay costs for national health service managers within Dewsbury health authority, amounted to £97,529 in 1987-88 and £1,125,119 in 1992-93. The figures need to be treated with great caution. Managerial staff consists of general and senior managers who did not exist as a separate staff group prior to 1986.

The number of managers in the NHS generally has been deliberately increased since the mid-1980s—not just since the reforms—as the service was previously under managed. Much of the increase arises from the re-classification of existing professional and administrative staff. Salaries and wage costs incurred by family health services authorities are excluded, as corresponding costs are not identified on the same basis.

NHS Private Facilities

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been treated in national health service hospitals private facilities in each year since 1987-88.

Mr. Sackville: The available information is shown in the table. Data from the hospital episode statistics for earlier years are incomplete and do not provide sufficient coverage to make reliable estimates.

England: Private Patients—1989-92

Year	Number
1989-90	83,478
1990-91	81,366

Chatham Dockyard

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to conduct a joint survey with the Ministry of Defence and the Medway community health doctor to monitor the health of the former work force of the nuclear division of Chatham dockyard.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has no immediate plans to undertake such a survey.

Birth Defects

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made of the proportion and number by which folic acid intake by mothers-to-be would reduce spinal and related developmental problems in babies;

(2) what action is being taken with the Association for Spina Bifida and Hydrocephalus to make sure that mothers-to-be are aware of the importance of folic acid;

(3) for how long before conception and for how long after mothers-to-be are recommended to consider folic acid intake; and what proportion of mothers-to-be know of the need to consume folic acid;

(4) if she will promote in medical and general media issues of pre-conception and pre-birth maternal health as news and current affairs issues;

(5) what assessment has been made by her Department as to whether folic acid reduces spinal and related development problems in babies.

Mr. Sackville: The report of the Medical Research Council study in July 1991 showed that women who had had a previous baby affected by neural tube defect, such as spina bifida, who increased their intake of folic acid prior to and during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy significantly reduced the risk of having a further affected baby by 72 per cent. The Government set up an expert advisory group at once and its report "Folic Acid and the Prevention of Neural Tube Defects" confirmed this advice. In addition all women who were planning a pregnancy were also advised to take folic acid but in a lower dose. A copy of this report is available in the Library.

This advice was disseminated very widely to the health services. The Health Education Authority updated its publications to include the new guidance. The Department of Health has also publicised these findings in the press and media and this will continue. Posters and leaflets which complement those issued by the Association of Spina Bifida and Hydrocephalus have been distributed widely within the national health service and to professional and voluntary bodies and continue to be available free of charge. The Government are also promoting advice to eat a healthy diet which includes more fresh fruit and vegetables. This will also increase folic acid intakes.

Road Accidents

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is responsible for liaison with the Department of Transport in respect of the implications of road traffic accidents on health policy; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: A task force, which comprises representatives of 11 Government Departments, including the Departments of Health and of Transport, has been established to advise on the achievement of the targets for reductions in accidents set in the "Health of the Nation" White Paper. It has set two main objectives: the identification of outstanding research needs for the prevention of accidents and the improvement of the range and compatibility of information collected on the cause, severity and consequences of accidental injuries. A progress report will be issued later this year.

Cancer Screening

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to instigate a cancer screening programme for men over 50 years of age, for the detection of bowel of prostate gland cancer.

Mr. Sackville: The key aim of any screening programme must be to secure a demonstrable improvement in health by increasing length of life and enhancing quality of life. For neither of these cancers have effective screening methods yet been found, though with regard to bowel cancer especially, substantial research is underway into possible screeing methods and the identification of people at higher risk. Prostate cancer screening is a research priority for the Department of Health.

Elderly People

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how may and what proportion of the total population was aged (a) over 60 and (b) over 65 years in 1978 and the most recent year for which statistics are available.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Estimated resident population of England and Wales

(thousands)

	Mid-1978	Mid-1992
Total population	49,443	51,277
Population aged 60 and over—	9,865	10,695
Percentage of total population	(20·0)	(20·9)
Population aged 65 and over—	7,316	8,162
Percentage of total population	(14·8)	(15·9)

EC Services Directive

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with effect from what date she has applied the EC services directive to (a) the notification to existing contractors that the contract they currently hold is being let, (b) the timetable for the preparation of bids, (c) the timetable for the evaluation of bids, (d) the notification of the announcement of the successful bid and (e) the time-lapse between the start of the process and the announcement of the successful bidder.

Mr. Sackville: The European Community services directive has applied to all services market tested, if listed in the directive, since 1 July 1993.

Psychiatric Facilities

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the total capital receipts from sale of psychiatric facilities in each year since 1979.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is not separately identifiable in the information collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of regional health authorities for details.

Fertility Treatment

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients each English health authority has treated for subfertility for the last five years for which statistics are available.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is not available centrally. It is for district health authorities in consultation with the providers of health services to determine the level of provision of subfertility services locally. The hon. Member should write to the chairman of the relevant health authority requesting this information.

NHS Supplies Authority

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Colchester, South and Maldon (Mr. Whittingdale) of 18 January, Official Report, column 528, if she will publish the independent, specialist consultancy advice on the future of the NHS Supplies Authority.

Mr. Sackville: We have no plans to do so.

Paediatric Nurses

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines she has on the minimum number of trained nurses on paediatric wards per patient.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 3 February, Official Report, column 851.

AIDS

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which local authorities receive grants from central Government to offset work they do on AIDS.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 4 February, Official Report, columns 979-80.

Sunderland City Hospitals Trust

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the names and salaries of the members of the Sunderland City hospitals trust.

Dr. Mawhinney: The chairman of City Hospitals Sunderland national health service trust is Mr. D. Graham and the non-executive directors are Mrs. R. Blacklock, Mr. C. Storey, Mrs. M. Mason, Mr. E. Timmins and Mr. J. Sadlik. The chairman's remuneration is £19,285 per year: all non-executive directors receive £5,000 per year. The appointment and salaries of executive directors are matters for the trust itself.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has given to local authorities regarding access to the contents of registration and inspection officers' reports on residential care homes by local authority staff considering the placement of clients in the homes concerned.

Mr. Bowis: Local authority staff considering the placement of clients in residential care homes are covered by the Department's general guidance to local authorities that—subject to legal advice—there should be public access to inspection reports on individual homes.

Public Bodies

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current membership of the advisory panel on the importation of sexually explicit films for health purposes.

Mr. Sackville: The advisory panel was disbanded with effect from 1 February. I am grateful to the members who have served on it in the past 11 years.

Care in the Community

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total funding of care in the community in 1993-94; and what the amount will be in 1994-95.

Mr. Bowis: In recognition of their new community care responsibilities we are making available to local authorities in England a special transitional grant of £565·4 million in 1993-94.

For 1994-95 the cumulative total of new resources for community care will be £1,274·5 million. The figures are in addition to amounts already spent by health and local authorities on community care services from their baseline resources.

Severalls Hospital, Colchester

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the annual cost of upkeep of a psycho-geriatric bed in Bartons ward, Severalls hospital, Colchester for the last available year.

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for North East Essex mental health services national health service trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. David Holt, the chairman, for details.

EDUCATION

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Boswell: The value of consultancy contracts awarded by the Department each year since 1987 was as follows:

	Value of Consultancy Contracts (£,000)
Year	Actual Prices	At 1994 Prices
1987	364	532
1988	438	600
1989	555	711
1990	974	1,155
1991	1,517	1,691
1992	1,994	2,141
1993	1,629	1,694

Information for the years before 1987 is not available in the form requested.

Expenditure (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much money has been made available for spending on primary and secondary education in Essex in each of the last three financial years; what is the figure for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: For the purpose of calculating authorities' standard spending assessments, education standard spending is divided into five sub-blocks—under-fives, five to 10, 11 to 15, 16 plus, and "other education". The table below sets out the changes in five to 10, 11 to 15 and 16 plus sub-blocks for Essex for 1994-95. Expenditure on under-fives at primary schools is notionally supported through the under-fives sub-block.

Year	1991-92 £ million	1992-93 £ million	1993-94 £ million	1994-95 £ million
5-10 Sub-block	183·498	196·384	203·468	214·362
11-15 Sub-block	218·819	232·814	240·749	246·484
16 plus Sub-block	90·652	102·760	34·788	34·373

Notes

1. 1993-94 figure for the 16 plus sub-block reflects LEAs' loss of responsibility for most further education.
2. 1994-95 figures reflect LEAs' loss of responsibility for the careers service and school inspections.

Education standard spending assessments are not earmarked. Each authority is free to determine its spending priorities between the services for which it has responsibility.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many visits abroad the Minister of State made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend has made one visit abroad on official business during 1993, to attend and address a conference organised by the Organisation for the Development of Freedom of Education. The total cost to public funds was £728.

Surplus Places

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has made of the number of surplus places in (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) special schools in the London boroughs.

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Warwickshire, North (Mr. O'Brien) on 31 January 1994, Official Report, columns 517-21.

Assisted Places Scheme

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, if he will make a statement about the level of parental contributions to the fees of pupils in the assisted places scheme in the next academic year.

Mr. Forth: Remission of tuition fees under the assisted places scheme is dependent on the level of fees at participating schools and the amount parents can afford to contribute. Subject to parliamentary approval, the parental contribution scales will be adjusted upwards for the school year 1994-95 as set out in the table below. Where the relevant income for the appropriate financial year does not exceed £9,352 the tuition fees will be wholly remitted.

Part of relevant income to which percentage applies	One assisted pupil	Each of two assisted pupils	Each of three assisted pupils

Tobacco

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current subsidy for tobacco growers in the European Community; what is the projected cost for the next financial year; what levels of intervention stocks of tobacco are held; and what amount of tobacco stock has been destroyed over the last five years.

Mr. Jack: The provisional outturn for Community expenditure in 1993 is 1,165 mecu—£917 million—compared to a budget provision of 1,401 mecu. The 1994 budget for tobacco has been set at 1,235 mecu—£933 million. Following substantive reform of the tobacco regime in 1992, from the 1993 harvest onwards, intervention arrangements no longer exist. The European Commission's most recent figures show 10,344 tonnes of tobacco from harvests prior to 1993 remain in intervention stores. No figures are available for tobacco which may have been destroyed, but the tobacco regime does not provide for destruction of stocks which have received EC support. Tobacco eligible for EC support must be of sound and fair merchantable quality and free of characteristics which would otherwise pevent normal marketing.

The effect on expenditure on tobacco resulting from the reform of the regime agreed in 1992 will not begin to show in expenditure figures until at least 1994 and the regime is to be reviewed again in 1996. Nevertheless tobacco is still the most heavily subsidised common agricultural policy crop per hectare and we will continue to press for greater reforms.

Budgetary ecu rates; 1993 £1=1·2700 ecu; 1994 £1=1·3234 ecu.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response she has given to the letter from the president of the Nuclear Control Institute in regard to the economic viability of reprocessing at THORP; and when he received this letter.

Mr. Jack: The Ministry received a letter from the Nuclear Control Institute dated 28 January. This appears to raise issues which fall outside the areas for which this Department is responsible. I shall be replying in due course.

EC-Canada Fisheries Agreement

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has made to the Commission of the European Communities regarding the proportion of the Canadian catch that United Kingdom vessels may be expected to fish as a result of the European Communities-Canada fisheries agreement.

Mr. Jack: Throughout the negotiations with Canada, the United Kingdom has stressed the traditional importance of these waters to our distant water fleet.

Once the agreement has been ratified by Canada, the United Kingdom will press for an appropriate share of any opportunities which become available.

Coarse Fishing

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to alter the current coarse fishing close season.

Mr. Jack: Responsibility for fixing annual close seasons for fishing for coarse fish rests primarily with the National Rivers Authority. It is currently reviewing the various coarse fishing close seasons which apply in different parts of England and Wales. If it concludes that changes are required, these will have to be introduced by way of new byelaws which would be subject to statutory advertisement and ministerial confirmation. In dedciding whether or not to confirm any byelaws, Ministers would take account of any objections they received.

British Columbia

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether she or officials from her Department met the Premier of British Columbia on his recent visit to the United Kingdom to discuss British Columbia's new forest practices code.

Mr. Jack: The Premier of British Columbia was on a private visit and did not meet Government Ministers or their officials.

Sample Management System

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what information has been made public by her Department or by agencies of her Department concerning the commissioning, costs and subsequent cancellation of the project to establish a sample management system;

(2) if she will set out all provisions requiring her Department to make public details of the setting up, costs and progress of all computer projects undertaken or commissioned by her Department or by agencies of her Department;

(3) how much money was spent by (a) the Central Veterinary Laboratory and (b) her Department and other agencies of her Department on the sample management system;

(4) what sum was received by the Central Veterinary Laboratory in respect of the legal settlement with ACT over the failure by ACT to carry out the development of the sample management system.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: A contract for the development of a sample management system, funded by the Ministry's information technology directorate was awarded to ACT Medisys in November 1990. On completion of the development of the project, its ownership was to have been taken over by the Central Veterinary Laboratory. Serious development delays were however identified early in the project, which was then suspended in August 1991. Following a review and subsequent negotiations, there was a mutual agreement to cease the contract in December 1992.

The terms of the contractual arrangements for this project, including those covering the termination, are commercially confidential, although the figures are open to scrutiny by the Comptroller and Auditor General in the usual way. Under the terms of the settlement secured by the Ministry, compensation—in the form of computer hardware, software and a cash sum—fully recompensed the Ministry for the costs involved. As the value of the compensation covered the relevant expenditure, there was no loss to report in the Ministry's appropriation accounts. Those accounts were duly audited by the National Audit Office.

The Ministry's requirement to provide, publicly, details of computer projects is generally limited to the advertising of major projects—as required in accordance with the EC's supplies and services directives and appropriate General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade regulations—in the Official Journal of the European Communities. Details of any subsequent award of contract are similarly advertised. Additionally, agency accounts, audited by the National Audit Office, will be prepared in accordance with commercial style accrual accounting principles and include information at appropriate levels of detail.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by her Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Jack: The annual costs of external consultants employed by the Department—excluding agencies—since 1984-85 are set out. Data for earlier years can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Financial year	Expenditure (£)	Constant 1994 prices (£)
1984-85	27,110	[1]43,617

Animal Feeding Stuffs

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number of processing plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs, in each year since 1981; and how many such plants were inspected by her officials in each of those years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The number of plants varied from year to year as plants opened or closed or in some cases did not operate on any continual basis. All plants when actually producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feeding stuffs have been subject to official inspection during the year. Their numbers are as follows:

Year	Number
1981	Not available
1982	107
1983	108
1984	107
1985	106
1986	99

Bovine Immunodeficiency Virus

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will review the need for withdrawal from sale of cows and calves potentially affected by bovine immunodeficiency virus, and milk from affected herds, and for appropriate compensation; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: There is no evidence that the bovine immunodeficiency virus will affect humans, whether through contact with animals, or through drinking milk or eating meat. Experimental studies indicate that the virus has little effect on cattle: the only symptom being a transient rise in temperature which soon passes. Against that background, we have no plans for the type of review mentioned by the hon. Member.

Protected Birds

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list each licence her Department has issued for the killing of protected birds under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1991 in 1993 and 1994 to date by (a) location and (b) the species involved.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Ministery of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assurances were given to the farmers who appeared in the video on sheep dipping, produced by the agricultural health and safety information centre of the Health and Safety Executive; what is the purpose of this project; to whom it is available; and on what terms.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

The video on sheep dipping was produced by the Health and Safety Executive by an independent producer. It describes symptoms of ill-health alleged to be associated with dipping, alternative ways of controlling sheep parasites, guidance on good and poor sheep dipping facilities and practical ways to comply with the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988.

The video is primarily to assist in training and is in a format which makes it suitable as guidance to sheep farmers. Participants were given the assurance that they would each receive a copy of the finished video.

Approximately 200 copies of the video have been sent to various individuals, agricultural training organisations and other bodies with an interest in this subject. The video is also available for anyone to purchase—£45 including VAT—or hire—from £11·49 plus VAT—from CFL Vision, PO Box 35, Wetherby, West Yorkshire LS23 7EX.

WALES

NHS Staff

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of total National Health Service expenditure has been spent on the employment of managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff within the whole of the NHS in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The proportion of total NHS expenditure that was spent on the employment of managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff within the whole of the NHS in Wales in each of the last three years for which figures are available was as follows:

	Per cent.
1990-91	5·6
1991-92	6·0
1992-93	5·9

Notes:
1. Expenditure spent on the employment of managers, advisers, adminstrators and clerical staff is taken to be that covering salaries and wages. Expenditure in respect of advisers relates to Family Health Service Authorities only.
2. Figures include expenditure by Health Authorities, the Welsh Health Common Services Authority, Family Health Service Authorities, Pembrokeshire NHS Trust (1992-93 only), and the Health Promotion Authority for Wales.
3. It should be noted that since 1989 senior managers' terms and conditions of service have been extended to second and third level managers and some senior nurses and other professional staff have also transferred to senior management grades.

Labour Statistics

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost of employing managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff in the NHS in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The total cost of employing managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff in the NHS in Wales in each of the last three years for which figures are available was as follows:

	£000s
1990-91	86,599
1991-92	106,742

Training and Enterprise Councils

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much funding has been made available to each TEC in (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94, expressed in cash terms and real terms and (c) giving a real terms percentage change from the previous year, for (i) youth training and credits, (ii) training for work and the programmes it replaced and (iii) business start up allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The figures requested are provided in the following tables.

These show a real terms increase in provision in 1993-94 for both the youth training and business start-up programmes. The reduction in provision for training for work is the result of targeting this programme on training for the longer-term unemployed.

I am advised that the funding to be made available in 1994-95 for training in Wales will enable the youth training "guarantee" to be met and, on the basis of TEC assessments, training places will be available for all eligible adults who wish to train.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients have been treated in national health service hospitals private facilities in each year since 1987-88.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information available, which relates to private patient attendances at national health service hospitals, is given in the following table. The figures do not relate to the number of people treated because an individual person may be treated more than once.

National Curriculum Review

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list those organisations and individuals who have made representations orally or in writing to him personally or to the Welsh Office regarding the review of the national curriculum and its assessment in Wales;

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the minutes of the four conferences of teachers held by the Curriculum Council of Wales during its review of the national curriculum and assessment in Wales, together with details and an analysis of evidence provided to these conferences;

(3) if he will place in the Library copies of the written responses to the Curriculum Council of Wales in its review of the national curriculum and its assessment framework in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Since 5 January when the final reports by Sir Ron Dearing and the Curriculum Council for Wales and the Government's response were published, the Department has received representations from over 70 individuals and organisations regarding the impact of the review of the national curriculum and its assessment in Wales. Those who made representations have a right to assume that their views have been submitted in confidence and I am not therefore in a position to identify the individuals or organisations concerned.

Quangos (Membership)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to establish a register of interests of all members of the boards of Welsh quangos, which is open to inspection by members of the public, giving details of party political membership, other positions held and paid employment in the private sector.

Mr. Redwood: It is good practice for executive non-departmental public bodies—like other public bodies—to keep a register of the interests of members of their boards and I encourage them to do so.

Welsh Language

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many county councils wrote to the Curriculum Council for Wales during its review of the national curriculum and assessment in Wales, expressing the view that the teaching of Welsh as a foundation subject of key stage 4 should not remain part of the national curriculum;

(2) how many secondary schools in Wales wrote to the Curriculum Council for Wales expressing an opinion against including the Welsh language as a foundation subject at key stage 4 as part of the national curriculum; and how many of those schools had already been the subject of a deferment order regarding the teaching of Welsh at key stage three or four;

(3) how many secondary schools reported to the Curriculum Council for Wales or his Office that they had encountered difficulties recruiting an adequate number of teachers qualified to teach the Welsh language in their response to the review of the curriculum and assessment in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Curriculum Council for Wales conducted extensive consultations on changes to the national curriculum at key stage 4 as part of the review of the national curriculum and assessment which I commissioned last year. The consultations included conferences and the invitation to submit written representations. In its final report which it submitted to me in December, the council summarised the views expressed during this consultation exercise, and made recommendations in the light of them. Copies of the report have been sent to all Welsh Members of the House and further copies are available in the Library of the House.

Details of the conduct of the consultations are described in the report. Individual responses to the council cannot be made available for public inspection as individuals who wrote to the council are entitled to consider that their submissions have been made in confidence.

In response to the review I have received two reports from secondary schools about the recruitment of teachers qualified to teach Welsh.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date the Welsh Language Board was first consulted regarding impending changes to the national curriculum in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: There were no formal consultations with the Welsh Language Board on changes to the national curriculum in Wales since the review by the Curriculum Council for Wales and Sir Ron Dearing was conducted prior to the establishment of the board on 21 December 1993.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools requested exemption, as opposed to deferment, of the requirement to provide Welsh in the national curriculum at key stage 3 or 4 in response to the invitation in his consultation document issued on 7 May 1991.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Schools were not directly invited to respond to this consultation exercise which was carried out under the terms of section 21 of the Education Reform Act 1988. However, copies of the consultation document were sent for school governors to information. In response, 17 schools made direct representations to the Welsh Office.

Of these, 16 requested exemption from the national curriculum requirements for Welsh at key stages 4 and 2 also requested exemption from the key stage 3 requirements. One school also sought deferment of the key stage 3 requirements.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will consult with the Welsh Language Board on the implications of the Welsh Language Act 1993 for treating Welsh and English on a basis of equality in the national curriculum.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Welsh Language Board is responsible for taking a broad overview of Welsh medium and Welsh second-language education. The Government and the new Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales will be consulting the language board regularly on Welsh language issues which impact on the national curriculum.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department and its predecessors each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

New Towns

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the transfer of properties from the Commission for New Towns to British housing associations and Basildon council.

Sir George Young: In accordance with the results of the tenants' ballot, 85 per cent. of the rented housing stock held by the Commission for the New Towns at Basildon was transferred to Basildon district council on 31 January 1994. Responsibility for the management of the remaining 15 per cent. was taken over by the Basildon Community housing association on the same day, with a view the freehold being transferred as soon as the housing association is able to complete the necessary arrangements.

Playgrounds

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice his Department has issued to local authorities concerning the siting of playgrounds and other leisure facilities near to electricity sub-stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Planning advice is not issued by the Department on such sites. Electricity companies are required by the Electricity Supply Regulations 1988, as amended, to take note of the nature and use of land adjacent to their installations, and to take appropriate measures to protect and warn the public of the associated dangers.

North Peckham Task Force

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which projects have been and currently are funded by the North Peckham task force.

Mr. Baldry: Since the North Peckham task force opened in April 1986, it has funded well over 300 projects, of which 30 are still being funded. In some of these, funding will extend up to two years after the task force formally closes on 31 March 1994. I will write to the hon. Member with a full list.

Tarmac Ltd.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if Tarmac Ltd. may award itself contracts paid for by public money following its acquisition of PSA projects.

Mr. Baldry: No.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the changed proposals put forward by the Greek Presidency of the EU regarding the phase-out period for the co-disposal of hazardous and domestic waste.

Mr. Atkins: The Greek Presidency has suggested that the landfill directive should provide for the co-disposal of hazardous waste with municipal waste to be phased out over a period of 10 years rather than five years proposed by the European Commission. The United Kingdom reiterated its view in working group discussions on the Greek proposal that the directive should recognise that properly controlled co-disposal is an environmentally sound waste management option, and provide for it to continue to be practised by those member states which wish to do so. The Government agree that the directive should place a ban on the uncontrolled mixing of hazardous waste with municipal waste.

Groundwork Foundation

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the efficiency of the Groundwork Foundation in terms of the percentage of the grant-in-aid from his Department which is passed on to Groundwork trusts; and what alternative arrangements he has considered to ensure value for money.

Mr. Atkins: The Groundwork Foundation administers its grant-in-aid in accordance with the provisions of a grant memorandum, the terms of which are kept under review by my Department. All payments made by the foundation towards the approved running costs of Groundwork trusts are subject to the prior approval of the Department. The forecast funding requirement of existing and planned trusts is an element of the foundation's corporate strategy considered by the Department in the annual public expenditure round.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effects of the funding arrangements of the Groundwork Foundation on existing environmental trusts.

Mr. Atkins: The Groundwork Foundation is funded to support and develop the Groundwork trust network. Groundwork trusts are formed and managed by local people. The trusts are encouraged to complement the work of existing environmental bodies and collaborate with them. The trusts stimulate increased expenditure on environmental improvements, from which the other bodies can benefit.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 443, what consideration he has given to enabling existing environmental charities to bid for the grant-in-aid paid to the Groundwork Foundation.

Mr. Atkins: None. Grant-in-aid is allocated to the Groundwork Foundation specifically for the purposes of developing, managing and supporting the network of Groundwork trusts.

Privatisation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the conditions under which architectural services and other specialised agencies of county councils can be offered for privatisation; and how many offers constitute the level of competition he requires.

Mr. Baldry: If an authority chooses to invite private contractors to carry out these services, then the basis on which they do so is a matter for them, subject only to the requirements of the EC public procurement directives and their general fiduciary duty. The Government intend to require authorities to seek competitive tenders before their own staff are allowed to undertake this work and will be consulting on detailed proposals shortly.

Biodiversity Action Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which recent policy commitments and initiatives in the United Kingdom biodiversity action plan were (a) not previously announced and (b) do not result from the Government's legal obligations under the European Union habitats directive.

Mr. Atkins: The goal, principles and objectives contained in the plan are in themselves a significant re-definition of policies. The most important new initiative is to establish a biodiversity action plan steering group, which will be a partnership between central and local government, the conservation agencies, scientific and academic institutions and voluntary bodies. The group will have four specific remits in overseeing:

the development of range of specific costed targets for key species and habitats for the years 2000 and 2010 to be published in European Nature Conservation Year 1995;

a working group already established following the May Seminar designed to improve the accessibility and co-ordination of existing biological datasets, to provide common standards for future recording and to examine the feasibility in due course of a single UK Biota Database;

the preparation and implementation of a public strategy which could:

support initiatives that enhance people's understanding of what is special about their local environment;

encourage the creation of a network of community wardens;
support initiatives that promote local action to conserve and improve local biodiversity;
the establishment of a review process for the delivery of the commitments contained in the plan.

In addition, the plan contains 59 action points and broad targets which take forward, accelerate and extend existing policies and programmes. A number of these are new commitments or initiatives, and I will write to the hon. Gentleman with details of these.

Barnoldswick Sewage Treatment Works

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to inform the National Rivers Authority if phosphate removal will be required at Barnoldswick sewage treatment works.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will make an announcement in due course about those areas to be identified as sensitive under the EC's urban waste water treatment directive and which of the sewage treatment works discharging into them will be required to install phosphate removal equipment.

Nitrates Directive

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which are (a) the vulnerable zones designated under EC nitrates directive 91/676/EC and (b) the sensitive and less sensitive areas designated under EC urban waste water treatment directive 91/271/EC.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Minister for Agriculture Fisheries and Food will shortly be consulting about the areas proposed to be designated as vulnerable zones under the nitrates directive.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will make an announcement in due course about the areas to be identified as sensitive and less sensitive under the urban waste water treatment directive.

Land Contamination

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what future meetings he plans to hold with representatives of Barnet council in connection with contamination of land at Coppetts wood, Finchley.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for resolution between the Department of Transport and the London borough of Barnet.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 565, (a) on what date and by whom his Department was first made aware of contamination of land to be given in exchange for land required for the trunk road improvement east of Fallowden way and east of high road, Finchley, (b) on what date and to whom his Department first notified Barnet council that testing of the site would take place, (c) on what dates and by whom testing of the site took place, (d) on what date and by whom his Department was first notified of the results of the test, (e) on what date and to whom his Department notified Barnet council of the results of the test, (f) by what date his Department told Barnet council that it would require the council's response and (g) if he has now received the council's response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The contamination to which the hon. Member refers became apparent only after the exchange land certificate for this site had been issued. In these circumstances, the problem was a matter for the Department of Transport as the acquiring authority and the London borough of Barnet as the owner of the land. My Department has not been involved in any ensuing correspondence.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department undertakes, or what information his Department requires from local councils, regarding condition, and possible contamination, of land when considering options for possible sites to be subject to exchange land certificates.

Mr. Atkins: The Department has to be satisfied that there has been compliance with the appropriate procedures and requirements under the Acquisition of Land Act 1981 before exchange land certificates are issued. It relies on the Department of Transport, as the acquiring authority, and the local authority to supply information about the condition and possible contamination of potential exchange land sites. Where trunk road proposals are the subject of a public inquiry and an exchange land certificate is sought, the Secretary of State will rely on evidence presented at the time about the condition and possible contamination of exchange land, as reported on by the inspector, in considering options for potential sites.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what instructions or advice of recommended procedure his Department issues to councils regarding allowing access by elected councillors to information provided by his Department to the council in relation to possible contamination of land within their wards; if he will make representations to Barnet council regarding council officers' refusal to allow access to such information to councillors in connection with contamination of land at Coppetts wood, Finchley; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My Department has not issued instructions to local authorities on this. Authorities are independent, but must, of course, comply with the relevant law including the Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985. We understand that the Department of Transport has sent a report of the tests on the Coppetts wood site to council officers to enable them to prepare their report to council members. The DOT said that council officers could show the report to Members.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list of all correspondence since January 1988 between his Department and the London borough of Barnet relating to (a) issuing of exchange land certificates in connection with the widening of the north circular road, east of Falloden way and (b) condition and possible contamination of land at Coppetts wood in Finchley; what was the date of each piece of correspondence; who was the sender and recipient in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Department of Transport. My Department has not been in correspondence with the London borough of Barnet on the subjects raised.

Canadian Rain Forest

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he or officials from his Department met the Premier of British Columbia on his recent visit to the United Kingdom to discuss British Columbia's new forest practices code.

Mr. Atkins: The Premier of British Columbia was on a private visit and did not meet Government Ministers or their officials.

Rural Housing Associations

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of state for the Environment (1) what representations he has received urging the encouragement of a proliferation of smaller, more local, rural housing associations; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representation he has received from the Association of National Parks, regarding the occupation of rural housing association homes; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The Association of National Parks met recently to consider a report on housing in national parks and has written to me to draw a number of points to my attention, including the role of rural housing associations and the occupation of the homes they provide.

Eighteen rural housing associations are registered with the Housing Corporation, including one which registered during the past year. Despite the reduction that was necessary in the Housing Corporation's development budget for 1994-95, the corporation expects to maintain the target of 1,850 allocations for the rural programme next year. For the four years from 1989-90 over 6,000 units were approved—some 800 above target.

Rhinoceros Horn

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he intends to take to persuade the Governments of China and Taiwan to fulfil their obligations under CITES resolutions to enforce the ban on trade in rhinoceros horn.

Mr. Atkins: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom together with our European partners, fully supports the decision of the CITES standing committee to send technical and high-level delegations to rhino horn-consuming countries to assess the effectiveness of their efforts to combat illegal trade in rhino horn and to offer advice and assistance. We have contributed £5,000 towards the costs of the high-level delegation which has recently visited China and Taiwan. The Government will be represented at the standing committee meeting next month which will consider what further action should be taken in the light of the delegations' reports. We shall also continue our bilateral contracts with the relevant authorities.

The United Kingdom Government have taken a leading role in encouraging greater efforts to conserve rhinos. On 3 February my Department announced a grant of £60,000 towards a project co-funded by the European Commission and the Worldwide Fund for Nature to appoint a scientific officer to co-ordinate rhino conservation activities throughout Africa.

Associated Octel (Fire)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the environmental pollution consequences of the fire at Associated Octel's plant in Cheshire on 2 February.

Mr. Atkins: On the basis of their preliminary assessments, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has concluded that it is unlikely there are any significant environmental effects of the fire.

HMIP will continue to keep the situation under review.

Municipal Homes

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to undertake a feasibility study into the re-introduction of a municipal homes construction programme, with particular reference to the Greater London area and other large conurbations.

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 February 1994]: The Government's policy is that housing associations should be the main providers of new social housing, while local authorities concentrate on their enabling role and on managing their existing housing stock. This diversifies the tenure of the social housing stock and helps to attract private finance to supplement public expenditure, so providing more homes.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Special Constables

14. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives he is planning to encourage the recruitment of special constables.

Mr. Howard: Our police reform White Paper announced the Government's commitment to increase the number of special constables by 10,000 by the end of 1996. As a start, I am about to launch a new advertising campaign to recruit specials. The first phase of the campaign will begin in the north-west this April.

Night Club Licensing

15. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the workings of the night club licence, pursuant to section 68 of the Licensing Act 1964.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We have no present plans to review the operation of that particular section of the Licensing Act.

Prison Security

16. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on security and public safety issues affecting the prison service.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Prison Service aims to hold in secure custody those committed to it by the courts. A massive prison building programme has contributed to this in recent years. Six new prisons are planned. All will be built to modern security standards to ensure the safety of the public.

Private Sector Prisons

17. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will meet the Director General of the Prison Service Agency to discuss the management of private sector prisons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend has no specific plans to do so. He and I have regular meetings with the director general at which any issue relating to the operation of the Prison Service, including private sector involvement, may be discussed.

Bail Offenders

18. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences were committed while on bail; and how many offenders committed offences while on bail in each of the last five years and in each quarter of 1993 to date.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not, at present, available. Research evidence suggests that the proportion of persons granted bail by the courts who were later found guilty of offences committed on bail has remained at between 10 and 12 per cent. over the last few years. It seems likely, therefore, that at least 50,000 offences each year are committed by people on bail.

Young Offenders

19. Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has undertaken into the effectiveness of the Government's policies for combating juvenile offending.

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office has commissioned more than 47 research projects on various aspects of juvenile crime since 1979. A report of research specifically into persistent juvenile offending will be published shortly.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people have been re-classified from young offender to adult who are at present in (a) Her Majesty's prison Frankland, (b) Her Majesty's prison Acklington, (c) Her Majesty's prison Holme House, (d) Her Majesty's prison Kirklevington, (e) Her Majesty's prison Full Sutton, (f) Her Majesty's prison Everthorpe, (g) Her Majesty's prison Durham and (h) Her Majesty's prison Haverigg.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

26. Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take to ensure that local authorities deal responsibly with young offenders in their care.

Mr. Maclean: As my right hon. and learned Friend announced in Blackpool on 6 October 1993, the national standards for the supervision of offenders in the community will be reviewed to ensure that these sentences provide a proper punishment for offenders who receive them. These national standards cover supervision provided by local authority social services departments as well as by the Probation Service.

War Crimes Act

20. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the planned expenditure for his Department for 1994-95 and 1995-96 on police work resulting from the War Crimes Act 1991.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Provision for police specific grant will include £500,000 to support the Metropolitan police for their work in 1994-95 on the investigation of war crimes. I anticipate this work will be completed by the end of the next financial year.

Retail Crime

21. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been donated by Whitbread to his retail crime document and initiative.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Current Home Office initiatives on business crime do not include a retail crime document. My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has however provided a forward to the shopfront security report published by the British Retail Consortium. I understand that Whitebread plc made a contribution to the cost of that document but the details are a matter for the company and the BRC.

Right to Silence

22. Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about his proposals for abolishing the right to silence.

Mr. Maclean: I refer to my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave earlier today to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Langbaurgh (Mr. Bates)

Recorded Crimes

23. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the latest figures for recorded crimes.

Mr. Maclean: The latest available figures for recorded crime were published on 3 November 1993 in a home office statistical bulletin issue 31/1993, a copy of which is in the Library.

Prison Population

24. Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received encouraging him to reduce the prison population.

Mr. Maclean: I have received a number of such representations.

Identity Cards

25. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration is being given to the introduction of identity cards as a means of curbing illegal immigration.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The question of a national identity card scheme is kept under review. It is a matter of balancing potential benefits against costs.

Home Dependent Territories

27. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to visit Jersey to discuss matters within his responsibility for home dependent territories.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend has no immediate plans to visit Jersey, or otherwise for discussions with the Jersey authorities, although he hopes in due course to be able to visit the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, in the same way as have a number of previous Home Secretaries.

Police Administration

28. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding administrative burdens on the police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In the light of Government concern and representations from the police and members of the public at the excessive paperwork faced by the police, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke) commissioned a study by consultants to identify ways of reducing the burden. My right hon. and learned Friend the present Home Secretary announced the Government's acceptance of all 16 of the report's recommendations on 6 October 1993. The police are keen to see these recommendations implemented and are making a valuable contribution to taking forward this work in conjunction with the other criminal justice agencies.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had to reduce administrative burdens on the police; and what legislative proposals he has on the subject.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In the light of Government concern and representations from the police and members of the public at the excessive paperwork faced by the police, in June 1993 the then Home Secretary commissioned a study by consultants to identify ways of reducing the burden. My right hon. and learned Friend announced the Government's acceptance of all 16 of the report's recommendations on 6 October 1993. Work is under way on their implementation. I have no plans to introduce any legislation on the subject.

Racial Incidents

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prosecutions there were in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993 for incitement to racial hatred under sections 17 to 23 of the Public Order Act 1986; and how many of these prosecutions were successful;

(2) what penalties have been imposed upon conviction for people successfully prosecuted for incitement to racial hatred under sections 17 to 23 of the Public Order Act 1986 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will report on proceedings taken under section 57 of the Race Relations Act 1976; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will write to the hon. Member.

Police Manpower

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the pay of the average police officer; how many police officers are curently in post; what were the comparable figures for 10 and 15 years ago in real terms in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information is given in the table. It should be noted that the data exclude officers on central service.

	1978-79 £	1983-84 £	1993-94 £
Average pay costs of police officer	5,881	13,387	30,142
Average real terms pay costs of police officer[1]	16,870	22,621	30,142
Number of officers[2]	111,792	120,595	127,294

[1] Average pay costs brought up to 1993-94 prices.
[2] As at 31 March 1979, 31 March 1984 and 31 October 1993 (which is the latest date for which figures are available).

Gambian Visitors

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the guidelines relating to persons from the Gambia wishing admittance to the United Kingdom for purposes of holiday.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Instructions are not issued on the basis of nationality.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Sentence Discounts

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what decision he has reached on the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice about sentence discounts.

Mr. Howard: I have decided to accept the Royal Commission's recommendation that the courts' existing practice of giving credit for early guilty pleas in the form of discounts on sentence should be more clearly articulated, by putting it on to a statutory basis. I therefore intend to table an amendment to the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill, requiring those passing sentence to take account of the timing and other circumstances of a plea of guilty, and, where a discount is given, to indicate the fact. In so doing I have taken into account that early pleas of guilty not only save valuable court time, but also spare the victims of crime the anxiety which many feel at the prospect of describing their ordeal in evidence.

Christmas Parole

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners were given Christmas parole;

(2) how many prisoners given Christmas parole failed to return at the arranged time.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Warren Hawksley, dated February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the number of prisoners who were given Christmas parole, and how many of them failed to return at the arranged time.

Christmas parole has been taken to be any form of home leave or temporary release granted specifically to cover the period including Christmas Day and Boxing Day, 1993. The figures are as follows:

Release granted	Failed to return on time
1,395	39

Parents and Guardians (Recognisance)

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in 1992 the courts used their powers under section 58 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 to order a parent or guardian to enter into a recognisance.

Mr. Maclean: The power in section 58 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 came into effect on 1 October 1992. It was used on 95 occasions during 1992.

Bewsey Street Hostel, Cheshire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were remanded in Bewsey street hostel; and how many are (a) black males and (b) black females, at the latest date available.

Mr. Maclean: In the three months to 30 November 1993, 72 residents were admitted to the hostel. I understand from inquiries of the hostel that, in this period, one black male and no black females were resident there.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the occupancy rate of the Bewsey street hostel for each of the last 10 quarters.

Mr. Maclean: Occupancy figures for the period April 1991 to March 1992 are not readily available on a quarterly basis. The occupancy figures for the most recent six quarters, and for December 1993, are as follows:

	Per cent.
April—June 1992	56
July—September 1992	62
October—December 1992	72
January—March 1993	75
April—June 1993	76
July—September 1993	85
December 1993	85

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what advice will be given to the magistrates courts regarding any future bail hostel remands following the closure of Bewsey street hostel;

(2) what provision will be made to enable courts in Cheshire to make probation orders with conditions of residence.

Mr. Maclean: It will be for the Cheshire probation service to bring to the attention of the courts which it serves the facilities offered by other approved hostels.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average cost of a weekly place in the Bewsey street hostel, (b) the average length of stay and (c) the average cost of a prison remand place in the Cheshire area.

Mr. Maclean: (a) The current weekly cost is £221.

(b) This information is not readily available in the form requested.

(c) In 1992-93, the average weekly net operating cost per prisoner at Her Majesty's prison Risley, in Warrington, was £304. Costs for remand prisoners are not kept separately.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will be consulted about the proposed closure of the Bewsey street hostel in Cheshire.

Mr. Maclean: The Cheshire probation service was notified on 1 December of our closure proposals and given the opportunity to comment.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many residents of Bewsey street hostel were, on the latest date available, (a) under 17, (b) between 17 and 21 and (c) 21 years and over.

Mr. Maclean: There were 19 residents at the hostel on 30 November 1993. The breakdown requested is (a) 0; (b) 7; (c) 12.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were either re-arrested and charged or breached for failure to comply with requirements at the Bewsey street hostel for the latest period for which statistics are available.

Mr. Maclean: In the three months to 30 November 1993, one resident was re-arrested and charged, and seven residents were breached for failure to comply with requirements.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has of the numbers of people who might be remanded into custody per annum as a result of the closure of Bewsey street hostel in Cheshire.

Mr. Maclean: It is for the courts to decide who should be remanded in custody. There are approved hostel facilities available to them in Cheshire and neighbouring probation areas.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are likely to be made redundant in the event of the closure of the Bewsey street hostel; and what would be the financial costs.

Mr. Maclean: It will be for the Cheshire probation committee, as employer, to decide how to manage the consequences of closure, in terms of redeployment or redundancies; we have not yet received a full account of its conclusions.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the annual saving as a result of the closure of the Bewsey street hostel in Cheshire.

Mr. Maclean: We expect the saving to be in the order of £100,000 in 1994-95 and £200,000 in 1995-96.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capital and revenue expenditure will be available for hostel provision in the Cheshire probation area for 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Mr. Maclean: Revenue grant for 1994-95 and 1995-96 will be about £400,000 a year. The level of capital grant will depend on the scrutiny of spending proposals submitted by all probation areas.

Police Recruits

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had suggesting that the published numbers of established police officers should not include recruits undergoing basic training; and if he will give the total number of recruits undergoing training for the most recent date.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No such representations have been received.

On 31 December 1992 there were 10,692 police constables in England and Wales who were going through their two-year probationary period. About one third of these were still undergoing their foundation training.

Figures for 31 December 1993 are not yet available.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if any designated breeders of dogs registered under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 to supply animals to laboratories have bred greyhounds since 1991;

(2) if any exemptions to allow non-purpose-bred greyhounds to be used in research in 1992 were granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Purpose-bred greyhounds were available from a designated breeder for about 12 months from July 1991. Breeding ceased in June 1992.

No exemptions to allow the use of non-purpose-bred greyhounds were granted in 1992. This would not have precluded the use of such animals under pre-existing authorities.

Blakenhurst Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the key problems which have compromised security at Her Majesty's prison Blakenhurst; and what action has been taken to minimise these faults.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. A. J. Pearson to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about key problems that have compromised security at HMP Blakenhurst.

An article about Blakenhurst in the "Birmingham Post" of 17 June 1993 was accompanied by photographs, one of which showed a hand holding a bunch of prison keys. The management contractor at Blakenhurst, United Kingdom Detention Services, took the view that the photograph could enable an expert locksmith to copy the keys. They agreed to change the locks believed to have been at risk at no cost to the Prison Service.

United Kingdom Detention Services have used this experience to reinforce to all staff the importance of constant vigilance in keeping keys out of sight of people not authorised to see or use them.

Special Parish Constables

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress made in developing the experiment of special parish constables, giving numbers appointed, their terms and conditions and geographical areas covered.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There are 20 schemes involving parish special constables already in operation around the country with more in development. The number of special constables involved varies from scheme to scheme. In most schemes existing special constables have volunteered to be redeployed for the purpose, although some forces have started a recruitment programme to persuade volunteers to train specifically for such work.

Parish special constables are appointed under the same terms and conditions as other special constables and as such are under the operational control of their chief constable. However, the local parish council, or councils, is consulted about some of the duties that the parish special constable might perform, and about particular local concerns.

The size of the geographical area covered by parish special constables will vary from community to community. In general we have recommended that the schemes stay closely linked to parish boundaries. However, this is a matter for chief constables to decide after consultation with the communities involved.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had about the value of special parish constables from (a) the Police Federation, (b) chairmen and members of police authorities, (c) hon. Members and (d) members of the public in the areas currently affected by the experiment.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No such representations have been received.

Remand

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for the latest year available, how many people were remanded in the west midlands area; and how many were (a) black males and (b) black females.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Reliable information on the total numbers of defendants remanded in the west midlands is not available centrally. Neither is any regular information collected regularly on the ethnic origin of those proceeded against in court. Some information on the ethnic origin of those remanded in custody in the west midlands was given in my reply to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) on 25 January, Official Report, column 155.

Prison Education

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what sum of money has been allocated to education in prisons over each of the past five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the sum of money allocated to education in prisons over the past five years.

The total expenditure on education services in prisons in England and Wales in the past five years was as follows:

Year	£ million
1988-89	19·5
1989-90	22·9
1990-91	25·5
1991-92	29·5
1992-93	31·5

Moorlands Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide details of the cell of the month bonus scheme at Her Majesty's prison Moorlands.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Moorland prison and young offender institution.

An incentive scheme to raise standards of cleanliness in cells has been introduced at Moorland prison. A weekly bonus of £2 is paid to the prisoner(s) whose cell is judged to be the cleanest. This practice is consistent with the rules governing the prisoners' earnings scheme. It is an example of a system of rewards to maintain standards within a prison. The governor will keep the scheme under review in order to evaluate its effectiveness.

Youth Custody

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year since 1989 the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences who have been reclassified from young offender to adult status before reaching 21 years of age.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated February 1994:

AVERAGE AGE AND AVERAGE SENTENCE LENGTH

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will list for each year since 1989, (a) the average age and (b) the average length of sentence of the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences, who have been reclassified from young offender to adult status prior to reaching 21 years of age.

The readily available information is for prisoners held in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on 30 June 1993. On that date the average age of all young offenders who had previously been reclassified to adult status prior to reaching 21 years of age is provisionally estimated as 20·3 years. The average sentence length (excluding those sentenced to life imprisonment and those for whom a sentence length was not recorded) was nearly five years.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year since 1989, (a) the average age and (b) the average length of sentence of the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 10 February 1994:

Average Age and average sentence length of young offenders

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will list for each year since 1989, (a) the average age and (b) the average length of sentence of the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences.

The information requested is given in the attached table. Information on the average length of sentence of young offenders received into Prison Service establishments is published annually in Chapter 3 of "Prison statistics, England and Wales".

Average age and average sentence length of young offenders in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on 30 June, 1989-1993

Dated (30 June each year)	Average Age (Years)	Average sentence length (months)[1]
1989	19·4	23·3
1990	18·8	22·9
1991	19·1	22·5
[2]1992	19·0	25·2
[2]1993	18·9	25·6

[1] Excludes those sentenced to life and those for whom a sentence length is not recorded.
[2] Provisional figures.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year since 1989, the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences, who had been reclassified from young offender to adult before reaching 21 years of age and subsequently has the reclassification cancelled before the end of their sentence.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 10 February 1994:

RECLASSIFICATION OF YOUNG OFFENDERS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking if he will list for each year since 1989 the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences, who had been reclassified from young offender to adult before reaching 21 years of age and subsequently has the reclassification cancelled before the end of their sentence.

The information you have requested is not recorded.

Child Custody

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time a child spends in custody, broken down by offence.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mrs. Llin Golding, dated 10 February 1994:

AVERAGE SENTENCE LENGTH OF 15-17 YEAR OLDS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what is the average length of time a child spends in custody, broken down by offence.

The information you have requested is given in the attached table for persons aged 15 to 17 on sentence who were discharged from Prison Service establishments in 1991.

Average time served in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales under sentence[1] by prisoners aged 15 to 17 at sentence discharged from determinate sentences on completion of sentence by offence, 1991

Offence not recorded	3·3
All offences	4·7

[1] Excludes any time served on remand awaiting trial or sentence, those detained for an indeterminate period at Her Majesty's pleasure, and those for whom a sentence length is not recorded.

[2] Provisional figures.

[3] Excludes discharges following recall after release on licence, non-criminals, persons committed to custody for non-payment of a fine, persons reclassified as adult prisoners, prisoners who died or were discharged for other reasons such as transfers to other establishments or successful appeals.

[4] Number of discharges less than 15 in 1991.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children are currently being held in youth custody, broken down by offence.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mrs. Llin Golding, dated 10 February 1994:

15-17 year olds in custody

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many children are currently being held in youth custody, broken down by offence.

The information you have requested is given in the attached table for persons aged 15 to 17 in Prison Service establishments on 31 December 1993.

[2] Excludes those committed for non payment of a fine.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Population Control, China

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet representatives of the Chinese Government to discuss the draft law on the use of mass abortion and sterilisation to prevent the birth of disabled babies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Her Majesty's Government believe that discussion with the Chinese authorities on the details of their draft "natal and health care law" can be conducted most effectively by United Nations bodies, including the United Nations Fund for Population Activities.

Ecuador

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each project funded by the Overseas Development Administration in Ecuador over the last five years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The list of projects and the value of the ODA contribution to them are as follows:

1.	Cocoa Research	239,000
2.	Awa Forest Management	447,000
3.	Zamora Agro-Forestry	225,000
4.	Fisheries Management	1,550,000
5.	Fisheries Management (Institutional Link)	486,000
6.	Geological Survey	1,300,000
7.	Road Transport, Training and Research	485,000
8.	Computer-aided Engineering design and management	235,000
9.	English Language Curriculum Reform	438,000
10.	Advice to Ecuador Government on privatisation	45,000

Poorest 20 Countries

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which are the poorest 20 countries in the world; and what has happened to their bilateral aid allocations since 1979.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Kingdom's gross bilateral aid to the 20 countries with the lowest gross national product per capita in 1992, on the basis of figures just issued by the World bank, are given. This list excludes countries for which incomes data are not available. The United Kingdom's gross bilateral aid to each of these countries in 1979 and in 1992-93 includes financial and technical assistance, food aid and disaster relief, debt relief and loans and equity investment by the Commonwealth Development Corporation.

Thailand (Biwater Group)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the water projects funded by the Overseas Development Administration in Thailand for which the Biwater Group has won the contract.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Overseas Development Administration has not funded any water projects in Thailand for which the Biwater Group has won the contract.

Tied Aid

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a list, by project, of the major contractors who have benefited from tied aid on Overseas Development Administration projects over £5 million in value.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Details of projects supported under the aid and trade provision since its inception in 1977 are available in the Library of the House. As regards projects funded by the bilateral country programmes, the information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Indonesia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what projects and programmes constitute the police management training project funded by the Overseas Development Administration in Indonesia; and what steps are taken to ensure that such projects and programmes do not support the operation of the Indonesian police in East Timor.

Mr Lennox-Boyd: The Indonesian national police project is concerned with the provision of public service management advice and training within the INP and with the development of a more community-based approach to policing. The United Kingdom has not recognised the annexation of East Timor by Indonesia, and we do not therefore fund Government-to-Government aid projects in East Timor. However, some Indonesian public officials trained under our aid programme may subsequently serve in East Timor. It is our hope that the assistance we provide will influence all those receiving it and help develop respect for human rights in Indonesia and East Timor.

Bilateral Aid

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of British bilateral aid is tied to the purchase of British goods; and how this percentage has changed in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In 1992, 66·7 per cent. of our commitments of bilateral overseas development assistance were tied. Comparable figures since 1979 were as follows:

	Per cent.
1979	84·5
1980	73·2
1981	79·5
1982	78·0
1983	74·4
1984	74·3
1985	73·5
1986	77·9
1987	76·4
1988	82·5
1989	76·0
1990	[1]n/a
1991	73·5

[1]The tying status of United Kingdom official development assistance was not reported to the Development Assistance Committee for 1990

Kenya

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the level of food aid the ODA proposes to allocate to Kenya for 1994-95.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We allocated 5,000 tonnes of white maize from our 1993-94 national food aid programme as an immediate response to the findings of the Food and Agriculture Organisation—World Food Programme mission last October. We will consider a further allocation from our 1994-95 programme in the light of the forthcoming SEPHA appeal, and the plans of other donors including the EC.

Malaysia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what explicit commitments were given by the previous Prime Minister, which required him to give consent to the Pergau dam project in Malaysia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. and noble Friend the former Prime Minister informed the Malaysian Prime Minister at a meeting on 15 March 1989 that Her Majesty's Government had taken the decision to make aid and trade provision support available for the offshore element of the Pergau project.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes there have been to the contract value of Biwater's Malaysian rural water supply scheme contracts; and what implications these changes have had for Overseas Development Administration support for the projects involved.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 8 February 1994]: The original 1986 contract between the Malaysia Public Works Department and Biwater was for £425 million. This included an offshore element of £194 million in respect of which the Overseas Development Administration provided an aid and trade provision grant of £59·4 million. In 1991 the Malaysian client and Biwater negotiated an extension to the contract. This did not affect the level of support already agreed by the Overseas Development Administration.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the tendering process involved in the Malaysian water supply project undertaken by Biwater which has received Overseas Development Administration assistance.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 8 February 1994]: The Malaysian client negotiated a contract directly with Biwater.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representation the Overseas Development Administration has received regarding links between Biwater Group and the Malaysian royal family.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 8 February 1994]: None.

Population Programmes

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which are the priority countries for bilateral population assistance within the United Kingdom overseas aid budget.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Kenya, Malawi, Nigeria, Tanzania and Uganda are currently designated as priority countries for bilateral population assistance within the United Kingdom overseas aid budget.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are Her Majesty's Government's guiding principles in respect of population activities in developing countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As explained in the ODA booklet "Children By Choice, Not Chance", our guiding principles in respect of population activities in developing countries are:

> All men and women should be able to chose when to have children. Women in particular, should be in a position to exercise this choice of their own free will, without pressure or coercion.
> If women are enabled to exercise this choice, fertility levels and birth rates in most countries can be expected to fall. Countries whose Governments establish a climate within which couples can exercise reproductive choice should eventually attain population growth rates that are in balance with their economic and natural resources.
> All men and women need information, advice and services to enable them to choose when to have children.
> Aid for population activities will be provided in accordance with each developing country Government's national strategies.
> Donor agencies should work together and co-ordinate their aid for population activities. They should, where appropriate, reinforce the leading role of international agencies such as the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, the World bank and the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

Land Mines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on each of the activities funded by his Department relating to the clearance of land mines in Mozambique; which of these activities are being carried out on (a) a bilateral or (b) a multilateral basis; and whether any further aid will be given for medical attention of casualties of land mines.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Under our bilateral humanitarian assistance programme for Mozambique we are providing a grant of £710,000 to the Halo Trust to train, equip and supervise three local de-mining teams in Zambezia province. This programme is closely co-ordinated with British non-governmental organisations active in the province.

De-mining in Mozambique is co-ordinated by the United Nations. It has commissioned the Halo Trust to undertake a comprehensive mines survey. The United Nations and EC are both funding de-mining programmes to which we are contributing multilaterally.

Our assistance to de-mining is designed to reduce the number of casualties. We have not provided any direct medical assistance for land mine casualties. Other agencies are working with the victims of mines.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of the Overseas Development Administration on providing aid to clear land mines in Angola.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Once a formal ceasefire has been established between the Government of Angola and UNITA and implementation of a permanent peace settlement started, we will consider assistance for demining. We expect this to be part of a United Nations co-ordinated effort.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) of 1 December, Official Report, column 572, if he will make a statement on each of the activities funded by his Department relating to the clearance of land mines in Cambodia; which of these activities are being carried out on (a) a bilateral or (b) a multilateral basis; and whether any further aid will be given for medical attention of casualties of land mines.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since October 1991 our bilateral aid has included three grants to the Halo Trust, a British voluntary agency, for its mine clearance operations. These were for £60,000, £199,886 and £232,520. We have also provided £6,415 for a mine awareness radio programme. Two further project proposals from the Halo Trust at a proposed cost of £330,000 are under consideration.

Until the end of October 1993, our multilateral support consisted of the United Kingdom contribution to the costs of the United Nations Transitional Authority for Cambodia —UNTAC—which financed mine clearance operations undertaken by the Cambodian mine action centre—CMAC. Since the end of UNTAC's mandate, we have provided £133,000 through the United Nations Development Programme—UNDP—to support the continuance of CMAC's operations. A UNDP proposal for support to CMAC for two years is under consideration by donors. Our aid is aimed at reducing casualties caused by mines.

Additionally, we have provided £470,140 over the past three years to set up and run a limb-fitting unit at Calmette hospital in Phnom Penh. The project includes the training of Cambodian technicians in limb-fitting techniques. We have also begun funding a similar project in Kompong Som in southern Cambodia and have agreed funding of £249,741 for this over three financial years.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on each of the activities funded by his Department relating to the clearance of land mines in Somalia; which of these activities are being carried out on (a) a bilateral or (b) a multilateral basis; and whether any further aid will be given for medical attention of casualties of land mines.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: From November 1991 until May 1993 we co-funded, bilaterally, the training and supervision of over 220 members of the local "humanitarian mine clearance pioneer corps" in a major mine clearance programme in and around Hargeisa in the heavily mined north-west of the country. Over this period we contributed £673,540 to the work undertaken by the British company Rimfire International. Our aid has been aimed at reducing casualties caused by mines. The work is continuing as a programme of the United Nations operations in Somalia.

We have not received any proposals to provide medical assistance specifically for casualties of land mines, but remain willing to help in this area if requested.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on each of the activities funded by his Department relating to the clearance of land mines in Afghanistan; which of these activities are being carried out on (a) a bilateral or (b) a multilateral basis; and whether any further aid will be given for medical attention of casualties of land mines.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since April 1992 we have funded, bilaterally, the training and supervision of two teams of Afghan mine clearers. The programme operates in the Shomali valley with the aim of facilitating the safe return of refugees and displaced people to the area. We have so far contributed £479,531 for this work undertaken by the British non-governmental organisation the Halo Trust. Our aid has been aimed at reducing casualties caused by mines.

The mine clearance programme in Afghanistan is co-ordinated by the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Assistance to Afghanistan —UNOCHA. Britain is one of the main contributors to the programme. In 1992 we provided £500,000 to UNOCHA for this purpose, and a further £1 million in 1993.

The European Community also finances mine clearance by contributing to European and local non-governmental organisations including those operating under the UNOCHA programme in and around Herat. Part of the funding for this is attributable to the United Kingdom.

We are currently considering proposals which could provide medical assistance specifically for casualties of land mines, but the current insecurity in the country precludes an early start to any such operations.

Development Assistance

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the annual official development assistance through aid and trade provision for each calendar year from its inception to the latest year for which data are available.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The data requested are available only by financial year and are as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	29
1980-81	26
1981-82	53
1982-83	47
1983-84	28
1984-85	59
1985-86	36
1986-87	81
1987-88	49
1988-89	58
1989-90	62
1990-91	94
1991-92	101
1992-93	93

Somalia

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest developments in the war in Somalia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 8 February 1994]: In recent months inter-clan tensions and outbreaks of fighting have increased in central and southern Somalia. Reports indicate that some clans are re-arming. The international community has continued to urge the Somalis to take forward the political reconciliation process and have been encouraged by recent local agreements.

TRANSPORT

Traffic Director, London

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who is the traffic director for London.

Mr. Norris: Mr. Derek Turner.

Overseas Travel

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State since 27 May 1993.

Mr. MacGregor: (a) The travel budget is not broken down between individual Ministers.

(b) Since 27 May 1993 the actual expenditure by my department on

(1) My internal travel is £286.00

(2) My overseas travel is £5,612.62

These figures do not include the cost of my official car.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. MacGregor: (a) The travel budget is not broken down between individual Ministers.

(b) Actual expenditure by my Department on my travel was

(1) Internal—£1,317.00 in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and £584.00 so far in 1993-94

(2) Overseas—£13,294.72 in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and £6,078.62 so far in 1993-94

These figures do not include the cost of my official car.

London Buses

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many buses owned by London Buses Ltd have been (a) leased to and (b) sold to private companies operating services on behalf of London Transport since 1985; how many in each case were (i) less than four years old, (ii) between four and seven years old (iii) between eight and 11 years old, (iv) between 12 and 15 years old, and (v) more than 15 years old; and on which routes such leases or sales applied.

Mr. Norris: I understand that LBL has not sold any of its surplus buses to private companies operating LT bus routes. LBL has leased 46 Routemaster vehicles to London Transport's tendered bus division, which has in turn leased them to private operators to run routes 13 and 19. Both routes have been run under contract by private operators since 1993. The 46 Routemasters are more than 15 years old.

London Underground

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many London Underground customers have received compensation due to delays in their service since January 1993; and how much compensation in total has been paid to those customers.

Mr. Norris: Since 1 January 1993 compensation totalling £180,357 has been paid in response to 59,251 individual claims. There is currently a large number of outstanding claims relating to incidents in the past two months of 1993, particularly the power failure on the Central line.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what quality of service targets were published by London Underground in May 1992; and how it has performed in relation to them.

Mr. Norris: The information requested is shown in the table.

Pollution

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what initiatives his Department is planning to increase the attractiveness of the use of non-polluting modes of transport.

Mr. MacGregor: The only non-polluting modes of transport are cycling and walking; all other modes give rise to pollution to some extent.

My Department carries out research and issues advice on ways to improve conditions on the roads for cyclists and pedestrians; the transport policy and programme circular encourages local authorities to develop strategies that make better provision for these groups; and the draft Planning Policy Guidance Note 13 on transport provides guidance on how land use planning and complementary transport measures can make walking and cycling more attractive.

Heathrow Express

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the annual track fee to be paid to Railtrack for the Heathrow Express service to and from Paddington station has been agreed.

Mr. Norris: Yes. The terms of payment for access to the western main line and Paddington station were agreed with British Rail last year and the agreement will be inherited by Railtrack. Details of the agreement are commercially confidential.

Land Contamination

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recomendations his Department has made to Barnet council for dealing with contamination of land at Coppetts wood, Finchley; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: My Department has sent to the council a report of the testing of Coppett's wood site. The report includes recommendations for the treatment of the land and the Department at present awaits the council's response.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what future meetings he plans to hold with representatives of Barnet council in connection with contamination of land at Coppett's wood, Finchley.

Mr. Norris: None is presently planned. The Department awaits the council's response to the report of the soil test.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a list of all correspondence since January 1988 between his Department and the London borough of Barnet relating to (a) issuing of exchange land certificates in connection with the widening of the North Circular Road, east of Falloden way and (b) condition and possible contamination of land at Coppetts wood in Finchley; what was the date of each piece of correspondence; who was the sender and recipient in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The following is a list of correspondence between the Department of Transport and the London borough of Barnet since 1988 on (a) issues relating to the issuing of exchange land certificates for the east of Falloden way scheme.

26 February 1993	Department of Transport Consultants	London Borough of Barnet	Confirmation immediate remedial measures in hand
14 April 1993	Department of Transport	London Borough of Barnet	Confirmation remedial measures nearing completion
26 April 1993	Department of Transport	London Borough of Barnet	Details of soil investigations to be undertaken by Frank Graham and Partners and Foundation and Exploration Services Ltd. in June 1993
8 November 1993	London Borough of Barnet	Department of Transport	Enquiry of progress on draft August soil report
23 November 1993	Department of Transport	London Borough of Barnet	Copies of report forwarded for comment on recommended remedial treatment

The position regarding the treatment of contamination remains as stated in the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment in January, except that, regrettably, the date of discovery of contamination supplied by my Department and quoted by him should have been October 1992 and not June 1993. Research into the correspondence has produced a reference to a report dated 1988, a copy of which was sent to my Department's consultants after the contamination was reported in 1992.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received on the route of the CTRL since 22 March 1993 from (a) the parliamentary constituency of Mid-Kent, (b) the borough of Maidstone, (c) the city of Rochester upon Medway and (d) Kent; and how many he has received specifically on the proposal to route the railway through the Boxley valley.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not readily available in the form requested, but in response to an invitation for formal comments on the refined route proposals the following responses have been received by my Department since 22 March 1993: 67 representations from local authorities, action groups and other organisations in Kent; 96 letters from individuals at Kent addresses, and 12 from Kent Members of Parliament and Members of the European Parliament; 138 public comment forms were also completed and returned to Union Railways. The representations included 194 from the Maidstone area, four from the Rochester area; 160 were in favour of the Mid-Kent long tunnel option under the Boxley valley.

Sea Traffic (Radar)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend radar coverage for traffic at sea to all parts of the United Kingdom sea areas including the Shetlands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: While there are no plans to extend radar surveillance of maritime traffic, this is an issue being considered by the inquiry announced by the Secretary of State to the House on 11 January 1993 under the chairmanship of Lord Donaldson of Lymington.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what parts of the English Channel are covered by radar coverage for traffic at sea.

Mr. Norris: Radar coverage of shipping in the channel is covered by the channel navigation information service, operated by Her Majesty's Coastguard within an area bounded by the Greenwich meridian in the west to 002° to 20.0° east. However, it does not include all that area. The extent of radar surveillance is shown on Admiralty Chart 5500. I will send a photocopy of the relevant part of that chart to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North.

Coastguard

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to enhance enforcement measures for Her Majesty's Coastguard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Lord Donaldson is likely to be considering such measures as part of his inquiry. Careful consideration will be given to any recommendations which arise from the subsequent report.

British Rail

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Rail employees were based in York on 1 January of each year from 1979 to 1994.

Mr. Freeman: I refer to the reply I gave the hon. Member on 14 January 1994, c. 291. Information for the previous years is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the proposed channel tunnel fastlink will be connected to the east coast main line; whether the costs of this connection are included in the fastlink scheme; what estimates he can give of handling east coast main line trains through the St. Pancras reversing movement to the fastlink; and whether the east coast main line will be upgraded to VIC B+ loading gauge for freight traffic.

Mr. Freeman: A direct connection from St. Pancras to the east coast main line will be provided by means of a new link across the King's Cross railway lands, the cost of which is included in the estimates for the rail link. Use of St. Pancras will have no adverse effect on journey times. All trains will have to stop to allow officials undertaking on-train border controls to join or depart and for train crews to be changed. Trains leaving the station in the same direction as they arrive will not affect the length of the pause. BR does not propose upgrades to the loading gauges of existing railways, although private investors are free to do so.

Lancashire (Pollution)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 19 January, Official Report, columns 663-4, what further information he has now received on the Lancashire pollution incident from the Laboratory of the Government Chemist.

Mr. Norris: I refer to my answer to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) of 26 January, col. 245.

Noise Insulation

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will bring the west London line for rail freight within the scope of the draft noise insulation regulations.

Mr. Freeman: Ministers will consider all responses to the current consultation exercise before deciding whether the draft regulations should be amended prior to their submission to Parliament. Meanwhile, British Rail remains willing to discuss with the local authorities concerned the possibility of jointly funded noise mitigation schemes for appropriate locations on the west London line.

Taxis, London

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received in response to his consultation on the future of taxi services in London.

Mr. Norris: I have received over 150 representations in response to the consultation paper on the future of taxi and private hire services in England and Wales issued by my Department. Many of these have referred to London. The consultation period ends on 1 March 1994.

Public Service Obligation Grant

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the cash ceiling for public service obligation grant to British Rail for 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The original cash ceiling of £850 million has been increased to £930 million in the light of revised forecasts. British Rail's external financing limit for 1993-94 is not affected.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Norris: I regret that this question could be answered only at disproprotionate cost.

Waste Dumping

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will raise the maximum fine for illegal dumping of waste from shipping on to beaches; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 8 February 1994]: The maximum fine on conviction by indictment for causing pollution of United Kingdom waters by the illegal discharge of wastes from ships is unlimited.

Oil Discharges

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he will introduce into partnership with other North sea Ministers to designate the North sea as a special area under the marine pollution convention in relation to oil discharges.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 8 February 1994]: An intermediate meeting of North sea conference Ministers in December 1993 considered actions taken within the International Maritime Organisation on annexes I and II of MARPOL. They agreed upon steps for further evaluation of reception facilities and the enforceability and impact of current regulations as a basis for considering at the 1995 North sea conference any need for designation of the North sea as a special area under these annexes. Officials are now taking the evaluation process forward for the United Kingdom in conjunction with representative ports and shipping organisations.

A copy of the Minister's statement of conclusions has been placed in the Library.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the volume of oil which is intentionally discharged by shipping vessels into the North sea each year.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 8 February 1994]: It is estimated that legal operational discharges of oil from shipping traversing the North sea is between 1,000 and 2,000 tonnes per annum.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there is any requirement for ships entering British ports to use reception facilities for the dispersing of oily wastes and garbage; and where such facilities are available.

Mr. Norris [holding answer Tuesday 8 February]: Harbour authorities and terminal operators are required to provide reception facilities for ships carrying oily wastes and garbage. There is no legal requirement for ships to use such facilities. Information on oil reception facilities in United Kingdom ports collected by the Department of Transport is contained in the International Maritime Organisation circular MEPC/Circ.234 copies of which have been placed in the Library. Indications are that all ports have arrangements for the reception of garbage.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of oil discharged into the North sea were reported in 1993-94; how many incidents were investigated; and how many resulted in prosecutions under the marine pollution convention for each of the last five years.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 8 February 1994]: From January 1993 to January 1994, the Department's marine pollution control unit received reports of 397 pollution incidents in the United Kingdom sector of the North sea. Of these, 95 were related to ships, the rest were related to offshore installations. All of these incidents were investigated and as a result, 21 vessels were inspected at their next port of call, resulting in four cases being passed on for further investigation and possible prosecution—three to a foreign flag state and one to the Treasury Solicitor. All cases are still under investigation.

In the past five years, 25 shipping cases have been sent for further investigation by the relevant competent flag state authorities, including seven to our own Treasury Solicitor. Out of these 25 investigations, successful prosecutions have been obtained on seven occasions—see table—and 10 cases are still under investigation:

Manchester Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate his Department has made of the economic benefits that accrue to Amsterdam and other European hubs from failure to allow direct services from Manchester airport and the diversion of passengers to airports on the continent; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the evidence given on behalf of Manchester Airport plc to the Select Committee on Transport in regard to the cost to regional airports of failing to liberalise access to them; what action he will take; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what estimate his Department has made of the loss to Manchester Airport plc of preventing the airport from meeting airline demand for additional services to and from Manchester; and if he will make a statement on the airport's call for the liberalising of access to regional airports.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 9 February]: There is no reliable information available on the effects of the United Kingdom's aviation policy on airports in other countries. We have not yet been able to examine in detail the evidence given by Manchester airport to the Select Committee, but we have asked the CAA to examine in detail the economic impact of air services on regional airports, in consultation with United Kingdom airports, including Manchester, airlines and other Government Departments.

It has long been the Government's policy to seek the maximum degree of liberalisation of our air services agreements in order to maximise the benefits to consumers, the airline industry and the United Kingdom economy generally. At the same time the Government have aimed to increase opportunities to regional airports. Individual proposals are considered on their merits and the Government have in the past given expanded opportunities to regional airports. For instance, as a result of the deal negotiated in 1990 three extra services to Manchester from the United States and a service from Birmingham to the United States have commenced. In addition the United Kingdom gave special permission outside the terms of the United States/United Kingdom Air Services Agreement last April for a service from New York to Belfast. As a continuation of our policy to liberalise services to regional airports the United Kingdom has put a proposal to the United States Government which offers immediate open access to United Kingdom regional airports from all United States cities.

Road Pricing

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in which year the Government first began to examine the issue of road pricing; and what are his current proposals.

Mr. Key: In May last year we published a Green Paper "Paying for Better Motorways" (Cm 2200) on the principle of direct charging for the use of inter-urban roads. The intention to publish this consultation document had been announced in the autumn statement in November 1992. On 2 December 1993, column 650, my right hon. Friend announced the Government's intention to introduce electronic charging on motorways when the technology was ready and subject to Parliament's approval of the necessary legislation.

The Government's research programme on the possible role of congestion charging in London was announced in 1991, and the Government have subsequently been co-operating with local authorities outside London which wish to examine the possibility of city congestion charging for their area. The Government are not committed to the introduction of city congestion charging, whether in London or elsewhere.

Road Safety

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which posts are currently designated, within the Department of Transport, to have responsibility for road safety; and if he will list the grade level and title of each post.

Mr. Key: The improvement of road safety is one of our key objectives. In addition to members of the Department's road and vehicle safety directorate, this involves staff working on the planning, construction and maintenance of roads, and the testing and licensing of vehicles and drivers. Many other areas of the Department's work also contribute to improving road safety. It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested, except at disproportionate cost.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount of transport supplementary grant was awarded for 1994-95 to each highways authority; and in each case what amount and percentage was allocated for road safety.

Mr. Key: The amount of transport supplementary grant awarded for 1994-95 to each highway authority was given in the Official Report for 15 December 1993, column 699. Resources for local safety schemes were given as supplementary credit approvals. Allocations under this category, and the proportion they represent of the total resources allocated under the transport supplementary grant system are as follows:

Road Repairs

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the state of disrepair of principal roads;

(2) what procedure he uses for assessing the state of repair of principal roads.

Mr. Key: The condition of roads in England and Wales is monitored by means of the national road maintenance condition survey. Each year a random sample of some 11,000 100m sites is inspected for the presence of certain pre-defined defects visible at the surface. Results for each road class are expressed as index numbers which allow trends in condition to be monitored. They are published in an annual report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Motor Cycles

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what factors were taken into account in deciding to accept the stage II noise limits of motor cycles; and what representations he received on the issue.

Mr. Key: The stage I and stage II noise limits for motorcycles were initially proposed in a draft directive (9148/84) in 1984 and were the subject of a report of the House of Lords "Select Committee on the European Communities"—Session 1984-85, 9th Report, "Motorcycle Noise". Evidence was provided to the Committee by the National Society for Clean Air, the Motorcycle Association of Great Britain Ltd., the Noise Abatement Society, the British Motorcyclists Federation, the Greater London Council, the Transport and Road Research Laboratory, now the Transport Research Laboratory, as well as the Department of Transport. The Committee welcomed the initiative taken by the Commission in proposing a new directive which was subsequently adopted, with minor amendments, as Council directive 87/56/EEC of 18 December 1987.

The directive is currently the subject of a revised proposal as part of the introduction of motorcycle whole vehicle type approval. The stage II limits contained within Council directive 87/56/EEC are retained, but the implementation date is deferred until 1 January 1997.

Brookethorpe and Whaddon Service Area

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when a decision will be announced about the proposed motorway service area at Brookethorpe and Whaddon; and what representations he has received about it.

Mr. Key: Since August 1992 it has been for the private sector rather than my Department to identify sites for new motorway service areas, seek planning permission and acquire the land. I understand that a planning application has been submitted for a motorway service area at Ongers farm, near Brookthorpe, and that this is to be the subject of a public inquiry in May. It will then be for the inspector appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment to decide whether planning permission should be granted.

My Department has received one letter expressing opposition to the proposal.

Visual Display Units

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by office and by year since the introduction of the Local Office Business system the number of replacement visual display units, as distinct from new visual display units, supplied to the local office network.

Mr. Key [holding answer 9 February 1994]: No details are kept by DVLA on the replacement of VDUs. Responsibility for this was subject to contract between IBM and the Driver, Vehicle Operators Information Technology Agency. The latter was acquired by Electronic Data Services when DVOIT was privatised in December 1993 and details could now be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by year and by office the number of visual display units that have been introduced into the DVLA local office network under the local office business system.

Mr. Key [holding answer 9 February 1994]: The information requested is as follows:

Fines

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by year and office how much additional revenue has been generated by the prosecution of regulation 12 cases; and if he will estimate the revenue which will be gained over the next three years.

Mr. Key [holding answer 9 February 1994]: The information requested for 1991-92 and 1992-93 is as follows:

The revenue targets for regulation 12 prosecutions for the years 1994-95 to 1996-97 have not yet been agreed betwen the agency and the Department of Transport.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the average fine, costs and back duty awarded by the courts for a successful prosecution of section 8 cases and section 12 cases.

Mr. Key [holding answer 9 February 1994]: The information requested for the period April-December 1993 is:

	Section 8 £	Regulation 12 £
Average Fine	85·96	59·47
Average Costs	21·52	7·23
Average Section 9	47·48	—

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by year and office how much additional revenue has been generated by DVLA staff undertaking their own prosecutions.

Mr. Key [holding answer 9 February 1994]: It is not possible to list how much additional revenue was recovered by each local office.

The amount of revenue recovered in respect of cases prosecuted by DVLA only for 1992-93 is £25·6 million. This is a 15 per cent. increase over the £22·4 million recovered through both DVLA and the Crown Prosecution Service during 1991-92.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of successful cases prosecuted by DVLA staff since they undertook their own prosecution work.

Mr. Key [holding answer 9 February 1994]: The information requested since April 1992 is:

	Cases
April 1992-93	178,731
April 1993-December 1993	158,175

DEFENCE

Senior Officers

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will produce a table showing the number of generals, admirals and air marshals in active service; and what are the salary levels for each of those ranks.

Mr. Hanley: Information on the number of officers at each rank level of the armed forces is contained in table 1 of the Defence Analytical Services quarterly publication TSP9, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Table 2.23 of the "UK Defence Statistics" publication provides illustrative data on military salaries. On this basis, the 1993-94 rates for senior officers are as follows:

Field Marshal (and equivalents)	112,084
General (and equivalents)	90,148
Lieutenant General (and equivalents)	64,842
Major General (and equivalents)	56,710

Ships

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ships are on active service.

Mr. Hanley: On 8 February there were 124 commissioned surface vessels and submarines in service with the Royal Navy, including those in refit. There are, however, also 21 vessels in service with the Royal Fleet Auxiliary, whose supporting role is essential to the provision of the Royal Navy's overall capability.

Executive Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the subjects on which his Department formerly answered parliamentary questions but which are now refered by him to an executive agency.

Mr. Aitken: Next steps agency chief executives are usually asked to reply to parliamentary questions about the day-to-day operational matters of their agency and on subjects for which they have delegated responsibility, as set out in the agency's framework document.

Polaris

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if it is Her Majesty's Government's policy to maintain the existing maximum warhead ceiling for each Polaris submarine for the remainder of their operational deployment;

(2) what is his policy regarding the maximum warhead ceiling on the United Kingdom's ballistic missile-carrying submarines during the transitional phase from Polaris to Trident.

Mr. Hanley: We have no plans to alter the number of warheads deployed on our Polaris submarines while they remain in service. Each Trident submarine will deploy with no more than 96 warheads, and may carry significantly fewer.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the explosive power of the planned strategic warhead for the Trident missile will be similar to that of the existing Polaris warhead.

Mr. Hanley: It is not our practice to discuss the details of nuclear weapon design.

Joint Analysis Centre, Molesworth

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from what sources military information is processed and analysed at the joint analysis centre at Molesworth; and if he will give details of the modification work undertaken at the joint analysis centre at Molesworth.

Mr. Hanley: The role of the joint analysis centre is to process and analyse military information from a variety of sources. Modification of work undertaken for the JAC has involved the refurbishment of existing buildings at RAF Molesworth mostly to provide improved office accommodation for JAC support staff.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who operates the joint analysis centre at Molesworth; what is the strategic relationship between the joint analysis centre at Molesworth and Menwith Hill station in Yorkshire; how much the expansion of the joint analysis centre at Molesworth has cost: who has met the cost of the joint analysis centre at Molesworth; and how the costs have been attributed.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 January 1994, Official Report, column 171. The joint analysis centre at RAF Molesworth is operated by the United States European Command. The cost of the JAC has been borne by the United States Government.

Sea King Helicopter, Mauchline Cross

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason a Royal Navy Sea King helicopter landed in Mauchline Cross on the evening of 1 February; if he will carry out an investigation into the incident with particular reference to the safety of local people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: During the evening of Tuesday 1 February 1994, a Royal Navy Sea King helicopter from Royal Naval Air Station Prestwick carried out a forced landing on the village green at Mauchline, due to severe weather conditions. An internal investigation has confirmed that the crew took the correct action, by seeking to land as soon as possible. A safe landing was conducted on the village green, clear of the surrounding buildings. Once on the ground, the crew took action to prevent members of the public from approaching the helicopter. The emergency services arrived shortly afterwards. The aircraft waited until the severe weather conditions had passed and then departed for Royal Naval Air Station Prestwick.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright) on 31 January 1994, Official Report, column 551.

Service Personnel (Ethnic Origins)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to publish a breakdown of the ethnic origins of serving personnel by regiment or unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: We intend to publish in "Defence Statistics" a breakdown of the ethnic origins of members of the armed forces by service and rank. The publication of statistics by regiment or unit will be subject to further consideration.

United Nations Standby Forces

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has provided to the United Nations standby forces planning team; and what requests have been made by the planning team.

Mr. Hanley: The United Nations standby forces planning team has asked United Nations member states to consider proposals for identifying forces capable of deployment at short notice that would potentially be available to take part in the initial stages of United Nations peacekeeping operations. A formal response will be made shortly.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his NATO counterparts regarding the work of the United Nations standby forces planning team.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has had no such discussions.

Operation Grapple

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the 2 Battalion, Royal Anglian Regiment will begin its formal Operation Grapple training.

Mr. Hanley: As a matter of sensible contingency arrangements, the 2nd Battalion Royal Anglian Regiment will, on present plans, commence extra training on 27 February to ensure it is fully prepared for a deployment to Bosnia to relieve 1st Battalion Coldstream Guards in April-May, if such a decision is taken.

Defence Estate (Repairs)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total maintenance backlog of (a) unavoidable and essential repairs and (b) urgent repairs on the defence estate at 1 April in each year from 1980 to 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: This information is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

United Nations Forces

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to identify those combat engineering units and military lawyers that could be made available to the United Nations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: We conduct a regular dialogue with the United Nations secretariat to ensure that it has a clear picture of all the capabilities the United Kingdom has to offer. We are willing to consider requests from the United Nations for any of these, case by case, in the light of other commitments and priorities.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 344, what are the names, ranks, and functions of the five military personnel attached to the United Nations secretariat; and if the two officers that were in principle made available to the United Nations are currently attached to the United Nations.

Mr. Hanley: The personnel currently attached to the United Nations secretariat, and their functions, are:

Lieutenant Commander Highett—Logistics
Major Clifford—Situation Centre
Major Goddard—Field Finance
Major Hunter—Department of Peacekeeping Operations
Staff Sergeant Butcher—Situation Centre

The two additional officers made available in principle have not yet taken up posts at the United Nations.

Ceremonial Uniforms

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any non-Ministry of Defence sources have been used to finance the purchase of items of ceremonial uniforms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Some non-Ministry of Defence sources such as regimental funds and band funds have been used to purchase special items of ceremonial uniforms.

Desert Storm Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek information from his French counterparts concerning Desert Storm syndrome.

Mr. Hanley: My officials continue the exchange of information with the French authorities on the alleged Desert Storm syndrome which began last summer.

Peace Support Operations

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department received a copy of the United States Army document entitled "FM 100-23 Peace Operations"; and what assessment he has made of it.

Mr. Hanley: We are aware that the United States Army has in preparation a manual concerning the conduct of peace support operations. This document remains in draft form and it would in any case be inappropriate to comment.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to produce and publish a doctrine manual on peace support operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The British Army produced in 1988 a document on doctrine entitled "Peacekeeping Operations". A new, complementary manual, taking account of recent developments in peacekeeping, is at an advanced stage of preparation.

Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has drawn up to implement the proposed safe areas in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The plan to implement the concept of safe areas is a matter for the UN and the UN Secretary General's report S/25939 of 14 June 1993 detailed how this might be done. The Secretary General's report was endorsed and authorised in the UN Security Council by the passage of UN Security Council Resolution 844 of 19 June 1993.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his French and Spanish counterparts about the implementation of the proposed safe areas in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence is in regular contact with his French and Spanish counterparts about all aspects of our military deployments in former Yugoslavia.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates the three batches of information collated from interviews with refugees from Bosnia were sent to the United Nations War Crimes Commission.

Mr. Hanley: The three batches of information were dispatched to the United Nations War Crimes Commission by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 30 September 1993; 19 October 1993; and 21 January 1994.

Married Quarters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 343, what arrangements will be made to ensure that the proposed housing trust will have an adequate level of finance for capital expenditure on the married quarters estate.

Mr. Hanley: An independent survey of the married quarters estate has been carried out and the proposed housing trust will draw up its business plan taking into account the findings of the survey. This will form a key element in the trust's funding requirement when it approaches the market.

Royal Regiment of Fusiliers

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the attendance of the band of the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers at a Conservative party function at Ayton, Berwickshire in January; and what was the cost to public funds of the band performance.

Mr. Hanley: Members of the Fusiliers' Band (Volunteers) carried out an engagement at Ayton castle on 28 January 1994. The additional costs were met by the organisers of the function.

Military Hospitals

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will show for each military hospital disposed of since 1988 (a) the purchaser, (b) the new use of the site, (c) the estimated value of the site before sale and (d) the sale price.

Mr. Hanley: One military hospital—the former Princess of Wales RAF hospital at Ely—has been disposed of since 1988.

About half the former hospital comprising 7·26 acres of the total 63 ace site has been sold to the Cambridge health authority, now Lifespan Health Care Trust, and is currently in use as a community hospital. Approximately 23 acres have been transferred to the United States Air Force and the balance of the site, some 32 acres, is currently for sale on the open market.

Details of the site value prior to sale and the sale price are commercial in confidence.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has for selling military hospitals to other health care providers.

Mr. Hanley: My Department is required to obtain the best possible price for all sales of surplus MOD property; in the case of military hospitals, this may be achieved by sale to another healthcare provider. Discussions are well under way on the terms of sale of Queen Elizabeth Military hospital in Woolwich to the Greenwich healthcare trust.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Intestate Estate

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what arrangements are made to trace surviving relatives of those dying intestate in the Duchy.

Mr. Waldegrave: The procedures followed by the Duchy solicitor in tracing surviving relatives of those dying intestate in the county Palatine are the same as those followed by the Treasury solicitor.

Extensive inquiries are made of the local authority, of neighbours and of any other likely source. If these fail to identify kin, advertisements are placed in the press.

When there is reason to believe that the deceased might have surviving relatives in a foreign country, inquiries are made through that country's accredited representative in the United Kingdom and, if recommended, advertisements placed in the newspapers of that country.

Following inaccurate accounts of this procedure in the media, the Duchy solicitor wrote to the secretaries of all law societies within the county Palatine. He set out the procedure in detail, and reminded them of the policy of the Duchy authorities sympathetically to consider applications for ex-gratia payments on stated grounds to those who did not qualify for benefit under the law.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many estates under the intestacy provisions in the County Palatine passed to the Duchy in each of the last five years; and how many devolved, after investigation, to surviving blood relatives.

Mr. Waldegrave: The number of estates administered during the last five years by the Duchy solicitor under the Administration of Estates Act 1925 and whose assets devolved to the Duchy—no qualifying kin having been traced—are as follows:

	Number
1988-89	437
1989-90	455
1990-91	488
1991-92	380
1992-93	357

During the same period, the number of estates which were reported to the solicitor but for whom qualifying kin were identified and to whom the assets devolved were as follows:

	Number
1988-89	24
1989-90	31
1990-91	22
1991-92	34
1992-93	34

It should be noted that in many cases of intestacy, qualifying relatives were identified prior to the matter being reported to the Duchy solicitor and are dealt with accordingly. The tables therefore do not reflect the proportion of estates within the county Palatine which devolve to the Duchy on the one hand or to qualifying kin on the other.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for each of the past five years, how much was spent on legal fees in attempts to trace surviving relatives of those who had died intestate in the Duchy.

Mr. Waldegrave: There is no breakdown of costs available for the execution of the Duchy solicitor's duties under the Administration of Estates Act 1925 and the Companies Act 1985. However, the costs of placing advertisements for kin in newspapers over the last five years totalled £114,576-8.

Citizens Charter Reports

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the date of publication of the citizens charter first annual report; what will be the date of publication of the citizens charter second annual report; and what periods of time he plans to cover in future annual reports.

Mr. Waldegrave: The first report on progress in implementing the citizens charter was published on 25 November 1992; the second will be published during March 1994. No decision has been taken on the date of future reports. There is no commitment to report annually.

Complaints

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to set up a task force to advise on setting up and improving complaints systems in the public services.

Mr. Waldegrave: I set up the citizens charter complaints task force in June 1993, for a two-year period. Its role is to review public services' complaints systems; and to advise on their effectiveness, and on any further measures necessary to improve the ways in which public services respond to complaints. The task force is chaired by Lady Wilcox, chairman of the National Consumer Council, with six other members drawn from the public and private sectors.

In October 1993, the task force published its booklet, "Effective Complaints Systems: Principles and Checklist", which offers all public service organisations an opportunity to test the effectiveness of their own complaints systems. The booklet is available from the House of Commons Library.

The task force will shortly publish an interim report to Ministers, which will also be distributed widely to public services and other interested organisations.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 697, how many Christmas cards he and his Ministers sent out in 1993; and at what cost.

Mr. Waldegrave: Approximately 400 Christmas cards were sent by myself and the Parliamentary Secretary on behalf of the Department. The cost of purchase and postage was approximately £240.

Charterline

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answers of 2 February, Official Report, column 789, what is the value of the contract to run the Charterline pilot scheme; if the service contract to operate the Charterline pilot scheme was awarded to the lowest bidder; how many calls have been dealt with by Charterline pilot scheme in its first nine months of operation; how much has been spent, in total, on the operation and promotion of the Charterline pilot scheme; if the provision of uniforms worn by staff answering telephones at the Charterline offices at Havant was a condition of the contract; and what is the cost per telephone call dealt with by Charterline.

Mr. David Davis: The service contract to operate Charterline pilot scheme is of no fixed value. The cost is dependent on the number of Charterline calls made. The service was awarded to the bidder that was judged to offer a high quality value for money service.

Over 5,300 calls have been received to date. Total set-up costs amount to £1,251,000. These include initial research, project planning and management, system design, contractual advice and data collection, which are all one-off costs. On-going costs to date amount to £1,033,136. These include paid advertising, research during the pilot study, set up and use of ACORN data—to provide public service organisations with information about callers' backgrounds—operational costs, and set up and operation of the Charterline language service, which is available in Gujarati, Hindi, Punjabi and Urdu.

The provision of uniforms worn by staff answering Charterline telephone calls was not a condition of the contract.

The cost per call to date is £70, if calculated on the basis of operational costs. The set-up and operational costs of a pilot study are always relatively high. If call volumes were higher, significant economies of scale could be achieved.

In the event that the project is extended to a national or other basis, the cost per call figures would be greatly reduced.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Civil Service Appeal Board.

Mr. Waldegrave: At 25 January 1994 the members of the Civil Service Appeal Board were:

Mr. P. Adams OBE; Mr. A. Bennett; Mr. M. S. Buckley; Mrs. C. Coltman; Mr. K. Crowley; Miss P. Downs (Chairman); Mr. W. J. Edmunds BEM; Miss B. Findlay; Mr. M. T. Foulkes; Mr. W. M. Francis BEM; Mr. J. H. Gracey CB; Mr. T. W. Hall; Mr. G. Harpin; Mr. R. M. Hastie-Smith CB; Mr. P. D. Jones (Deputy Chairman); Miss J. Kelley CB; Mr. R. W. King BEM; Mr. N. F. Ledsome CB; Mrs. S. P. Maunsell; Mr. N. E. A. Moore; Mr. R. W. Morgan; Mrs. M. Morrison OBE; Mr. J. Nicholson; Mr. P. Palmer; Mr. J. Pennington; Ms E. A. Rees; Mr. J. Renton; Mr. M. Ridout; Mr. J. Roberts CB; Mrs. M. B. Sloman; Mr. A. Smith; Mr. A. Stem; Mr. J. W. Stevens CB (Deputy Chairman); Mr. N. Tout BEM.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments.

Mr. Waldegrave: The members of the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments are:

The right hon. the Lord Carlisle of Bucklow QC—Chairman
The right hon. Sir Patrick Nairne GCB MC—Deputy Chairman
The Lord Bridges GCMG
Sir Trevor Holdsworth
Sir Charles Huxtable KCB CBE
Sir Robin Ibbs KBE
The right hon. the Lord Merlyn-Rees
The right hon. the Lord Thomson of Monifieth KT

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the annual official development assistance by calendar year, through the joint funding scheme for NGOs, from its inception to the latest year for which data are available.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Annual official development assistance through the joint funding scheme is collated by financial year. The following table illustrates funding provided to NGOs, from the first full year of its operation:

Financial year	Totals (£)
1976-77	291,407
1977-78	622,234
1978-79	1,331,566
1979-80	1,556,267
1980-81	1,411,936
1981-82	2,543,199
1982-83	2,359,744
1983-84	2,381,731
1984-85	3,794,882
1985-86	4,882,584
1986-87	5,812,641
1987-88	7,954,000
1988-89	11,686,000
1989-90	16,631,000
1990-91	20,061,000
1991-92	23,159,000
1992-93	28,000,000

Colombia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretray of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he will take to ensure that the aid programme to Colombia meets the declared objectives of British aid and, in particular, to ensure that the aid programme addresses the specific needs of the poorest people in Colombia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The aid programme for Colombia comprises entirely technical co-operation. We will continue to support activities aimed at aid programme priorities, including good government, renewable natural resource mangement and human resource development. The Columbia programme will therefore include projects with an indirect impact on poverty, as well as those with a more direct role, particularly those undertaken through non-governmental organisations within the joint funding scheme.

Sudan

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent restrictions have been placed on the supply of humanitarian aid to and movement of humanitarian aid by international aid agencies within the Sudan.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In recent months, both the Government of Sudan and the Sudan People's Liberation Army have restricted access by aid agencies to some areas of need. International non-governmental organisations and the UN have difficulty securing permission to travel which prevents needs assessments and monitoring missions from taking place. In addition, the Government of Sudan have failed to meet their pledged food aid contribution for 1993. We continue to press all parties to lift restrictions on the international aid effort.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Colombia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise the question of the people called disposables in Colombia with the Government of Colombia at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: When I met the Colombia Foreign Trade Minister on 3 February, I made clear the concerns felt in Britain over this question and urged the Colombian Government to take effective measures to tackle the problem.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of communications submitted to the United Nations Security Council sanctions committee 724 on United Kingdom compliance with the United Nations embargo on arms and military equipment sales to the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom has not been required to submit details of compliance to the United Nations sanctions committee established pursuant to United Nations Security Council resolution 724.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received from the United Nations regarding the countries of design and manufacture of shells, mortars and bullets used against citizens of cities in Bosnia designated as having special protected status by the United Nations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made by Her Majesty's Government since the establishment of the European Community's embargo on arms and military equipment exports to the former Yugoslavia, of 5 July 1991, of the effectiveness of the embargo in regard to United Kingdom exports.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No assessment has been made.

We believe the embargo is being applied effectively in regard to exports from the United Kingdom. The Department of Trade and Industry applies a rigorous export licence policy. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, which are responsible for the control of exports, make a careful check on all exports destined for the former Republic of Yugoslavia.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 724 of 15 December 1991 on the establishment of a sanctions committee to monitor the export embargo on military sales to the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Following the passage of United Nations Security Council resolution 724 on 15 December 1991 a sanctions committee was established to advise on all aspects of the arms embargo against the former Republic of Yugoslavia. This committee has been empowered by subsequent resolutions to act as point of reference for all matters relating to sanctions against the former Republic of Yugoslavia. The committee meets on a weekly basis.

EU Committee of the Regions

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he proposes to ensure close contact and liaison with the European Union Committee of the Regions.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I met United Kingdom members and alternate members of the Committee on 8 December last year. We discussed the role of the EC Committee of the Regions and contacts between United Kingdom members and the Government. Our permanent representation in Brussels has already been in contact with United Kingdom members and will provide a regular contact point for them, as well as following the work of the Committee as a whole. The Cabinet Office will co-ordinate contacts between Committee members and home Departments and supervise any briefing requirements.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present United Kingdom nuclear explosive capability in its nuclear weapons inventory; and what it was in 1970.

Mr. Aitken: I have been asked to reply.

1970 was a period of transition for the United Kingdom's nuclear weapons inventory, with one generation of weapons being withdrawn and a new generation introduced. We are now in another period of transition, as around half our nuclear free-fall bombs have been withdrawn from the operational inventory and the first Trident submarine will soon enter operational service. It has been the long-standing practice of successive Governments not to give details of operational warheads or yields, but in broad terms, the total explosive power of the United Kingdom's operational nuclear inventory is currently about half of what it was in 1970.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the political honours scrutiny committee.

Mr. Waldegrave: The present members of the political honours scrutiny committee are:

The Lord Pym MC DL (Chairman)
The Lord Cledwyn of Penrhos CH
The Lord Thomson of Monifieth KT DL

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Council on Science and Technology.

Mr. Waldegrave: Last year's White Paper on science, engineering and technology announced that a new Council for Science and Technology would replace the Advisory Council on Science and Technology. The members of the Council for Science and Technology are:

Professor William Stewart FRS FRSE
Professor Sushantha Bhattacharyya FEng
Professor Sir Aaron Klug FRS
Sir Robin Nicholson FRS FEng
Dr. Bridget Ogilvie FBiol
Sir Ralph Robins FEng FRAes
Dr. Alan Rudge FRS FEng
Professor Stewart Sutherland FBA
Sir Richard Sykes
Mr. John Towers
Dr. Peter Williams CBE

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how often a review is undertaken of the names on the public appointments unit central list; and how many of these names have been on the list for (a) more than five years, (b) two to five years and (c) under two years.

Mr. David Davies: The public appointments unit has completed a first review of the names on the central list, and in future aims to ensure that the information held about individuals is reviewed and updated every two years. Information about the length of time that names have been held on the list is not recorded.

Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton laboratories will be affected as a result of the planned changes to the research councils.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am currently examining the future structure and organisation of the Rutherford Appleton and Daresbury laboratories, which are at present part of the Science and Engineering Research Council. From 1 April 1994, as an interim step consequent on the splitting of SERC into the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council and the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council, the two laboratories will be run as a combined operation under the auspices of the new EPSRC. In the longer term I am looking to put the two laboratories on a more indepedent footing to enable them better to serve their customers and users from the research councils, universities and industry. Given the high regard in which the Rutherford Appleton and Daresbury laboratories are held, both nationally and internationally, it is important that we consider carefully what changes should be made to their status as a result of the reorganisation of the research council system.

The Government have developed a standard set of tests on how Government-funded work can best be organised, known as "prior options". In the 1993 next steps review —Cm 2430—we announced new procedures to encourage those in outside organisations with innovative ideas about how such functions can best be discharged to put them forward. These procedures for "prior options" review and outside involvement apply, where appropriate, to executive non-departmental public bodies, such as the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton laboratories.

The "prior options" tests consider whether the functions provided by the organisation continue to be needed, in whole or in part; whether responsibility for the activity needs to remain in the public sector; and whether some or all of the functions provided should be contracted out or market tested. The consultants KPMG have conducted a preliminary study of these issues. In common with the recent National Audit Office report, they found much to admire at the laboratories. They have advised that there is a need for the services which the laboratories provide, and that privatisation would not represent a sensible option. In considering this advice, I wish to take account of the widest possible range of views. I am therefore inviting organisations and individuals who may have ideas or proposals as to how the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton laboratories should be organised in future to submit them to the Director General of the Research Councils in my Department.

The results of this review will be taken into account in the wider scrutiny of public sector research establishments which I announced to the House on 2 February, Official Report, columns 896-97.

EMPLOYMENT

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who are the members currently appointed to each of the industrial tribunals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A list of the lay members of the industrial tribunals was placed in the Library in January.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who are the members currently appointed to the Employment Appeal Tribunal.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Employment Appeal Tribunal consists of both judicial and lay members. The president is the Honourable Mr. Justice Mummery, a High Court judge. A judge of the Court of Session—the Honourable Lord Coulsfield—sits at the EAT in Scotland and there are also visiting judges in England and Wales. The judges are nominated in England and Wales by the Lord Chancellor from among the judges of the High Court and the Court of Appeal and in Scotland by the Lord President of the Court of Session from among the judges of that court. The lay members are appointed by Her Majesty the Queen on the joint recommendation of the Secretary of State for Employment and the Lord Chancellor. A list of the lay members has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who are the members currently appointed to the board of the Commissioner for the Rights of Trade Union Members.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is no such board.

Statutory Minimum Wage

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 548, what is the sectoral breakdown of his estimate of jobs lost as a result of a statutory minimum wage.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is no sectoral breakdown of that estimate. In order to calculate such a figure, reliable information is needed about the relationship between pay and employment. Information on this relationship is available for the whole economy, but not for individual industries.

Special Employment Measures

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list each of the main United Kingdom special employment measures since 1970; if he will give the date when the scheme came into operation and its date of closure if it is still not running, and the annual and cumulative amount of public expenditure spent on each scheme; and if he will detail the annual and total number of claimants helped under each scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not kept centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Unemployment Benefit

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the cost of administering unemployment benefit in the London travel-to-work area in each of the past five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mrs. Bridget Prentice, dated 11 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the cost of administering unemployment benefit in the London travel to work area in each of the past five years.

It may be helpful if I explain that the Employment Service (ES) has responsibility for delivering a number of benefits in addition to unemployment benefit, as well as a range of other services to people seeking employment and training opportunities. Therefore, the figures I have provided relate to the costs of delivering the full range of our services in London.

It has not been possible to provide the information you seek for the full five year period. For audit purposes, the ES retains financial records of running costs for the proceeding three financial years. Additionally, the organisation of the ES Region responsible for London, the London and South East Region, has undergone considerable re-organisation during this period. I am therefore only able to provide comparable figures for the financial years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94 (projected figures). These figures relate to the ten ES areas which cover London. There are currently 15 ES areas within the London and South East Region; nine of which serve London and the remainder the Shires surrounding it. These figures exclude fixed premises costs, ie the costs of leasing and purchasing premises and the associated running costs, as the method of collecting this information has changed considerably over the last three years.

Given these provisions, the relevant costs, which include staff salary and other running costs such as fuel and telecommunications, are as follows:

1991-92	89,467,057
1992-93	105,609,559
1993-94	[1]128,646,766

[1]Projected.

I must emphasise that these figures are not strictly comparable. As you may be aware, since 1990 the ES has been pursuing a policy of bringing together Unemployment Benefit Offices and Jobcentres with the aim of providing a more efficient and effective service to our clients. Individual ES staff are responsible for all aspects of ES work and it is not possible to provide accurate or meaningful breakdowns of the costs of specific activities.

I hope this is helpful.

Trade Unions

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which trade unions have made representations to him in the last 10 years on whether campaigning on issues including pensions, health and safety, and job conditions has to be paid for out of a political fund.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am unaware of any such representations. A trade union does not need a political fund unless it wishes to spend money on electoral or other party political activities.

Deregulation

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employers have been prosecuted, since April 1986, under each of the regulations identified as candidates for revocation in his press notice 154/93 of 20 July 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 9 February 1994]: The number of employers prosecuted by the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division's inspectors, since April 1986, under each of the regulations identified as candidates for revocation in the Employment Department press notice of 20 July are set out in the following tables. The aim of any repeals or revocations will be to increase the effectiveness of the regulatory regime, which will include continuing to prosecute employers who fall below acceptable standards of health and safety.

Regulations	Number of employers prosecuted
The Flax and Tow Spinning and Weaving Regulations 1906	[1]None

The Construction (General Provisions) Regulations 1961: regulation 21	[4]None
The Docks Regulations 1988: regulation 18	[4]None

Notes:

[1] These regulations were largely revoked by the Workplaces (Health, Safety and Welfare) Regulations 1992. The latter apply to new workplaces immediately and to existing workplaces from 1 January 1996.

[2] These regulations were largely revoked by the Provision and Use of Work Equipment Regulations 1992. The revocations are effective for new equipment immediately and for existing work equipment from 1 January 1997. It is not possible to identify how many prosecutions have been taken under the parts of the Regulations that are revoked by the Provision and Use of Work Equipment Regulations.

[3] The remaining provisions relate the training of operators. Proposals for their consolidation into one set of training requirements under more modern legislation are currently being considered by the Health and Safety Commission.

[4] These provisions cover entry into confined spaces. Proposals for their consolidation into one set of requirements for confined spaces under more modern legislation are currently being considered by the Health and Safety Commission.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Top Salaries Review Body

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who are the members currently appointed to the Top Salaries Review Body.

Mr. Portillo: As announced in the Official Report, 26 July 1993, column 559, the Top Salaries Review Body was renamed the Senior Salaries Review Body last year. Its current members are:

Sir David Nickson KBE DL (Chairman)

Industrial Diseases

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the industrial diseases which are under review by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council or its research working group.

Mr. Scott: The council is currently investigating hand/arm vibration syndrome, process injuries, disorders of the knee, osteoarthritis of the hip and occupational rhinitis and keeps scientific evidence on all other industrial diseases under review on an ongoing basis.

Benefits Tourism

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's estimate of the current scale and volume of benefits tourism.

Mr. Burt: Information is not held centrally on the number of foreign nationals who are in receipt of benefits without having contributed either taxes or national insurance contributions.

War Pensions

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the hospitals where medical examinations are carried out for the purpose of assessing entitlement to war pension.

Mr. Hague: The majority of examinations are carried out by medical boards or medical specialists at local medical boarding centres or consulting rooms. In such instances hospital referral is not necessary.

Where examinations are to be carried out at hospitals all attempts are made to have this done at a hospital convenient for the claimant.

Child Support Agency

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many assessments have been made by the Child Support Agency up to 2 February.

Mr. Burt: Figures for the latest period available, to the end of December, are already in the Library and information relating to January will be placed in the Library in due course.

Personal Pensions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what proportion of the money contributed to an average personal pension at the rebate-only level by a man of 30 years would be absorbed in expenses, charges and commission during the lifetime of the contract if it were terminated after five years;

(2) what proportion of the money contributed to an average personal pension at the rebate-only level by a man aged 30 years would be absorbed in expenses, charges and commission during the lifetime of the contract up to maturity;

(3) what proportion of the money contributed to an average personal pension at the rebate-only level by a man aged 30 years would be absorbed in expenses, charges and commission in the first year of contract.

Mr. Hague: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Langbaurgh (Mr. Bates) on 30 November 1993 at columns 432-33.

Elderly Population

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what change is projected in the population of those aged (a) over 65 years, (b) over 75 years and (c) over 85 years in each of the next 10 years.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table.

Year	Number of people aged 65 and over (000s)	Number of people aged 75 and over (000s)	Number of people aged 85 and over (000s)
1993	8,961	3,917	963
1994	8,992	4,092	1,202
1995	9,030	4,028	1,038
1996	9,069	4,134	1,071
1997	9,095	4,215	1,101

Disability Benefits

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children there were in families in Wales receiving invalidity benefit or its equivalent in 1979 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Scott: Information for 1979 is unavailable. The latest date for which information is available is 4 April 1992, but not in the form requested. Such information as is available is the following:

Number of child dependency increases in payment to invalidity benefit recipients in Wales—24,000

Source: 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements he intends to make for an equivalent premium after 28 weeks for those recipients on income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit who are incapable of work following the introduction of incapacity benefit in 1995 and the award of a higher rate of short-term benefit after 28 weeks.

Mr. Burt: The rules for the disability premium will be changing to be consistent with the incapacity benefit rules. In particular, the new long-term incapacity benefit will act as a passport to the premium and for those who have no other means of entitlement to the disability premium, the period of incapacity needed to qualify will increase from 28 to 52 weeks. The new definition of work and assessment of incapacity will apply. We have no plans to introduce an additional premium payable after 28 weeks incapacity.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what additional resources he plans to provide to fund the Benefits Agency medical service, to take account of the operational costs of incapacity benefit;

(2) what additional resources he plans to provide to meet the costs of additional medical assessors and social security appeal tribunals following the introduction of incapacity benefit.

Mr. Scott: The estimated additional administrative costs and manpower consequences of the introduction of incapacity benefit appear in the financial memorandum accompanying the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Bill. Further refinement of these figures will depend upon decisions still to be taken by Parliament. We are still considering the additional resources that may be required for the appeals system for incapacity benefit.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's budget for disability working allowance in 1993-94 and 1994-95 and the expected budget in 1995-96 and 1996-97.

Mr. Scott: Planned expenditure for disability working allowance was £16 million in 1993-94, and £50 million in 1994-95 and 1995-96, rounded to the nearest £50 million. Figures for 1996-97 will be available in the departmental report which is expected to be published in March.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has so far been paid in disability working allowance in 1993-94.

Mr. Scott: Disability working allowance outturn figures for 1993-94 will not become available until the departmental report is published in March.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the arrangements for claimants currently in receipt of severe disablement allowance whose incapacity for work is due for review after April 1995.

Mr. Scott: From April 1995 people in receipt of severe disablement allowance will no longer have to undergo any kind of review of their capacity for work.

Income Support (Giro Payment)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many giro payments of income support are reported missing in each year; what percentage of total giro payment this is; and how many giros remain missing without being cashed.

Mr. Burt: The payment of income support by girocheque is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. John Fraser, dated 10 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about payments of Income Support made by girocheque.

Payments of Income Support are frequently combined with payments of other benefits therefore it is not possible to identify the number of payments made by girocheque that are for income support alone.

However, figures relating to the issue and losses of all girocheques issued by the Benefits Agency are available and are detailed below.

	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Issues millions	30·844	34·484	34·470	36·190	27·863
Losses	84,901	89,176	83,849	86,004	135,546
Losses (Per cent.)	0·275	0·259	0·243	0·283	0·490
No missing/ not cashed or traced	6,100	3,855	9,290	12,078	36,641

The Employment Service acts as our agent in the provision of girocheques to those who are unemployed and claiming Income Support; the above figures relate only to girocheques issued by the Benefits Agency.

I hope that you find this reply helpful.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what rules he proposes to apply for the award of disability premium for people on income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit, following the introduction of incapacity benefit in 1995.

Mr. Burt: The disability premium provides extra help in income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit for long-term sick and disabled people.

For those claiming these benefits as long-term sick the rules for the disability premium will be changed from April 1995 to reflect the incapacity benefit changes announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 1 December 1993. The new long-term incapacity benefit will act as a passport to the disability premium. Severe disablement allowance will continue to bring entitlement to the disability premium. For those who have no other means of entitlement, the period of incapacity needed to qualify will increase from 28 to 52 weeks and the new definition of work and assessment of incapacity will apply.

Disability living allowance, attendance allowance and mobility supplement are other passporting benefits to the disability premium, which can be awarded on other grounds—for instance, if the person is registered blind. These routes to the disability premium will not be affected by the incapacity benefit changes.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

International Military Services Ltd.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General what services he or his predecessors have performed under the Treasury Solicitor Act 1876 on behalf of International Military Services Ltd.

The Attorney-General: I know of none.

Treasury Solicitors' Department

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the size, grades and costs of the staff of the Treasury Solicitors' Department in each of the last three years ending on 31 March and the current figures for numbers and grades.

The Attorney-General: The following table sets out the size and grades of the staff of the Treasury Solicitor's Department in each of the first three years ending on 31 March and the current figures:

Grade	1991 31 March	1992 31 March	1993 31 March	Present
2	1	1	1	1
3	10	9	8	8
4	—	2	3	3
5	38	40	39	40
6	59	64	58	63

AO/AA	69	74	75	75
Support	69	74	78	77
TOTAL	439	465	470	496

The costs of staff of the Treasury Solicitor's Department in each of the last three years ending on 31 March were:

1990-91 £12·559 million[2]
1991-92 £14·088 million
1992-93 £15·073 million

[1]Includes legal officers and senior legal assistants

[2]1990-91 includes notional figure for superannuation of £1·642 million. Superannuation was only charged in cash terms from 1 April 1991.

WALES

Bryn Melyn Home

Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what public funding is provided for the Bryn Melyn home in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I am not aware of any public funding for this private children's home. No funding has been provided by the Department or other agencies for which the Welsh Office has direct responsibility.

School League Tables

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations on school league tables he has received from the Institute of Welsh Affairs; what reply he has sent; and if he will review current policies as a result.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None directly, but the report published by the institute in January, "Towards an educational policy for Wales", makes reference to the publication of school performance information.

Before decisions are taken on the extent of school/college performance information to be published in autumn 1994 there will be consultations with schools, FE colleges, and education interests.

Open-heart Surgery

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the present waiting list for open-heart surgery in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on waiting lists is collected centrally on the basis of specialties recognised by the royal colleges. Open heart surgery is not one of these recognised specialties and hence the information requested is not available. However, at 30 September 1993, the latest date for which information is available, there were 301 people waiting for in-patient treatment in Wales in the specialty of cardiac surgery.

Cardiff BUPA Hospital

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan health authority concerning the provision of University Hospital of Wales staff at the Cardiff BUPA hospital to provide immediate post-operative care for NHS cardiac surgery patients operated on at the BUPA hospital at NHS expense; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan health authority concerning the training of BUPA nursing staff in post-operative cardiac surgery recovery techniques at the University Hospital of Wales; and what remuneration he has arranged for the South Glamorgan health authority for such training activities.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None. It would be for the Health Authority and the University Hospital of Wales to negotiate an appropriate charge for any services provided to private hospitals.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the present numbers who were treated at the BUPA hospital, Pentwyn, Cardiff, for open-heart surgery at the expense of the South Glamorgan health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1992-93, almost 1,000 adult open-heart operations were performed on NHS patients in South Wales, 50 of them under contract with the BUPA hospital in Cardiff. Commissioning authorities are fully funded to secure that level of service.

Fifteen NHS open heart operations on patients from South Glamorgan were carried out at the BUPA hospital in Cardiff in 1992-93.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total number of chairpersons and board members of the training and enterprise councils in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: There are seven chairpersons and 85 board members of the training and enterprise councils in Wales.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the London regional passengers' committee.

Mr. McLoughlin: The members of the London regional passengers committee as at 21 January 1994 are:

Professor Eric C. Midwinter (Chairman)
Mr. David R. Bruck
Mrs. Delia M. Buckle
Mrs. Beverley J. Davies
Mr. Lekh C. Dindayal JP
Mr. Nicholas P. Ellis
Mrs. Stella A. Fowler
Sir Alan Greengross
Mr. Karl T. Gurney
Mr. Michael J. Harris
Mr. I. Haynes
Mr. Andrew J. Holt
Mr. Ernest C. King
Miss Faith C. Lawson
Mr. Stepehen J. A. J. Le Bras
Mr. Laurie Mack
Mrs. Suzanne C. May
Mr. Peter Nichols
Mr. Peter L. Noble
Mrs. Dawn Penso
Mr. John A. K. Phillips

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Committee on Telecommunications for Small Businesses.

Mr. McLoughlin: Appointments to the Advisory Committee on Telecommunications for Small Businesses are the responsibility of the Director General of Telecommunications. However, I understand that the current members are:

Chairman:
Mr. Michael Ashton

Members:
Miss Joy Allan
Mrs. Judith Barden
Mr. Sefton Bennett
Mr. Robert Frenzel
Mr. Patrick Frymann
Mr. Richard Furey
Mr. Michael Jordan
Mr. Sean Mayo
Mrs. Pamela Parker
Mrs. Margaret Seymour
Mr. Michael Taylor

Overseas Visits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the President of the Board of Trade in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: The expenditure incurred by my Department from 11 April 1992 to 31 March 1993 on my domestic travel was £8,745, and on my overseas travel was £5,866. From 1 April 1993 to 8 February 1994 the equivalent figures were £8,727 on my domestic travel and £16,360 on my overseas travel. These figures do not include the cost to my Department of my car. My Department does not allocate budgets for travel by individual Ministers.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total cost paid out to witnesses attending the Scott inquiry under the provisions available under the order 62, r 12(1) of the rules of the Supreme Court, by the costs branch of the Treasury Solicitor's Department; and to whom such expenses have been paid.

Mr. Needham: To date, no expenses have been paid for legal costs to witnesses before the Scott inquiry.

Value Added Tax (Domestic fuel)

Mr. Clelland: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates he has made of the reductions in consumption of domestic fuel resulting from the imposition of value added tax.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has published a range of energy demand projections in "Energy Paper 59", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Those projections showed domestic sector energy demand approximately 6 per cent. higher in 2000 than in 1990. The imposition of VAT on domestic fuels is expected, in the long run, to reduce domestic sector consumption of coal by about 2 per cent. and of electricity and gas by about 4 per cent. This takes no account of the effects of any offsetting measures.

Accounts Services Agency

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the outcome of the review of options for the future of the Accounts Services Agency.

Mr. Eggar: PA Consulting Group has completed its review of the options for the future of the Accounts Services Agency. In parallel, the Department has reviewed the scope for its financial accounting services to be met from the private sector, concluding that all but a small number of the services currently supplied by the agency could be contracted out, with appropriate safeguards.

I have accepted PA's recommendations that:

the proposal for a management-led employee buy-out should be declined, primarily because it was based on the assumption that competitive tendering was unnecessary. Competition is essential to ensure value for money;

the agency should be moved into the private sector by competitive tendering of the services contract; and the contract should be offered with the expectation that the agency's existing staff and assets would be transferred to the successful bidder.

The agency needs the expertise, financial resources, and freedom of the private sector to be able to improve its efficiency and to take full advantage of market opportunities. Strategic contracting out has been chosen as the preferred route to achieve this because it focuses on the service contract to DTI, and it would enable more staff and assets to be transferred to the private sector. Substantially the same outcome would be achieved as if the alternative route of privatisation had been chosen, but at a lower cost and on a shorter time scale.

This course of action will allow the Department to obtain the best value for money in the provision of its financial accounting services. PA estimates that the saving could be 10 to 20 per cent. per annum. Up to 90 permanent staff could transfer to the contractor. This will ensure continuity in the supply of a core service to the Department. The agency will gain access to the expertise and financial resources of the private sector which will give the existing team the freedom to take advantage of market opportunities without the constraints of operating in the public sector. This will result in a better service to all its customers and greater opportunities for its staff than would have been possible if the agency were to have remained in public sector ownership.

Human Genes

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines he has produced for the research councils on the patenting of human genes; what discussions he has had on this subject with his European counterparts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 1 February, Official Report, columns 619-20. This reply makes it clear that the Office of Science and Technology supports the policy of the Medical Research Council in not filing any further patent applications for human DNA sequences of unknown function.

I am very happy to inform the hon. Member that the United States National Institutes of Health and the Medical Research Council have today agreed to withdraw their patent applications for cDNA sequences of unknown utility. The MRC, with the support of the Government, has always argued that these applications should not be granted. I welcome the co-operation between the United Kingdom and the United States on this important issue.

Rover Group

Mr. Eastham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date British Aerospace advised the Minister of its intention to sell Rover to BMW; and on what date the Minister notified the Japanese ambassador of this intention.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 8 February 1994]: British Aerospace advised the Department in confidence of its decision in principle to sell Rover shortly after the BAe board meeting on 27 January and also subsequently, again in confidence, of the final decision shortly after it was made on 29 January. The Government did not notify the Japanese ambassador of BAe's decision.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the block grants and rate support grant allocated to authorities in west Yorkshire for each year since 1983; and if he will list the services covered by the grants.

Mr. Baldry: The available information is set out in the table. The rate support grant was not a service-specific grant and nor is revenue support grant. Both were or are paid to support expenditure which local authorities incur in performing their functions and which but for these grants, and national non-domestic rates from 1 April 1990, would have to be met from local taxes.

Notes:

1. Following the introduction of the community charge system in 1990 the rate support grant was replaced by the revenue support grant.
2. Block grants form part of rate support grant. Block grants ceased to exist following the introduction of the community charge system.
3. West Yorkshire was one of the metropolitan county councils abolished in 1986. Its functions were then passed onto the metropolitan districts, the police, fire and civil defence, and transport authorities.
4. Under the community charge system, 1990-91 to 1992-93, RSG was paid into the collection funds administered by the metropolitan districts. For this reason there were no figures for RSG to the police, fire and transport authorities.
5. Under the council tax system, transport authorities do not receive RSG.

Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 2 February, Official Report, column 799, if Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will publish the monitoring results of the Eskmeals site to which he refers.

Mr. Atkins: The decision to publish the monitoring results of the Eskmeals site is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 2 February, Official Report, column 794, if he will set out the points on THORP raised with him on 16 December 1993 by the ambassador of the Irish Republic.

Mr. Atkins: No. Such communications between the United Kingdom and other Governments are treated in confidence.

Effluent Discharge Charging Scheme

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the revised effluent discharge charging scheme launched by the National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Atkins: The NRA's original scheme of charging for discharges came into effect in July 1991. As promised at that time, we have now reviewed it in the light of experience and on the basis of full consultation. We concluded that, in general, dischargers were satisfied. However, some changes have been made which will result in lower bills for some dischargers, particularly smaller businesses. There will also be an allowance for seasonal discharges which will benefit camping and caravan sites in particular. The NRA's considerable efforts in improving efficiency mean there will be no increase in either the application charge or the annual charge factor for 1994-95. The new arrangements will be introduced on 1 April 1994 and run until 31 March 1999.

Tower Block Properties

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what study his Department has made of the extent to which estate agencies are refusing to deal with properties which are situated above the fifth floor in tower blocks bought under the right-to-buy legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: None. The Department has no evidence to suggest this is a widespread problem. Research has been commissioned into the scale and range of problems leaseholders of council flats have with service charges and resale of their dwellings. Preliminary data are expected shortly.

Owner Occupation

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of homes in the United Kingdom were owner-occupied in each year since 1987.

Sir George Young: Estimates by type of tenure of the stock of dwellings in the United Kingdom appear in "Housing and Construction Statistics, Great Britain". Figures of owner-occupied dwellings expressed as a percentage of total dwelling stock are shown in table 9.3 of the 1982-92 annual edition for each year from 1987 to 1992.

A copy of this publication is in the Library.

Forestry

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps the Government have taken to implement the recommendations made in the first report of the Select Committee on the Environment of Session 1992-93, on forestry and the environment—HC, 1992-93, No. 257.

Mr. Atkins: The Government have already implemented several of the Select Committee's recommendations, including the publication on 25 January of our response to the Rio forest principles, "Sustainable Forestry: The UK Programme". Other matters are under consideration. We will be providing the Select Committee with a follow-up report before the Whitsun recess.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, how much public money was paid to private landowners in the last financial year as an inducement not to plant conifers; what were the highest sums of money that were paid to landlords for not planting conifers; and to whom these sums were paid.

Mr. Atkins: Within the last financial year no new management agreements which compensate landowners for not planting conifers have been made in England by English Nature. I will write to the hon. Member with details of any such payments made under existing management agreements.

South Crofty Tin Mine

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment has been made of the costs of any closure of the South Crofty tin mine in Cornwall on the environment, in particular the financial impact on the National Rivers Authority operation at Wheal Jane; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The NRA does not expect any additional cost to its operations at Wheal Jane but, as contingency planning, is investigating what might need to be done to avoid pollution were South Crofty to close.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated net aggregate expenditure of (a) county councils and (b) district councils in the current financial year.

Mr. Baldry: County councils' and shire districts' budgeted net revenue expenditure for 1993-94 is £18,025 million and £3,202 million respectively.

Gloucester Grove Estate

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will meet a deputation of tenants from Gloucester Grove estate in Southwark;

(2) if he will visit Gloucester Grove housing estate;

(3) if he will make a statement about the estates action programme improvement of the Gloucester Grove estate in Southwark;

(4) if he will make a statement about phase 7 improvements to Gloucester Grove housing estate in Southwark;

(5) how many of the blocks in the Gloucester Grove housing estate remain to be improved; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Estate action improvements have been in progress on the Gloucester Grove estate since 1986-87. The Government have already made available £8·6 million of resources and have earmarked a further £8·85 million for phases 5 and 6 which are currently on site. These phases will be completed in 1996-97 and will complete the improvement of 10 blocks in total.

The London borough of Southwark submitted a bid for a further eight blocks to be included in the 1994-95 estate action programme. Competition for resources was extremely tight, with 47 bids for support in London alone, and it was not possible to support that bid this year.

At the end of phase 6, 19 blocks will remain unimproved. Future proposals for these blocks will form part of Southwark's proposed strategy for five council estates in the Peckham area. I hope that the proposed partnership between the borough, the private sector and housing associations will produce some imaginative proposals for improvements and a mixture of tenures on Gloucester Grove and the other estates.

I have visited Southwark estates on a number of occasions in recent years and spoke to tenants from Gloucester Grove at Southwark's housing investment programme presentation in October 1992. Efforts are now best directed towards drawing up realistic proposals within Southwark's strategy for the area.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Rendell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recommendations were put forward with regard to Southport by the Local Government Commission prior to the beginning of the Lancashire review.

Mr. Baldry: It was the Local Government Boundary Commission, abolished in October 1992 and the Local Government Commission's predecessor, which conducted a review of the boundaries of Sefton metropolitan borough with West Lancashire and Wirral. In its final report, submitted in June 1992, report No. 664, it recommended only minor boundary changes. The Secretary of State accepted these recommendations and an order was made on 1 May 1993, with the boundary changes taking effect from 1 April 1994—SI 1206/93.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with representatives of Liverpool city council in respect of its standard spending assessment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Planning met a delegation from Liverpool city council, on 17 January, to discuss Liverpool's proposed standard spending assessment for 1994-95.

Shire Counties (Expenditure)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the standard spending assessment and the expenditure levels for each shire county for each of the last eight years, the current year and his proposals for 1994-95; and if he will set out the percentage change in each case (a) between each year and (b) over the full range of years for which figures are available.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 3 February 1994]: I have placed in the Library tables showing: standard spending assessments for the years 1990-91 to 1994-95; grant-related expenditure assessments for the years 1985-86 to 1989-90; and equivalent expenditure figures for the years 1985-86 to 1993-94 for each shire county. Since comparisons cannot be made between GREs and SSAs, nor between equivalent expenditures under the two regimes, the percentage changess are given between each year, between 1985-86 and 1989-90, and between 1990-91 and 1994-95.

Touche Ross

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department or any agencies for which he is responsible has engaged the services of the firm Touche Ross or any of its partners since 1 July 1993.

Mr. Baldry holding answer 3 February 1994]: The Department of the Environment has engaged the services of Touche Ross since 1 July 1993 to a total value of £178,000.

EDUCATION

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what provision has been made for the public accountability of further education colleges incorporated under the provisions of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: The framework for the public accountability of colleges in the further education sector is set by the financial memorandum between the Department and the Further Education Funding Council, and the financial memoranda between the council and colleges. The financial memorandum between the Department and the council makes it clear that it is part of the duty of the chief officer of the council, as accounting officer, to satisfy himself that further education colleges have appropriate arrangements for financial management and accounting.

Under the financial memoranda between the council and colleges, colleges are required to provide the council with audited accounts for each financial year. Each governing body must ensure that its college has a sound system of internal control and must appoint an audit committee and internal audit service for the college. The council may undertake examination of colleges' internal financial and management controls. Colleges' books and records are open to inspection by the council and by the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Office for Standards in Education

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in London, Ofsted expects to inspect in the academic year 1993-94.

Mr. Robin Squire: The arrangements for inspecting schools under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 are a matter for Ofsted.

I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

Environmental Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what further guidance will be given on schools' environmental management practices as indicated in the sustainable development strategy.

Mr. Robin Squire: The guidance promised in the United Kingdom strategy on sustainable development will be published later this year.

It will be in the form of a simple environmental audit scheme which the schools can carry out themselves to evaluate and improve the environmental impact of their school buildings.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what plans he has for schools to have a policy for environmental education guaranteeing provision and continuity between different subject areas of the curriculum;

(2) if he will make it his policy to encourage all schools to appoint a co-ordinator for environmental education;

(3) if he will publish guidance to advise schools of good practice in teaching about care for the environment;

(4) what plans he has for providing guidance to schools on delivering environmental education on biodiversity and sustainable development;

(5) what plans he has to provide grants to voluntary bodies to produce teaching resources and facilities that promote the concept of sustainability declared at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Mr. Robin Squire: Provided that the statutory requirements are met, it is for the individual school to determine the character of its curriculum, its organisation and the mode of its delivery, taking account of any relevant information or advice produced by the Office for Standards in Education. Where environmental education is addressed through the statutory subjects of the national curriculum, content and continuity will be specified within the statutory documents. My right hon. Friend is giving priority to the revision of these documents and has no plans to publish additional guidance for schools on these matters. He does not publish curriculum resources and has no plans to fund voluntary or other bodies to do so. He prefers to provide specific grant to support expenditure by schools on books, materials and equipment or teacher training, as they see fit to develop national curriculum provision.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to ensure that within the school's inspection framework the responsibility of schools for raising awareness and understanding of the environment and conservation issues is subject to inspection and comment.

Mr. Robin Squire: Under the Education (Schools) Act 1992, registered inspectors conducting inspection of schools must report on the quality of education and standards achieved in schools in accordance with Ofsted's pubished framework for inspection.

I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

Funding Levels (Disputes)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what mechanisms exist to resolve any dispute or disagreements between the Further Education Funding Council and individual colleges, including disputes over levels of funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: In the first instance, my right hon. Friend would expect a college to pursue its concerns with the Further Education Funding Council; in the last resort it could complain to the Secretary of State.

If the Secretary of State is satisfied that the Further Education Funding Council has failed to discharge its duties under the Education Acts, he may issue a direction to the council under section 57 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992. If he is satisfied that the council is exercising its functions unreasonably, he may issue a direction under section 68 of the Education Act 1944, as applied by paragraph 9 of schedule 8 to the Further and Higher Education Act 1992. The Further and Higher Education Act 1992 also gives the Secretary of State power to issue general or special directions to the council. Special directions may, in particular, relate to the provision of financial support by the council in respect of activities carried on by a particular institution. The Secretary of State would expect to exercise this power only in very exceptional circumstances.

Further Education

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his policy on the publication of names and addresses of chairpersons and members of further eduction colleges incorporated under the provisions of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: Under the charter for further education, colleges are expected to publish the names of governors and how to contact them, which would normally be through the college. There is no expectation that governors' private addresses should be published.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what provisions exist for the independent monitoring of the financial situation of further education colleges incorporated under the provisions of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: Independent monitoring of the financial position of colleges in the further education sector is secured through the requirement in the financial memoranda between the Further Education Funding Council and colleges for the appointment of an audit committee, and also through the requirement on colleges to appoint external auditors. In addition, under section 53 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, colleges' accounts are open to inspection by the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many official engagements have been carried out in the last year by each Education Minister (a) in total, (b) at grant-maintained schools and (c) at local education authority schools.

Mr. Patten: The figures requested are as follows:

	[1]Total number of official visits	Of which: Visits to schools
		GM Schools	LEA Schools
Secretary of State	76	3	21
Baroness Blatch	52	17	12
Mr. Forth	84	1	32
Mr. Squire	73	15	11
Mr. Boswell	136	2	9
TOTAL	421	38	85

[1] The figures cover all Ministers' official engagements, including school visits, conferences, receptions, and other speaking engagements, such as those at official lunches and dinners.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Foreign Visitors to London

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what advice he will seek from the Chief Secretary to the Treasury about encouraging foreign visitors to London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: None. It is not for the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to advise on such matters of policy.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the board of the Royal Armouries.

Mr. Sproat: The current members of the Royal Armouries board of trustees is as follows:

Lord Eden of Winton (Chairman)
Rufus Bond-Gunning
David Chandler
Lady Cooksey
Richard Fortin
John Hale
Robert Hardy
Geoffrey Lewis
The hon. Francis Plowden
Field Marshall Sir John Stanier
The Duke of Wellington

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the Broadcasting Standards Council.

Mr. Brooke: The current members of the Broadcasting Standards Council are:

Lady Howe (Chairman)
Dame Jocelyn Barrow OBE
Ms Sally O'Sullivan
Mrs. Rhiannon Bevan

National Lottery

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if companies and consortia which plan to devote their profits to charitable causes will be eligible for consideration when he decides where to award the contract, or contracts, to manage the national lottery.

Mr. Sproat: The responsibility for licensing a body corporate to operate the national lottery lies with the director general, who will consider all applications.

DEFENCE

Trident

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Trident D5 missile that the United Kingdom is purchasing from the United States of America has been flight-tested with more than eight re-entry vehicles.

Mr. Aitken: Yes.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) of 16 December, Official Report, column 903, on test firing, and the hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Macdonald) of 18 January, Official Report, column 505, on a processing margin, what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of the maximum number of Trident missiles to be purchased from the United States; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: We plan to purchase sufficient Trident missiles from the United States to maintain a minimum nuclear deterrent well into the next century. It is not our policy to comment on the total number of missiles to be purchased.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the technical maximum number of warheads that the United Kingdom's Trident submarines will be capable of deploying.

Mr. Aitken: Each United Kingdom Trident submarine will be technically capable of carrying a maximum of 192 warheads. However, we have announced that each Trident submarine will deploy with no more than 96 warheads and may carry a significantly lower number.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications of a cut-off in military fissile material production for (a) the planned Trident deployment and (b) the production of other future United Kingdom nuclear weapons systems.

Mr. Aitken: We hope to be able to work towards a multilateral and verifiable cut-off in the production of fissile material for explosive purposes which has potential value for non-proliferation efforts. It would be premature to comment on the implications for the United Kingdom until the details of such a cut-off have been agreed.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the United Kingdom has the capability to recycle military fissile material, currently deployed in its strategic nuclear weapons and arising from the dismantlement of some of its tactical nuclear weapons, for use in its Trident missiles.

Mr. Aitken: Yes. The United Kingdom has the facilities for, and extensive experience in, the dismantling of redundant nuclear wapons and in the recycling of the fissile material.

Defence Staff

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a table showing the number, location, service and rank of defence and service attaché and defence adviser posts in foreign and Commonwealth countries as of (a) April 1990 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available together with similar figures for dedicated support staff; if he will publish similar figures for the British defence staff in the United States of America; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Tables showing the number, location, service and rank of defence and service attaché, defence adviser posts and dedicated support staff in foreign and Commonwealth countries as of 1 April 1990, table 1, and 1 February 1994, table 2, and British defence staff in the United States of America as of April 1990 and January 1994, tables 3 and 4, are being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the financial arrangements for funding defence and service attachés and defence advisers and their support staff in foreign and Commonwealth countries.

Mr. Hanley: Funding of accredited service attachés, defence advisers and dedicated support staff is undertaken by the Ministry of Defence and Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The Ministry of Defence funds pay and allowances as well as necessary equipment including official transport. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office provides accommodation, office facilities, communications and security for Ministry of Defence personnel in post.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which appointments since 1979 to public bodies or posts for which he is responsible have included candidates nominated by the Chief Whip's Office; if any nominees by this source have been appointed; and if he will give details.

Mr. Hanley: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

Royal Small Arms Factory, Enfield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), of 20 January, Official Report, column 825, if he will set out the reason why the information requested on arms manufacture at the royal arms factory, Enfield is not available from official sources.

Mr. Aitken: When the royal ordnance factories were incorporated in 1985, all records were retained by Royal Ordnance plc, except those that were returned to the Ministry of Defence for preservation as public records. The returned files do not contain the information requested by the hon. Member for South Shields.

Surplus Equipment

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the normal procedure for the sale of surplus or obsolescent equipment.

Mr. Aitken: My Department arranges sales of surplus equipment through Government-to-Government and Government-to-industry contracts, competitive tenders, public auctions and private treaty sales. These take into account the type and condition of the equipment and the available market opportunities.

Jet Provost Trainers

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Jet Provost trainers are to be sold in the current financial year.

Mr. Aitken: A total of 62 Jet Provosts will be sold in the current financial year.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to whom and under what procedure Jet Provost trainers have been sold; how many have been sold; and what financial gain resulted to Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Aitken: Since April 1990, 115 Jet Provost aircraft have been sold to over 20 different customers, by competitive tender, public auction and private treaty arrangements. Receipts have totalled some £600,000.

Arms Sales

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether contingent liabilities exist for the United Kingdom Government in sales of arms or arms-related sales by the Government, its agents, including DESO or IMS Ltd., or as part of Government-to-Government arms deals.

Mr. Aitken: Yes. The supplementary statement to the Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts 1992-93, Cm 52, contains information on contingent liabilities.

Arms Sales

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which countries have been the top 20 buyers of British arms since 1979.

Mr. Aitken: Details of purchasers of British defence equipment are given in table 1.11 of the United Kingdom Defence Statistics. A copy of the 1993 edition has been placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Arms Control Unit

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role and function of the defence arms control unit.

Mr. Hanley: The main function of the defence arms control unit, now known as the proliferation and arms control secretariat, is to co-ordinate and provide advice on defence policy aspects of United Kingdom's involvement in non-proliferation, arms control and disarmament negotiations.

Exercise Arctic Express

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expected cost of participation of British forces in exercise Arctic Express.

Mr. Hanley: The expected cost to the United Kingdom for exercise Arctic Express will be some £2,950,000.

NATO will, however, refund part of the cost of air transport movement, reducing the final cost to a figure of some £2,600,000.

Sarajevo

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he is prepared to offer mortar-locating radar and other detection equipment to United Nations forces deployed in Sarajevo; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: It is for the United Nations to determine the equipment needs of their forces in the former Yugoslavia. Any United Nations request for additional equipments would be given due consideration.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the use of air power to protect the civilians of Sarajevo in accordance with United Nations resolutions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The North Atlantic Council's decision of 9 February authorised the use of air strikes in close co-ordination with the United Nations Secretary-General, if heavy weapons are not withdrawn from around Sarajevo or placed under UNPROFOR's control within 10 days. Air strikes can be launched with immediate effect, at the request of the United Nations, against heavy weapons responsible for any further attacks on civilian targets in the city.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the establishment of an effective United Nations safe area in and around Sarajevo; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: United Nations Security Council resolution 836 established six safe areas in Bosnia, including Sarajevo. NATO has called on the parties to lift the siege of Sarajevo and made clear the alliance's readiness to carry out air strikes if heavy weapons are not withdrawn or placed under United Nations control within 10 days. The Government fully support the efforts of NATO and the United Nations.

Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United Nations counterparts about the deployment of additional forces in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, has had many discussions, including on former Yugoslavia issues, with his counterparts from various United Nations member nations. Additional Dutch, Malaysian and Pakistani forces are currently deploying to Bosnia following a request from the United Nations Secretary-General last year for troops to implement United Nations Security Council resolution 836, which established six safe areas.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the nature and extent of the discussions he has had with his NATO counterparts about the deployment of additional forces in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence is in regular contact with his NATO counterparts about all aspects of our military deployments in former Yugoslavia. The deployment of additional personnel to UNPROFOR in Bosnia is, however, a matter for the United Nations.

Search and Rescue Helicopters

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a full breakdown of the total annual support costs for helicopter search and rescue operations including support manpower costs at RAF Brawdy in (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94.

Mr. Hanley: I will write to the hon. Member.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Alcoholic Beverages

Mr. Sims: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will take steps in any EC Council discussions concerning the rules for listing ingredients and additives in alcoholic beverages to ensure consistent and simultaneous treatment for beer, wines and spirits.

Mr. Jack: Yes. During negotiations on the European Commission's proposal for ingredients listing of alcoholic drinks the United Kingdom will seek to ensure that any measures which are eventually adopted apply consistently and simultaneously to the different product sectors.

Milk Marque

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations she has received in favour of the deferral of the vesting date of Milk Marque from April to November 1994; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: On 9 February the Milk Marketing Board submitted amendments to its reorganisation scheme. These provide, inter alia, for a vesting day of 1 November 1994. We shall be conducting a formal consultation on the scheme as amended.

Animal Diseases (Monitoring)

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement about the future of the computer monitoring programme for the spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy, salmonella and other animal diseases at the Central Veterinary Laboratory.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Responsibility for this matter is delegated to the Central Veterinary Laboratory and I have asked the chief executive to reply to the hon. Gentleman direct.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Paul Tyler, dated 11 February 1994:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the computer monitoring programme operated at CVL for the spread of BSE, Salmonella and other animal diseases.

CVL has built excellent systems for the monitoring of a range of animal diseases including those you mention. The systems have produced accurate and up-to-date figures for some years and our expert team will continue to maintain and refine the systems for as long as they are required.

SCOTLAND

NHS Trusts

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if chairmen and directors of trusts are required to declare an interest when any relevant business is being considered and withdrawn from further consideration of such business.

Mr. Stewart: Yes.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ascertain whether all trust executive and non-executive directors have been provided with the training necessary for them to have an adequate appreciation of the control mechanisms and rebating arrangements for financial matters.

Mr. Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 28 January 1994, Official Report, column 461.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has given to non-executive directors of trusts on their powers to act independently where they are in disagreement with chairmen and executive directors.

Mr. Stewart: Each trust board is required to have an audit committee, the composition of which includes non-executive directors but not the chairman or executive directors, and with a prescribed remit.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if all board members of NHS trusts have been required to declare any interest that may be relevant before he appoints them; and if such interests are made known to the other members of the board to which they were appointed.

Mr. Stewart: Such information is not currently sought from trust board members prior to their appointment but the position is under review. Any trust director who has an interest in a contract or other matter at a trust board meeting is required by regulations to disclose that interest and not to take part in consideration or discussion of it.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has given to NHS trusts on the exercise of financial control.

Mr. Stewart: In addition to the training provision for their directors referred to in my reply to the hon. Member on 28 January 1994, Official Report, column 461, NHS trusts in Scotland are issued with a financial manual "NHS Trusts: Guidance for Financial Managers" which includes guidance on financial controls.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each non-executive member he has appointed to the board of an NHS trust (a) directorships, including non-executive directorships, held in private companies or plcs, (b) ownership or part ownership of private companies, businesses or consultancies likely or possibly seeking to do business with the NHS, (c) majority or controlling shareholdings in a charity or voluntary body in the field of health care, social services or housing and (d) any material connection with a voluntary or other body contracting for services with NHS organisations.

Mr. Stewart: Such information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has provided for chairmen of trusts on retaining the independence of their chief executives.

Mr. Stewart: No specific guidance has been issued but the roles and relationships of chairmen and chief executives are covered in the induction courses arranged centrally for new trust chairmen and in support provided locally by the management development group.

Pollution Control

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library copies of the minutes of the Scottish pollution control co-ordinating committee since 1990.

Sir Hector Monro: The Scottish pollution control co-ordinating committee is a sub-group of the Royal Environmental Health Institute of Scotland, which officials of the Scottish Office normally attend. Its purpose is to promote the consistent application of district and islands' pollution control functions throughout Scotland and offer a forum for the exchange of information between local authority and Government officials.

I have arranged with REHIS for copies of the committee's minutes since its inception in June 1992 to be placed in the Library.

Glass Recycling

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has received from local authorities in Scotland regarding the current status of glass recycling.

Sir Hector Monro: Forty-eight Scottish local authorities have submitted draft recycling plans which give details of their current arrangements for collecting glass for recycling and of their plans for future glass collection. In addition, representations giving information about the impact of recent changes in prices paid for glass cullet have been made on behalf of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, Argyle and Bute district council, Inverness district council and Cumnock and Doon Valley district council.

Forestry Commission

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many submissions have now been received by the review group considering the future of the Forestry Commission; and how many of those submissions addressing the question of privatisation of the commission were opposed.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 10 February 1994]: Over 3,500 individuals and organisations have sent representations both to the forestry review group and to Ministers, about the work currently being carried out by the group. A large majority of these submissions which addressed the question of privatisation were opposed to it, with many referring to concerns about the implications for access, environmental considerations and timber production. All representations are being taken into account by the group as it continues its work.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list where cattle infected with BSE have been located in Scotland, the species involved, the number involved in each incident and the date on which each case was discovered; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The information up to 31 December 1993 is given in the following table. This shows confirmed cases of BSE by year of report, broken down by breed. Cross breeds have been listed under the main breed.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of the public appointments for which he is responsible require advance notice to and consultation with the Chief Whip's Office; and which appointments made since 1979 have been so notified and consulted upon.

Mr. Lang: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Government to answer parliamentary questions about discussions and consultations between Departments and offices of Government relating to public appointments.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Remand Centres

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a breakdown by race, on the most convenient date, of the inmates held in the remand centres at Featherstone, Cardiff, Dorchester, Exeter, Feltham, Glen Parva, Gloucester, Wigan, Lancaster, Durham, Doncaster, Northallerton, Norwich, Reading, Rochester, Market Drayton, Swansea and Milton Keynes.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Diane Abbott, dated 11 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking if he will give a breakdown by race, on the most convenient date, of the inmates held in the remand centres at Featherstone, Cardiff, Dorchester, Exeter, Feltham, Glen Parva, Gloucester, Wigan, Lancaster, Durham, Doncaster, Northallerton, Norwich, Reading, Rochester, Market Drayton, Swansea and Milton Keynes.

The readily available information is for 30 June 1992 and is given in the attached table. Some of the Prison Service establishments listed in the Question were not operating as remand centres on that date. The breakdown given is in terms of the ethnic classification used at the time. A new ethnic coding was introduced in prisons from 1 October 1992.

Brixton Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the reason for the recent trawl at Her Majesty's prison Brixton for staff; and how many prison staff had been subjected to compulsory transfers from Brixton in 1993.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 11 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question concerning the reason for the recent trawl at Brixton prison for staff, and how many prison staff had been subjected to compulsory transfers from Brixton in 1993.

Following an increased demand for staff in the north of England, a number of staff took the opportunity to transfer there from Brixton. Subsequently, a national trawl was held to replace some of the staff at Brixton.

Prison officers are mobile grades and all permanent transfers are "compulsory". Where practicable the wishes of staff are taken into account. If this is not possible staff are issued with a compulsory transfer notice against which they can appeal.

In 1993, 26 officers were issued with compulsory notices in Brixton. 19 of these appealed and the compulsory notices were subsequently withdrawn. Seven did not appeal and were subsequently transferred to Belmarsh.

Police on the Beat

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had from (a) hon. Members, (b) chief constables and (c) chairmen or members of police authorities, asserting that police beat cover has been reduced in their areas since 1992; and if he will make a statement on the measures he is taking to ensure that any increase in the number of police officers is reflected by more police actually on the beat.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Views about policing levels and beat cover feature regularly in the numerous representations and correspondence which we receive on the general subject of policing. Information in the form requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Current initiatives designed to put more officers on the beat include reducing paperwork, civilianisation and reorganising management structures. One of the key objectives set for the service is to provide high visibility policing so as to reassure the public.

Wymott Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners at Her Majesty's prison Wymott have been charged for the riot and destruction of the prison; and what has been the range of punishments provided.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 11 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many prisoners at Her Majesty's Prison Wymott have been charged for the riot and destruction of the prison; and what has been the range of punishments provided.

Lancashire Constabulary are still continuing their investigation into the disturbance. They have not yet charged any individual person, but he result of their inquiries should be known soon, together with any decision to lay charges.

As a result of the internal Prison Service investigation into the disturbance, fourteen prisoners were charged with an overall total of 24 offences under Prison Rules. Three of these prisoners were found guilty of an overall total of four offences and the individual level of punishments awarded in these cases ranged from 7 to 28 days added to their sentences. One prisoner was found not guilty of the charges against him. Charges against the remaining ten prisoners have at this stage been adjourned pending the outcome of the police investigation or other internal Prison Service inquiries.

Buggery

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions over the past decade any male under the age of 21 years has been (a) prosecuted or (b) prosecuted and convicted for the offence of buggery.

Mr. Maclean: Information for 1982 to 1992 is given in the table.

Youth Custody

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year since 1989, (a) the average age and (b) the average length of sentence of the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences, who have been reclassified from young offender to adult status prior to reaching 21 years of age.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. William Etherington, dated 11 February 1994:

RECLASSIFICATION OF YOUNG OFFENDERS

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will list for each year since 1989 the total number of young people serving youth custody sentences who have been reclassified from young offender to adult status before reaching 21 years of age.

The information requested is not available. The only information is for the number of people in the prison population at a particular date who had previously been reclassified. Provisional information for 30 June 1993 shows that about 90 young offenders were recorded centrally as being reclassified as adults in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales before reaching 21 years of age.

Paedophiles

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for legislation to make it possible to prosecute British nationals who commit paedophilic acts overseas when they return to Britain.

Mr. Maclean: The Government deplore sexual offences against children wherever they occur. Our own law against such abuse is rightly severe. However, our courts' jurisdiction is territorially based rather than nationally based and we have no plans to extend their jurisdiction over paedophile offences committed by British citizens abroad. We believe that such jurisdiction would be largely unenforceable in practice and that where such offences have been committed abroad it is right for the country concerned to enforce its own law.

Unlike some countries which do claim a wide extra-territorial criminal jurisdiction over their nationals, the United Kingdom is willing to extradite its own nationals to stand trial for these offences abroad, subject to the usual safeguards. We are also willing to give legal assistance to other countries under the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the police arbitration tribunal.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The police arbitration tribunal comprises a chairman and two members. Sir John Wood CBE is the chairman and Mr. G. L. Dennis and Mr. M. J. M. Clarke are the two members.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the police negotiating board.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Professor L. C. Hunter is the appointed independent chairman to the police negotiating board. The deputy chairmen are Mr. T. Carlile and Mr. J. F. L. Pease-Watkin.

The constitution of the police negotiating board stipulates that the board shall consist of an official side and a staff side. It is for those authorities and bodies to decide who should represent them on the board. The current membership is as follows:

Prisons (Drug Abuse)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research the Home Office has undertaken to determine the degree to which alcohol and illicit drug abuse is taking place in prisons; what change the figures represent on previous records; and what steps he has taken recently, or intends to take, in order to combat such abuse.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Frank Field, dated 11 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the research which has been undertaken to determine the degree to which alcohol and illicit drug abuse is taking place in prisons; what change the figures represent on previous records; and what steps he has taken recently or intends to take in order to combat such abuse.

It is extremely difficult to establish with any satisfactory degree of certainty the degree to which alcohol and illicit drug abuse is taking place in prisons. This is because prisoners are understandably reluctant to admit to contravening prison rules. Most research has therefore focused on the use of alcohol and drugs by prisoners before they were imprisoned. A survey of 1,751 men serving a prison sentence (Maden, Swinton and Gunn, British Journal of Addiction 1992) showed that in 1988-89 43 per cent. of male sentenced prisoners had used drugs in the six months before their arrest. In the report "Mentally Disorderded Offenders" which was produced for the Prison Service by the same authors found alcohol and drug dependency (diagnosed on the basis of daily use during the six month period prior to their offence) as in the table below. The figures do not include cannabis users.

	Adult males	Young offenders	Females
Sample size	1,365	404	273
Alcohol (per cent.)	8·6	8·7	4·4
Drugs (per cent.)	10·1	6·2	24·2

Research is currently being conducted for the Prison Service by the Drugs Addiction Unit at the Institute of Psychiatry to establish risk behaviour for HIV in prisons. This includes questions about current drug use which, if a satisfactory response rate is achieved, should provide better information on illicit drug use.

The availability and use of drugs in our prisons is a matter of concern. The Government will be bringing forward a clause for inclusion in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill to allow the Prison Service to test prisoners for drug misuse. In addition to this the Prison Service is reviewing existing policy relating to drugs and is developing a Drug Strategy which will address ways of reducing the supply of drugs, of reducing demand (by means of improved indentification and treatment for drug misusers) and improved support for prisoners who have become drug free in prison on their return to the community.

Race Relations

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration has been given to the taking of legal action under the Race Relations Acts against the Hizb ut Tahrir organisation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 10 February 1994]: There is no legal action under the Race Relations Act 1976 which requires the involvement of the Attorney-General. Offences of incitement to racial hatred are covered by part III of the Public Order Act 1986 for which the Attorney-General's consent is required before a case can proceed.

TRANSPORT

Operator Licensing

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the local authorities that responded to his consultation document on deregulation of operator licensing and those that opposed the proposals.

Mr. Key: The 46 local authorities which responded to our consultation document are listed in the table. We made a number of proposals. The reaction to them was varied.

1. Three Rivers District Council, Herts
2. Stockton-on-Tees Borough Council
3. Blaenau Borough Council, Gwent

HEALTH

Health Authority Managers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many managers were in post in each health authority and health trust in England in 1990-91 and 1992-93; and what was the total cost in each year.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information available will be placed in the Library. The figures need to be treated with considerable caution. The number of managers has been deliberately increased since the mid-1980s—not just since the reforms—because the service was previously undermanaged. Much of the increase shown in the table, however, arises from the reclassification of existing staff, including many senior nurses, as managers.

Children (Birth Defects)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in the northern region have been born with a defective hand in each year since 1989 and if she will also list the name of the village or town of each child.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

The numbers of children born with a defective hand [1] (ICDs 755.0, 755.1, 755.2, 755.4, 755.5, 755.8, 755.9) notified to OPCS in each year 1989 to 1992 for the Northern Regional Health Authority and individual district health authorities

The data are presented according to districts in order to protect the confidentiality of individuals.

We have great sympathy for the parents of children who are born with limb defects. It is unfortunate that in the present state of scientific knowledge the causes of most defects of this kind are not known. We are aware of the need for a prompt and thorough investigation into the reports of unexpectedly high occurrences of birth defects.

The investigation of recently suspected or reported clusters of limb reduction defects has been initiated by district health authorities, through directors of public health, who are taking expert advice, in concert with the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. For the last 30 years OPCS has maintained a national monitoring system for collecting data about malformations among newborn babies.

OPCS is currently conducting a national analysis of limb reduction defects to scrutinise the geographical pattern. This should be completed within a few weeks. The Department, with OPCS, is in discussion with the environmental epidemiology unit, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, which also incorporates the small area statistics unit, to identify and make provision for the additional expertise that may be required.

The results of these investigations will be considered carefully and decisions about any further action that might be necessary will be made as quickly as possible.

Hospital Staff (Redundancies)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of redundancies among national health service hospital staff (a) by grade and (b) by reason for each year since 1988-89.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is not available centrally.

Psychiatric Care

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory admissions to psychiatric hospital took place in each year since 1979.

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is shown in the table.

Notes:

Figures shown for 1979-86 were collected by the mental health enquiry from all mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and units and include figures from special hospitals and private mental nursing homes. These were based on calendar years. From 1987-88, the figures refer to financial year and were collected on forms KH15—from all NHS facilities—and KO37—from private nursing homes—and also directly from the Special Hospitals Service Authority.

Mental Health Budget

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total mental health budget in each year since 1979.

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The table shows the estimated total hospital and community health services expenditure in cash and constant price terms in England on mentally ill people for each year from 1978-79 to 1991-92, the latest year for which this information is available.

Expenditure on mentally ill people in hospital and community health services (England)[1]

(£) million

Year	Cash	1991-92 Prices[2]
1978-79	490	1,311
1979-80	593	1,359
1980-81	775	1,501

Year	Cash	1991-92 Prices[2]
1981-82	860	1,519
1982-83	916	1,511
1983-84	965	1,521
1984-85	1,029	1,544
1985-86	1,077	1,531
1986-87	1,149	1,587
1987-88	1,302	1,707
1988-89	1,557	1,913[3]
1989-90	1,662	1,910[3]
1990-91	1,785	1,898[3]
1991-92	2,085	2,085[4]

[1] Figures include direct patient treatment costs and indirect costs such as hospital administration.
[2] After allowing for general inflation.
[3] Figures from 1988-89 include expenditure on mental illness in and out-patients, day patients and community mental illness nursing. Prior to 1988-89, expenditure on community mental illness nursing was not separately identified, and was included with district nursing services.
[4] Figures are not comparable with earlier years due to significant changes to accounting policies, following the introduction of the internal market.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the extent of over or under-spending on general practitioner fundholder budgets for 1992-93 in each family health services authority and national health service region; and what sums were retained or returned by general practitioner fundholders in each case.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regional level information will not be available until all fundholder accounts have been audited and local arrangements for the voluntary return of savings have been completed. Local information, at family health services authority level, is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholding practices there are in the Lewisham, Lambeth and Southwark FHSA; and if she will list them with the amount of financial surplus for each practice for 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Austin-Walker) on 3 February at column 856.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average reimbursement to general practitioners for salaries for all staff in each year since 1990-91 excluding the general practitioner fundholding management allowance.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 21 January at column 888.

Prescription Pricing Authority

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many whole-time equivalent staff were employed by the Prescription Pricing Authority in each year since 1990; and what were the locations of their employment;

(2) whether any part of the activities of the Prescription Pricing Authority is to be subjected to market testing in 1994-95;

(3) what plans she has to change the structure, organisation or functions of the Prescription Pricing Authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers of whole-time equivalent staff employed by the Prescription Pricing Authority at each location are:

	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94
Newcastle upon Tyne	738·7	742·0	747·8	[1]1071·1
Durham	177·1	170·1	165·5	161·8
Wakefield	163·4	160·4	168·6	165·1
Preston	90·9	89·3	90·8	88·0
Liverpool	119·1	123·7	126·8	127·9
Sheffield	126·0	126·0	128·2	128·5
Manchester	122·2	125·3	130·5	128·2
West Bromwich	123·3	160·5	130·5	132·9
Bolton	164·6	164·7	188·7	195·2
TOTAL	1,825·3	1,862·0	1,877·4	[1]2,198·7

[1] Includes 314·5 seconded Department of Social Security whole-time equivalent staff formerly employed in the health benefits unit—which became part of the Prescription Pricing Authority on 1 April 1993.

There are no plans to change the functions of the Prescription Pricing Authority. Any changes to the structure or organisation of the authority will depend upon the results of its market-testing programme.

Initially five areas of activity have been identified for market testing: prescription processing; management and maintenance of the authority's estate; mainframe computer support; security, portering, catering and central administrative services; and information division processing support. A rolling programme of market testing is well under way, with contracts for prescription processing due to be let by April 1995. Contracts for other services will follow, with the current programme completed by March 1996. Testing of remaining areas of the authority's work will then be considered.

Dental Health (Children)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each health authority in the country in order of the dental health of their children, with such information as is available in relation to the flourine level of the water in each area; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Statistics on dental health for health authorities are not available centrally. The most recent dental caries prevalence surveys of children by health authorities was carried out during 1991-92. Details of the average number of decayed, missed or filled teeth of five-year-olds and the percentage of the population receiving fluoridated water supplies in each district surveyed is contained in briefing produced by the British Flouridation Society. The information is based on surveys collated by the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Cancer Research

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals or medical research institutions, including universities, are currently conducting research under what contracts placed by her Department into cancer causation by use of modified viruses; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department holds no contracts to fund any research into cancer studies by use of modified viruses.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the percentage of ethnic minority staff at the management executive and her Department in each year since 1990-91.

Mr. Sackville: The percentage[1] of ethnic minority staff in the Department, which includes the National Health Service Management Executive, on 1 April each year since 1990-91 is:

	Per cent.
1990-91	9·8
1991-92	12·9
1992-93	14·9
1993-94	15·6

[1] Based on the response to the Department's ethnic origin survey.

Comparative data are not available for the NHS Management Executive, but at 7 February 1994 the percentage was 5.9.

Ambulance Service, Northumbria

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the responses to emergency calls of Northumbria ambulance trust were met within the (a) rural and (b) urban standards; and what percentage of such calls within the metropolitan county of Tyne and Wear area were met within the urban standard.

Mr. Sackville: The performance of the Northumbria ambulance service national service trust is measured centrally against the 19-minute national patients charter emergency response time standard for rural ambulance services. In 1992-93 Northumbria ambulance service achieved the standard in 99 per cent. of cases. Information covering the metropolitan county of Tyne and Wear is not collected centrally.

The Northumbria ambulance service NHS trust has, however, been contracted locally to meet the more stringent, 14-minute, urban response time. This standard has also been achieved consistently, despite a 15 per cent. increase in emergency calls last year.

Sunderland General Hospital (Parking)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paid for car parking spaces there are at the Sunderland general hospital; what is the revenue from car parking spaces; what further car parking spaces are to be created; what contingency plans are available when all the car parking spaces are full; and whether the staff use the car parking spaces.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the district health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. George Bedell, chairman of the Sunderland district health authority, for details.

Health Care, Sheffield

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the land and buildings that are at present in the ownership, of the regional health authority in the Sheffield area.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been spent within the Sheffield health authority area on work undertaken for or on behalf of Community Health Sheffield shadow trust on capital developments, including minor works in the 1993-94 financial year and the estimated expenditure in the 1994-95 financial year, within Community Health Sheffield arising from or consequent on such work for managerial, administrative and clerical facilities; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: These are matters for Trent regional health authority. The hon. Members may wish to contact Sir Michael Carlisle, the chairman, for details.

Waiting Times

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by specialty for each trust in the Thames regions the average waiting time for a first appointment with a specialist and the average waiting time from the first appointment to subsequent treatment.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on waiting times to first out-patient appointment is not yet collected. The last year for which figures are available by specialty on average waiting time from first out-patient appointment to subsequent treatment is 1991-92 and they were collected by district health authority and not by trust.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times prescription charges have been raised since 1979; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Fifteen.

Dr. Helen Zeitlin

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what correspondence she has received relating to the case of Dr. Helen Zeitlin; what action she will take to ensure that a prompt and fair settlement is reached between Dr. Zeitlin, the Alexandra hospital and the health authority; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Two letters have been received in recent months. In November 1992 Dr. Zeitlin won her appeal against dismissal and was subsequently reinstated. Any current issues relating to her employment are a matter between Dr. Zeitlin and her employer.

Midwives

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the percentage of front line ambulances by region which have a paramedic able to support a midwife in an emergency.

Mr. Sackville: The Government have set a target for every front-line ambulance to have a paramedic by the end of 1995. It is not known how many paramedics are able to support a midwife in an emergency at present, but training in this area is being developed.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by region how many midwives have worked in the national health service for each of the last five years; how many midwives by region have direct access to beds in maternity units; and how many women delivered in a maternity unit are admitted under the management of the midwife.

Mr. Sackville: The information regarding the number of midwives working in the national health service for each of the last five years is shown in the table.

Information regarding the number of midwives who have access to beds in maternity units and the number of women delivered in maternity units who are admitted under the management of the midwife is not collected in the form requested.

FHSAs (Dental Services)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many family health services authorities have been unable to provide emergency dental services in each month since July 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall let the hon. Member have such information as is available as soon as possible.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have contacted each FHSA asking for help in finding a dentist in each month since July 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many FHSAs have referred patients who have been unable to obtain treatment from a general dental practitioner to (a) the community dental service, (b) the hospital dental service and (c) a salaried dentist, in each month since July 1992.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many FHSAs have appointed salaried dentists; and how many dentists have been appointed.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are currently 92 salaried dentists employed by 22 family health services authorities.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have given written notice to each FHSA to remove their name from the dental list since July 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table. The total number of dentists who have given written notice to family health services authorities to remove their names from the dental list since July 1992 is 297. A total of 347 dentists were added to the lists in the period 30 June 1992 to 30 September 1993.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists who have not given notice to leave the dental list have given written notice to the FHSA to deregister some or all of their continuing care arrangements for adult patients in each month since July 1992; how many dentists have deregistered patients; and how many patients have been deregistered.

Dr. Mawhinney: Tables will be placed in the Library which show for each month the number of dentists in contract with each family health services authority who have deregistered adult patients and the total number of adult patients deregistered since July 1992. Where dentists hold contracts with more than one FHSA, the numbers of dentists quoted could include duplications. The information provided weekly by FHSAs since July 1992 shows that in the period up to 4 February 1994, 2,513 dentists gave written notification to deregister 629,318 adult patients.

Despite these notified deregistrations, the total number of adult patients registered with a dentist in England increased by over 1 million—4·96 per cent.—from 20·580 million to 21·601 million over the period 1 July 1992 to 30 November 1993.

Dental Treatment (Costs)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average cost per adult patient for each course of dental treatment in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: The average cost per course of dental treatment for an adult patient in 1992-93 was £34·77.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nursing mothers and (b) pregnant women received dental treatment in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93; and what was the average cost per patient in each case.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on the number of nursing mothers and pregnant women who received dental treatment in these years is not available. Figures for the number of courses of treatment received by women in these two categories are shown in the table. Data are not available for 1990-91.

The table shows the average cost per course of treatment for nursing mothers and pregnant women in each year. This is defined as the gross fee received by the dentist for the course of treatment. Pregnant women and nursing mothers are exempt from dental charges.

[1] Mothers aged 18 and over.
[2] The cost is the gross fee received by the dentist for the course of treatment.
[3] Dental fees were reduced by 7 per cent. in July 1992.

Self-governing Trusts

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy that staff and their representatives are involved in the agreement and determination of performance-related pay schemes in self-governing trusts.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for national health service trusts to decide locally.

Racal Healthlink Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data is transferred between health regions and districts through the Racal Healthlink service.

Mr. Sackville: The Racal Healthlink service was set up primarily to link the primary health care services and associated national bodies: family health services authorities; the national health service central register; the Prescriptions Pricing Authority; and the Dental Practices Board. In general, these bodies exchange information to assist their administrative operations for example, patient registration details and claims for items of service.

For regional and district health authorities, although central records are kept about the number of connections and who is connected to Healthlink, records are not kept about the type of data sent between these organisations.

NHS Communications

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data is expected to be transferred through a new NHS national communications network service.

Mr. Sackville: The new national health service-wide communications network will cover the whole range of NHS communications activities: telephone calls, computer networking, radio mobile communications and the electronic transmission of images. Data could be of any of the types currently exchanged on paper.

Patient Records (Confidentiality)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 12 January, Official Report, column 197-98, what plans she has to assure the confidentiality of any patient records which are held on the new network.

Mr. Sackville: The national health service-wide networking programme has established a security project to develop the security policy and associated security mechanisms needed to protect the confidentiality, integrity and availability of all information passing across the new network. This work is being undertaken in full consultation with representatives of the medical profession.

Regional Data Networks

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 12 January, Official Report, column 198, what was the cost of formulating the business case for implementing a national spine to connect regional data networks.

Mr. Sackville: The estimated cost of developing the business case for a national spine facility was £290,000.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 12 January, Official Report, column 198, who is carrying out the work to connect the region-wide data networks; and what is the cost.

Mr. Sackville: The competitive procurement of nationwide area networking services was initiated recently. It is intended that there will be one provider of the spine connecting region-wide networks and two or three providers of region-wide networks to maintain competitive pressures. The cost will be known when tenders are evaluated.

Breast Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what features of the structure of the health service between England and Wales underlie the different availability of information regarding the percentage of women screened for breast cancer in the last three years between the two countries.

Mr. Sackville: Statistical information relating to the performance of the breast screening programme in England is collected annually by the Department of Health from each of 87 local screening programmes. This information is submitted as a standard statistical return.

In Wales, the screening programme is provided from only three screening centres, due to the much smaller population. Each of these screening centres is part of a single organisation, Breast Test Wales. This enables the Welsh Office to acquire information more easily on all aspects of the programme. Breast Test Wales also provides annual statistical returns identical to those used in England.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Serbia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to initiate investigations into allegations that United Kingdom-registered companies have (a) built armanent manufacturing factories in the former Yugoslavia and (b) provided arms and military equipment to Serbia contrary to internationally agreed embargoes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no information concerning allegations that United Kingdom companies have been involved in the construction of armaments factories in the former Yugoslavia.

Investigation of alleged breaches of internationally agreed embargoes on the supply of arms and military equipment to Serbia and Montenegro is a matter for the commissioners of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. They will decide what, if any, action would be appropriate in the light of available information.

Indonesia

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the British Government are taking to prevent British arms being sold to the Indonesian Government for use against the population of East Timor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: All applications for export licences in respect of Indonesia, as elsewhere, are subject to strict controls and scrutinised on a case-by-case basis. Any application for equipment likely to be used for repressive purposes against a civilian population would be rejected.

China

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government will take to urge the Government of the People's Republic of China to repeal recent religious laws increasing state controls on Chinese and foreign religious adherents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: We are aware of the recent publication of two new regulations on religious activity. Any action which further restricts freedom of choice, or which results in further harassment or ill treatment of religious believers is of serious concern. We regularly raise questions of human rights, including the persecution of religious believers, with the Chinese authorities, urging them to conform to internationally approved standards. We will continue to do so.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government will take to urge the Government of the People's Republic of China to release from imprisonment Bishop Julius Jia Zhiguo, Bishop Johannes Han Dingxiang, Auxillary Bishop Shi Hong-Zhen, and other Christians recently imprisoned for their faith.

Mr. Goodlad: We and our European Union partners have often urged the Chinese authorities to conform to internationally approved standards of behaviour in the human rights arena, including cases of detention without trial. We have also raised with them lists of specific cases, including some cases of individuals detained in connection with their religious beliefs. We will continue to to so.

Mercenaries

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 468, what conclusions his officials have come to about the allegations published in The Independent on 24 January regarding British mercenary involvement in Nagorno-Karabakh; and what action he is taking.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We take seriously the allegation that British citizens and companies are attempting to procure arms and mercenaries for Azerbaijan, and investigations continue. Investigations to date suggest that there may be truth in the allegation that these attemps have been made, but as yet we have no evidence that they have succeeded. If evidence of illegality is found the matter will be put in the hands of the custom or police, as appropriate. We remain committed to supporting the CSCE's voluntary arms embargo.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures the Government are taking to bring about a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 31 January 1994 at column 481.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by his Office (a) in the current financial year and (b) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Both the diplomatic and ODA wings of the FCO use newspaper advertising for recruitment. During the financial year 1993-94 recruitment campaigns with a budget in excess of £10,000 will have been held for grades DS9, executive assistant, administrative assistant and research analysts. Similar recruitment advertising will be undertaken in the financial year 1994-95. The ODA recruit specialists via advertisements throughout the year: cumulatively this costs more than £10,000. Effectiveness is measured in levels of response.

Other promotional campaigns costing more than £10,000 are as follows:

- FCO TV advertising offering advice to British travellers overseas including what consular services are available. This comprises short consular "filler" films screened free of charge at off-peak hours, and teletext inserts. There are no plans yet for further films in this series in 1994-95. Feedback on screening and estimated viewing figures is provided by the handling agency.
- An FCO leaflet offering advice to overseas travellers which is distributed with British visitors passports by the Post Office and travel agents.
- A booklet called "The European Community: Facts and Fairytales" designed to explain popular misconceptions about European regulations has been distributed during the financial year 1993-94. Effectiveness was measured through demand.

The FCO has not advertised on radio during 1993-94 and has no plans yet to do so in the next financial year.

Antarctic Conference on Tourism

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account he has taken of the representations by the International Association of Antarctic Tour Operators in preparing his proposals for putting forward in Japan at the Antarctic conference on tourism.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have received no representations from the International Association of Antarctic Tour Operators. We look forward to a full discussion on tourism at the Antarctic treaty consultative meeting in Japan. We believe that Antarctic tourism can be regulated through the environmental protocol to the Antarctic treaty. Tourism is explicitly referred to in the protocol.

UN Peacekeeping Operations

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the United Kingdom paid for United Nations peacekeeping operations in 1993 (a) in Namibia, (b) in the Western Sahara, (c) in Iraq-Kuwait, (d) in Cambodia and (e) in Cyprus.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There were no United Nations assessed contributions for UNTAG—Namibia—and MINURSO—Western Sahara—in 1993. UNTAG closed down in March 1990. 1993 costs for MINURSO were met from existing United Nations resources. 1993 United Kingdom assessed contributions to UNIKOM—Iraq-Kuwait—totalled $3,003,584, UNTAC—Cambodia—$39,817,868, and UNFICYP—Cyprus—$538,081. UNFICYP was only brought onto United Nations assessed contribution funding in June 1993.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the United Kingdom paid for United Nations peacekeeping operations in 1993.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom paid a total of $165,225,559 in United Nations assessed contributions to peacekeeping operations in 1993.

Cook Islands

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to regulate banking deposits by United Kingdom citizens in bank accounts registered in the Cook islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. The regulation of banking services in the Cook islands is a matter for the Cook islands authorities.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with his opposite number in the European Union in relation to the regulation of the trade in financial services between the United Kingdom and the Cook islands.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. The marketing of financial services in the United Kingdom is regulated under United Kingdom and European Community law.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United nations and the Government of Morocco concerning the proposed referendum on the future of the Western Sahara.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We maintain regular contact with the United Nations through our permanent representative in New York and with the Government of Morocco through the British embassy in Rabat.

Morocco

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Morocco concerning the continued imprisonment of Abdelhaq Rouissi; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The British embassy in Rabat has raised the case of Abdelhaq Rouissi with the Moroccan authorities and recently drew it to the attention of the newly appointed Moroccan Minister for Human Rights.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Comonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Morocco concerning their record on human rights.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We regularly take up human rights issues bilaterally and with our European Union partners. We welcome the Moroccan Government's agreement to recent visits by Amnesty International and the decision to establish a Ministry for Human Rights.

European Constituencies

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy that new boundaries for Euro-constituencies shall be drawn only after a decision that any new building for the European Parliament shall not be in Brussels.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. A Council decision of 1 February 1993 calls for member states to complete the necessary procedures to bring into effect the agreement reached at the Edinburgh European Council increasing the number of MEPs in time for the elections in June this year. The legislative procedures required to fulfil this obligation in the United Kingdom are expected to be completed shortly.

Turkey

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had during his recent visit to Turkey with representatives of the Kurdish community.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had wide ranging discussions in Ankara with senior politicians, business men and journalists but he did not meet representatives from Kurdish political parties.

EC Foreign and Security Policy

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) Commission personnel and (b) direct European Council staff are involved with the European Community foreign and security policy; if he will set out their relative responsibilities and duties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The section in the Commission which deals with the common foreign and security policy of the European Union is staffed by 125 Commission officials of all grades. The new CFSP unit in the Council secretariat is being developed from the former EPC secretariat. It is headed by a seconded ambassador and staffed by 11 seconded diplomats from member states—a 12th is expected to join the unit at a later date. It is envisaged that 12 permanent Council secretariat staff will join the unit in the future. The Commission personnel are responsible for advising Mr. van den Broek, the Commissioner for External Political Relations. The CFSP Unit in the Council secretariat works to the presidency.

Malaysia

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, column 124, if he will give details of that section of the protocol between the Secretary of State for Defence and the Government of Malaysia relating the value of aid to amounts of arms purchased.

Mr. Goodlad: No. It is established practice that details of Government-to-Government exchanges are confidential.

We will co-operate fully in the inquiry announced by the Select Committee on Foreign Affairs.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Remand Prisoners (Police Cells)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the daily average number of remand prisoners and convicted prisoners held in police cells in each year since 1980 and in the current year to the latest available date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking what was the daily average number of remand prisoners and convicted prisoners held in police cells in each of the years 1980 to 1993 inclusive, and in the current year to the latest available date.

The information you have requested is available for annual averages, calculated from the population figures for the last day of each month, which are given in the attached table. In 1981-1987 all prisoners held in police cells are assumed to be remand prisoners. For other years estimates have been made of the numbers held on remand and under sentence. Statistics on the number of prisoners held in police cells are published in table 1.5 of "Prison statistics, England and Wales".

Average population in police cells by type of custody 1980-1994[1]

[1] In 1981 to 1987 all prisoners held in police cells are assumed to be remand prisoners. For other years estimates have been made of the numbers held on remand and under sentence. Averages are calculated using the population figures for the last day of each month.

[2] 31 January.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current average cost by police force of keeping a prisoner in police cells, per night.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question requesting information about the current average cost by police force of keeping a prisoner in police cells, per night.

As prisoners have only been held by the Greater Manchester police during November and December, and more recently by two additional forces, Humberside and South Yorkshire in February, not accounts have been received. I am therefore unable to provide this information at present.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost incurred by his Department for keeping prisoners, both sentenced and remand, in police cells for the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question requesting information about the total cost incurred by the Prison Service for keeping prisoners, both sentenced and remand, in police cells for the financial year 1992-93.

The total expenditure on keeping prisoners, both sentenced and remand, in polce cells for the financial year 1992-93 was £9,974,035. Further accounts relating to 1992-93, totalling £1,217,763 are under consideration.

Cook Islands (Bank Accounts)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has had with his opposite numbers in the European Union concerning the security implications of access by United Kingdom citizens to bank accounts registered in the Cook Islands; and what provisions exist under the protocols of the Trevi Group to restrict access to such bank accounts for the proceeds of crime.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None. The regulations of banking services in the Cook Islands is a matter for the Cook Islands' authorities.

Police Codes of Conduct

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether anything exists in police codes of conduct to forbid officers passing on confidential information to third parties, including the media, whether for payment or not, during investigations into suspicious deaths; how often these codes have been breached in this respect in the last five years; how many officers have been disciplined or suspended; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the codes in this regard.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The police discipline code is contained in schedule 1 of the Police (Discipline) Regulations 1985—S.I.1985/518. Paragraph 6 of the code creates a disciplinary offence of improper disclosure of information which occurs, inter alia, when a member of a police force without proper authority communicates to any person, any information which he has in his possession as a member of a police force. Punishments for breaching the code include dismissal from the force. I have no reason to think that the provisions of the code are inadequate in this regard. Where money or other consideration has been accepted, the possibility would also arise that the common law offence of bribery had been committed.

Figures are not collected centrally about the categories of offences leading to disciplinary proceedings.

Police Body Armour

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make special separate funds available to inner city police forces for adequate provision of covert body armour for police constables working in hazardous duties on foot patrol, and for officers engaged on mobile duties, especially when operating road blocks.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No. Police protective equipment is purchased out of normal polce funds. It is for chief officers of police to decide how to equip their officers.

Prisoners (Searches)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has in relation to the powers of civilian staff in prisons to search prisoners.

Mr. Howard: Civilian staff in prisons conducting activities involving prisoners—for example, workshop instructors or catering staff—should be able to conduct non-intimate "rub-down" searches for unauthorised items such as concealed knives or sharp tools. This would make it unnecessary to bring in uniformed staff solely for that purpose and gives prison governors greater flexibility in their use of staff. In order to put the legal position beyond doubt, a clause is being tabled today for inclusion in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill which will enable civilian staff authorised by the governor to conduct these searches. Only suitably trained or experienced staff regularly involved in the custody or supervision of prisoners would be authorised to use the power. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will bring forward similar measures for Scotland.

Lenient Sentences

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the Attorney General's right to appeal against lenient sentences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the oral reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) on 10 February at columns 441-42.

Prisoners

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish for the latest convenient year the number of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all prisoners sentenced to imprisonment by courts within Wales; and how many of these spent part or all of their sentences in prisons outside Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 14 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will publish for the latest convenient year the number of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all prisoners sentenced to imprisonment by courts within Wales; and how many of these spent part or all of their sentences in prisons outside Wales.

According to the records held centrally, some 2,876 prisoners, excluding fine defaulters, were first received into Prison Service establishments under sentence from courts in Wales during 1993. Of these 2,755 were male and 121 were female. Information on the numbers who spent part or all of their sentence in Prison Service establishments outside Wales could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The available information is for the establishment of first reception; of those sentenced by courts in Wales in 1993, 690 males and 121 females were first received under sentence into Prison Service establishments outside Wales. There are no female Prison Service establishments in Wales.

Hoax Fire Calls

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the county fire authorities in order of number of hoax calls received in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will also show in each authority the number of hoax calls as a percentage of the population.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information on malicious false alarm incidents attended by local authority fire brigades in order of the number in 1992 is shown in the following table, which also shows the number expressed per 100 population.

Mr. Linbert Spencer

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table showing the (a) approved establishment and (b) actual numbers of uniformed police constables for each of the Metropolitan police divisions for each month from January to December 1993 and the projected numbers for each month from January to April 1994.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand from the Commissioner that information relating to divisions is not held centrally. A table of figures showing uniform police constable strength and establishment at area level for each month of 1993 is shown. Projected figures for 1994 are not available.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish information giving details of the capital provided in the Budget for (a) Teesside and (b) Tyne and Wear for the provision of housing for each year since 1987.

Sir George Young: Capital for the provision and maintenance of housing is provided to English local authorities through housing investment programme—HIP—allocations, which are issued annually by the Department.

Information on HIP allocations made to each local authority in England for each year from 1979-80 to 1993-94 is available in the Library.

Information on HIP allocations for 1994-95 will be placed in the Library shortly. Information on 1994-95 allocations for those local authorities within the county of Cleveland, and within the former county of Tyne and Wear, are given in the table:

1994-95 HIP allocations

Local authority	(£ thousand)
Hartlepool	3,522
Langbaurgh-on-Tees	4,305
Middlesbrough	3,542
Stockton-on-Tees	3,926
Gateshead	5,921
Newcastle	8,779
North Tyneside	8,811
South Tyneside	3,896
Sunderland	8,746

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those that were consulted on the formation of the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Baldry: To date about 8,500 copies of the draft bidding guidance on the single regeneration budget have been distributed to a wide range of organisations and individuals, including local authorities, business organisations, training and enterprise councils and voluntary and community groups.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all those who will be responsible for making the decisions in the regional offices of the single regeneration budget on how the budget is spent.

Mr. Baldry: The integrated regional offices and the single regeneration budget do not come into operation until April 1994. The bidding arrangements for the single regeneration budget for 1995-96 are currently the subject of consultation. Decisions on the bids will be made towards the end of this year. It is therefore too early to determine what detailed arrangements will be made within integrated regional offices for dealing with decisions on the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total budgets for which each regional director of the single regeneration budget is responsible and the amount of funding each is able to provide for regeneration in their respective areas.

Mr. Baldry: In its first year, the single regeneration budget will largely operate through the arrangements in place for the 20 contributing programmes and will honour existing commitments. Planned provision in 1994-95 is £1·442 billion and the expected regional distribution is:

	£ million
South East	15
Eastern	15
South West	42
East Midlands	68
West Midlands	175
Merseyside	103
North West	159
Yorkshire and Humberside	156
North East	159
London	369
	1,261
English Partnerships	181
Total	1,442

Notes:

1. These figures are provisional and are net of expected receipts. Where firm data is not yet available expenditure has been apportioned on the basis of the pattern of spend in 1992-93 and 1993-94.
2. For Department of Trade and Industry and Employment Department programmes transferring, Merseyside figures are included in those for the north west.

Council Tax

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to make in relation to council tax for the mentally impaired living alone; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Where all the residents of a dwelling are severely mentally impaired a 50 per cent. council tax discount applies. In many cases the residents will be able to have all or part of the remaining liability met by council tax benefit.

We have received a number of representations to the effect that such dwellings should be exempt from the council tax. We are presently considering those representations: I shall let the hon. Member know when we have reached a conclusion.

European Funding Schemes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the European funding schemes for which local authorities can apply, the total budget of each scheme, the percentage that each local authority can apply, the total amount of each budget that is designated to England, and the total amount claimed by local authorities in each year from 1980.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Rhinoceroses

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with other parties to the convention on international trade in endangered species on how to clamp down on the illegal trade in rhinoceros.

Mr. Atkins: At the most recent meeting of the Standing Committee of the convention, held in Brussels in September, it was decided to put further pressure on consumer countries, especially China and Taiwan, to end all internal trade in rhino products and to bring stocks under Government control. The United Kingdom has observer status on the committee and played an active part in the discussions leading to the decisions. In addition the United Kingdom, together with our European partners, fully supported the discussion of the CITES Standing Committee to send technical and high-level delegations to rhino-horn consuming countries to assess the effectiveness of their efforts to combat illegal trade in rhino horn and to offer advice and assistance. We have contributed £5,000 towards the costs of the high-level delegation which has recently visited China and Taiwan. The Government will be represented at the Standing Committee meeting next month which will consider what further action should be taken in the light of the delegations reports.

The United Kingdom Government have taken a leading role in encouraging greater efforts to conserve rhinos. On 3 February my Department announced a grant of £60,000 towards a project co-funded by the European Commission and the Worldwide Fund for Nature to appoint a scientific officer to co-ordinate rhino conservation activities throughout Africa.

Waveney District Council

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to relax spending restrictions to permit Waveney district council to match, pound for pound, the money recently awarded to parts of Waveney under structural funds, objective 5b; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: No. For an explanation of the Government's policy on matching funding for European regional development fund grants, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 11 January 1994, Official Report, columns 3-4.

Nidderdale Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his decision on the Nidderdale area of outstanding natural beauty designation order submitted to him by the Countryside Commission.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today confirmed the order which will designate Nidderdale as an area of outstanding natural beauty. The designation covers an area of 603 sq km in north Yorkshire. Nidderdale is important for its natural beauty and unspoilt rural character which the designation will help to secure.

Housing Action Trust, Brent

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further progress has been made with the proposal for a housing action trust in Brent.

Sir George Young: I am pleased to announce, after further consultation with the tenants, that a postal ballot will be held from 14 to 27 March 1994. This will enable the tenants of the Stonebridge estate to vote on whether they are in favour of the establishment of a housing action trust for their estate.

The housing action trust proposal represents a major opportunity to improve the estate and the quality of life within it, but the final decision must rest with the tenants. I very much hope that they will use their vote to decide the future of the estate.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Biwater Group

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the Overseas Development Administration's water and sewerage sector budget has supported contracts won by the Biwater Group in each year since 1985.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Overseas Development Administration does not have a separate water and sewerage sector budget. Since 1985 Biwater Group has been awarded contracts under our bilateral aid programme spending as follows. Two contracts supported under the aid and trade provision, that is, a rural water supply scheme in Malaysia which commenced in 1986 with ATP support of £59·46 million and a hill country water project in Sri Lanka which commenced in 1988 with ATP support of £2·129 million.

Under our regular country programme—excluding ATP which is centrally managed—we maintain central records on contracts undertaken direct by ODA with United Kingdom firms as part of technical co-operation. These show that a contract, valued at £1·5 million as part of the Cairo waste water project, was placed with the Biwater Group and began in 1992.

For aid other than technical cooperation, contracts are placed with United Kingdom firms by overseas Governments or their institutions and not by ODA; our financial aid is made to the recipient country Government as a contribution to the cost of these contracts. Information on which United Kingdom firms received these contracts is not maintained centrally in ODA. Such information could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Brazil

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by value each British aid project in Brazil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Overseas Development Administration—ODA—is currently funding 15 projects in Brazil. These are:

1. Anglo-Brazilian Climate Observation Study (£2·9 million)
2. Rainforest Silviculture Research Project (£2·4 million)
3. Caxiuana Research Station (£1·9 million)
4. Forest Biomass and Nutrient Research Project (£1·7 million)
5. Lake Mamiraua Ecological Research Station (£1·6 million)
6. Rain Forest Pilot Programme Trust Fund (£1·5 million)
7. Tocantins Forestry and Rural Development Project (£1·1 million)
8. Tapajos National Forest Management Project (£0·8 million)
9. Aromatic Plants Developments Project (£0·7 million)
10. Central Amazonia Flora and Vegetation Project (£0·6 million)
11. Recife Environmental Control Project (£0·4 million)

12. Floodplain Forest Ecology and Management Project (£0·3 million)
13. Sao Paulo State Water and Sewerage Project (£0·2 million)
14. Assistance to the Brazilian Indian Agency, FUNAI (£0·2 million)
15. Yanomami Health Project (£0·2 million)

The United Kingdom signed a memorandum of understanding on environmental co-operation with the Government of Brazil in July 1989. This provides the main focus for the programme which is the United Kingdom's largest in Latin America.

In addition to these bilateral projects, we provide some £1·8 million per annum to finance post graduate and technical training awards for Brazilian students in the United Kingdom. Also, ODA's joint funding scheme is presently supporting 53 small projects in Brazil, managed by British non-government organisations, at a cost of more than £0·7 million. Other small projects are supported by the British ambassador's discretionary scheme, including a £55,000 grant to the Sao Martinho shelter for street children in Rio de Janeiro.

Vietnam

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to make grants from the know-how fund available for Vietnam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The know-how fund provides specialist skills and training for the former Soviet Union and eastern and central Europe. We are providing £10 million worth of similar technical co-operation for Vietnam under our aid programme to that country.

Commonwealth Institute

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with other Commonwealth Governments about the increasing their funding of the Commonwealth Institute; and what discussions he has had with the Commonwealth Secretariat about improving links between the Secretariat and the Commonwealth Institute, and expanding financial support from the Commonwealth to the Commonwealth Institute.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: All Commonwealth high commissioners in London and the Commonwealth Secretary-General are, ex-officio, governors of the institute's board. Through them, the assessors on the board, appointed by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to represent Government Departments in the United Kingdom, maintain a continuing dialogue on the level of funding and support provided by Commonwealth Governments and the Commonwealth secretariat, in addition to the direct contacts between the institute's staff and high commissions and the secretariat.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what purpose the Commonwealth Institute building would be put if the Commonwealth Institute closes or virtually closes in 1996; and what representations have been made to him by the appropriate local authority about the planning implications of the closure of the Commonwealth Institute, or about acceptable alternative uses for the building.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The board, the director-general and staff of the institute are developing a re-launch strategy to ensure that the institute does not close in 1996. Any alternative use to which the institute's building could be put would have to take account of the building's grade II* listed status and the terms of the 999 year lease governing the use of the site and building.

On 13 October 1993, the Council of the royal borough of Kensington and Chelsea adopted the following resolution:

"That this Council notes with dismay the proposal to withdraw funding from the Commonwealth Institute and regrets that should the Institute close, its valuable role in promoting inter-cultural awareness will be lost."

In conveying the resolution to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, the Leader of the council argued that since it occupies a grade II* listed building the Commonwealth Institute was unique in the borough and that alternative uses for the building would be very hard to find if the institute had to leave.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received urging his Department to continue grant in aid to the Commonwealth Institute beyond 1996; what were the main conclusions of the inquiry, carried out by Lord Armstrong, into the Commonwealth Institute; if he will place a copy of Lord Armstrong's report in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received many representations from MPs and members of the public.

In his review of the Commonwealth Institute, Lord Armstrong identified four options for the institute:

(i) a larger grant in aid
(ii) a continuation of the status quo
(iii) the transfer of the Institute's collection elsewhere, and look separately at the buildings
(iv) the closure of the Institute.

In his conclusions, Lord Armstrong advised against closure; assumed increased Government funding to be unlikely; and recommended that the institute should be enabled to continue to run as at present, while the feasibility of transferring the collection of objects to another institution was examined. He judged that if there was no prospect of a significant increase in Government funding it would be unsatisfactory for all concerned to keep the institute ticking over indefinitely at the present level.

I have placed a copy of Lord Armstrong's review in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with the Departments for Education and for National Heritage and other Government Departments from his Department about spreading or switching funding of the Commonwealth Institute; and what discussions he has had with private sector interests about private sponsorship of the work of the Commonwealth Institute.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My Department consulted other Government Departments, including the Departments for Education and National Heritage, before the decision to cease funding in 1996 was announced on 21 September 1993. No other Government Department was able to assist financially.

The outlines for a relaunch plan were presented by the board of governors to the institute's annual general meeting on 16 November 1993. The detailed implementation including the financing of this plan is under preparation by the director-general.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the Post Office users councils for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. McLoughlin: The members of the Post Office users councils for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland as at 21 January 1994 are as follows:

Scotland

Mr. Andrew O. Robertson (Chairman)
Mr. Richard J. Ardern
Dr. Tom N. A. Begg OBE JP
Lady Jane Forbes
Mrs. Vivian B. Greenhill
Mr. D. G. Marnoch
Mrs. Elizabeth A. Packard

Mr. Anthony D. White

Northern Ireland

Mrs. Gwen Savage (Chairman)
Mr. Ralph G. Bauer
Mrs. R. P. M. Goldie
Mrs. Olive M. Marshall
Mr. James O. McDonald MBE
Deaconess Hilary M. McDowell
Mr. Albert J. Sherrard
Mr. John D. Thompson
Mr. George B. Turkington

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Committee on Telecommunications for England.

Mr. McLoughlin: The members of the English Advisory Committee on Telecommunications as at 21 January 1994 are:

Miss Moira E. Black (Chairman)
Ms Anne Ballard
Mrs. Diana C. Banks OBE
Mr. Harry Branchdale
Mr. Iain R. Bryce
Mr. Samuel J. Cooper
Mr. John D. Green
Mr. Robert F. Little
Mr. Brian M. Love
Ms Claire B. Milne
Mr. Douglas R. Oram
Dr. Joyce M. Wood

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his Department's assistance to the British aerospace industry.

Mr. Sainsbury: Since 1979 the Department has provided over £1·5 billion of support for major civil aerospace projects in the form of launch aid and support for research and technology. The DTI also helps the industry to sell its products and services abroad, in co-operation with other Departments, and ECGD has provided over £735 million of export credit cover to support these sales over the last three years.

Ferrous Scrap

Mr. Michael: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what is his assessment of the impact of increased demand and price for ferrous scrap internationally on the United Kingdom industry; and what steps he intends to take to help the United Kingdom industry;

(2) what assessment his Department has made of (a) demand and (b) price of ferrous scrap in the current year and in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government have been closely monitoring recent developments. Ferrous scrap is an internationally traded commodity and as such will vary in price according to the level of supply and demand.

I have agreed to meet a delegation from the steel and foundry industries. We have also discussed these matters with the European Commission, which is currently undertaking an in-depth study of the international scrap market. We will be studying the results carefully.

Mr. Michael: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the level of export of ferrous scrap (a) in terms of tonnage and (b) in terms of value in each of the past 10 years; and what is his projection for 1994.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information requested is published in the "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom, Central Statistical Office", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Eggar: The Department's publicity advertising in the current year has included the following:

Export Services
Objective: to encourage firms to make use of Overseas Trade Services in tackling markets abroad.

Assessment: responses and take up of information and services.

Business in Europe
Objective: to encourage United Kingdom firms into other European markets, and to provide information and help.

Assessment: responses and take up of information and services.

Small firms merit award for research and technology
Objective: promotion of the SMART scheme to stimulate technological innovation in small firms.

Assessment: responses and applications.

Firework safety
Objective: to alert the public to the need to enjoy fireworks safely.

Assessment: injury statistics are published annually.

Inward investment
Objective: to promote the United Kingdom as the preferred European location for foreign investment.

Assessment: awareness and monitoring of the number and quality of responses.

Queen's awards
Objective: to attract applicants for the Queen's Awards for Export, Technological and Environmental Achievement.

Assessment: responses and applications.

The Department has many other promotional programmes, most of which have involved little or no advertising expenditure in the current year. Each has its own objectives and evaluation arrangements. Examples of topics covered are: DTI services to business; export promotion; small firms and business link; innovation and technology services; consumer affairs; industry sponsorship; business and the environment; deregulation; renewable energy; United Kingdom space interests; assisted areas; manufacturing and management best practice; and United Kingdom offshore supplies expertise.

Most of these activities will continue in 1994-95, and media allocations will be made during the year according to need.

Details of advertising and other promotional activities by the Department's agencies are not held centrally.

Nuclear Reprocessing

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons the reprocessing of a final load of pressure for the reactor fuel was authorised following the termination of the fast reactor programme.

Mr. Eggar: Reprocessing the spent fuel represents the best value for money, based on both technical and economic grounds.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the implications for the frequency of plutonium nitrate shipments from Dounreay to Sellafield of plans to increase the rate of prototype fast reactor spent fuel reprocessing over the next three or more years.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for the Western Isles (Mr. Macdonald) on 22 June 1993, Official Report, column 134.

Research and Development

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has on United Kingdom industrial research and development spending, by sector, in each of the past five years; what these figures are as a percentage of (a) sales, (b) profits and (c) dividends; and what comparison his Department has undertaken with the top 200 companies world wide.

Mr. Sainsbury: Data on United Kingdom business enterprise research and development expenditure by detailed product group for 1988-1992 were published in table 2 of the Central Statistical Office "First Release" (CSO(93)188) a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Research and development expenditure as a percentage of sales is given in table 3 of the same publication.

Research and development expenditure as a percentage of sales, profits, and dividends for individual United Kingdom companies is published in "The 1993 UK R&D Scoreboard" a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. This publication also contains similar data for the 200 international companies spending most of research and development. The data in the scoreboard are drawn from annual reports and accounts and are not directly comparable to the data published by the Central Statistical Office.

Net Book Agreement

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to receive the Office of Fair Trading report of the inquiry into the net book agreement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: This is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading who announced on 23 November 1993 that he would consider again the case for applying to the restrictive practices court for leave to have its decision in respect of the net book agreement reviewed.

Charter Markets

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has consulted the Secretary of State for the Environment on the environmental effect of his proposals to change the legislation regarding charter markets; and what assessment he has made of the compatibility of those proposals with recent planning guidance on out-of-town shopping developments.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Consultations have, of course, taken place between myself and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for the Environment, on all these matters and the Government's proposals in the Deregulation Bill take due account of all the relevant issues.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a list of all initiatives that are currently planned or operating which will exploit tidal power.

Mr. Eggar: The Department's tidal energy programme is now being completed. Remaining work consists mainly of generic studies of the impact of tidal barrages on the environment.

Specific studies are being completed on steel-concrete sandwich composite for use in tidal barrages, mud transport in shallow water, fish deterrence, estuary sediment prediction, bird populations and mesocosm studies.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of the non-fossil fuel obligation fund is allocated to (a) nuclear power, (b) wind power, (c) geothermal power, (d) tidal power and (e) other renewable energy sources.

Mr. Eggar: The level of payments to the individual technologies contracted under the non-fossil fuel obligation, and financed by the fossil fuel levy, depends on the contracts which the regional electricity companies sign in fulfilment of the NFFO orders, on the amounts of electricity generated under these contracts, and the market price of electricity. The Director General of Electricity Supply has estimated that in 1993-94 around 6 per cent. of the amount raised by the fossil fuel levy will go to renewables generators.

Mr. Asil Nadir

Mr. Mullin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action the Official Receiver has taken against Mr. Asil Nadir under the Insolvency Act 1986.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Official Receiver has discharged his usual functions under the Insolvency Act, 1986 in relation to the bankruptcy of Mr. Nadir.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when Mr. Asil Nadir will be eligible to be discharged as a bankrupt; and if he will give an assurance that he will not automatically be discharged.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Under section 279 of the Insolvency Act, 1986 most bankrupts are automatically discharged on the third anniversary of their bankruptcy. In Mr. Nadir's case the third anniversary of his bankruptcy is 25 November 1994. However, the court may, on the application of the Official Receiver, suspend the discharge of any bankrupt who fails to comply with any of his obligations under the Act, for example to co-operate with his trustee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chairman of the Committee of Selection, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, columns 522-23; what qualifications the Committee of Selection ascertained under the terms of paragraph 2 of Standing Order No. 86 in respect of the nomination of the hon. Members for Stroud (Mr. Knapman), for Hexham, (Mr. Atkinson), for Leeds, North-East (Mr. Kirkhope), for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) and for Blackpool, North (Mr. Elletson) to serve on the First Scottish Standing Committee in respect of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill.

Sir Fergus Montgomery: It is not the practice of the Committee of Selection to comment upon its private deliberations.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chairman of the Committee of Selection, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, columns 522-32, what documents the Committee of Selection had before it in ascertaining the qualifications of hon. Members nominated to serve on the First Scottish Standing Committee in respect of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill.

Sir Fergus Montgomery: It would not be appropriate to disclose the material the Committee of Selection uses during its private meetings.

Museums and Galleries (Attendances)

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish the attendance figures for 1993 reported by the national museums and galleries in England for which he is responsible, broken down into the individual institutions, but including their outstations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1992.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 18 January 1994]: Except for the British museum these attendance figures are now provided for financial years not for calendar years.

I list forecasts for the number of visitors to the 11 national museums and galleries in England for which I am responsible for the current financial year and the actual figures for the financial year 1992-93. More accurate figures for 1993-94 will be available later in July.

	Attendance in 1992-93 (million)	Forecasts of attendance in 1993-94 (million)	Provisional percentage increase/decrease over the previous year

It is not possible to identify the number of visitors to the Royal Armouries which at present forms part of the Tower of London.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who are the members currently appointed to the court of the Bank of England.

Mr. Nelson: The current members of the Bank of England court are as follows:

Edward George, Esq (Governor)
Rupert Pennant-Rea, Esq (Deputy Governor)
Sir George Cadbury
Anthony Coleby, Esq
Sir Colin Corness
Mrs. Frances Heaton
Sir Christopher Hogg
Sir Martin Jacomb
Pendarell Kent, Esq
Mervyn King, Esq
Gavin Laird, Esq, CBE
Sir David Lees
Sir Christopher Morse, KCMG
Sir David Scholey, CBE
Professor Sir Roland Smith
Sir Colin Southgate
Brian Quinn, Esq

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by Her Majesty's Treasury on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and in 1992-93.

Mr. Nelson: There was no specific budgetary provision for travel by the Chief Secretary in 1992-93. Expenditure on foreign travel was £660, all of which was incurred after 11 April 1992 attending ministerial meetings at the request of the Chancellor. There was no expenditure on internal travel.

International Monetary Fund

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is the policy of the IMF to publishes only general economic data and not specific policy advice.

Mr. Nelson: Discussions between IMF staff and country authorities are confidential. The IMF publish its assessment of the world economy in the "World Economic Outlook" which is published twice a year.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department ever asked British Nuclear Fuels plc for a copy of the Touche Ross report on the economic prospects for THORP; and whether his Department has seen a copy of the report.

Mr. Portillo: My Department has neither seen nor asked for a copy of the Touche Ross report. We have received all the information we required on the economics of THORP from the Department of Trade and Industry.

Minimum Lending Rate

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table giving the minimum lending rate of the Bank of England on 1 January, 1 April, 1 July and 1 October in each year from 1 January 1990; what is the average mortgage interest rate for the leading building societies at each of these dates; and what is the differential between them.

Mr. Nelson: The minimum lending rate was not in use on any of the dates specified. The table gives the clearing banks' base rates on those dates, and the average mortgage interest rate of all building societies.

	Base rate	Mortgage rate	Differential
1990

PRIME MINISTER

Consultancies

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Prime Minister how much the Government spent on employing private sector consultants for each year from 1979.

The Prime Minister: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with any of his EU counterparts on the environmental and proliferation implications of THORP.

The Prime Minister: I meet my European Union counterparts from time to time, when we discuss a range of issues.

Sir Peter Levene

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the report of Sir Peter Levene into the Government's use of external consultants.

The Prime Minister: At this early stage of the scrutiny no specific decision to publish has been taken but it is the normal practice for efficiency unit reports to be published.

Northern Region

Mr. Bates: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the results of the Government's policies in the northern region since 1983; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will list, by Government Departments, the principal aid given to the northern region in each year since 1983.

The Prime Minister: Since 1983, Government policy and programmes have helped with the transition of the economy of the north-east region to its present more diversified base.

This process has been substantially helped by overseas investment of over £2 billion. The Department of Trade and Industry has also committed over £1 billion in assisting industrial and commercial projects, helping to create or safeguard around an estimated 50,000 jobs. Unemployment in the north-east has fallen from a peak of 19·6 per cent. in 1986 to 12·7 per cent. now.

Visits, Scotland

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 406, what were the dates and locations of each of his 13 visits to Scotland.

The Prime Minister: In 1991, I made five visits to Scotland, including Edinburgh, Glasgow—twice—Perth and Deeside.

In 1992, I also made five visits to Scotland, including Glasgow, Edinburgh and Dundee, Strathclyde and Deeside.

In 1993, I made three visits to Scotland, including Glasgow, Edinburgh and Deeside.

Railway Manufacturing

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the representations made to him by the Design Council about the future of the British railway manufacturing industry and a copy of his response to the Design Council.

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, I have received no such letter.

Car Industries

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will urge the German, French and Italian Prime Ministers to encourage the sale of their indigenous car industries.

The Prime Minister: The commercially-driven trend towards more cross-border, joint ventures and strategic alliances is expected to continue in the European car industry. I am sure that my German, French and Italian opposite numbers will not stand in the way of this process, which will strengthen Europe's global competitiveness.

I am delighted that the French Government are following the United Kingdom's example and going ahead with their plan to privatise Renault.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the President of Cyprus on the talks now taking place under the role of the Secretary General of the United Nations.

The Prime Minister: I discussed United Nations efforts to resolve the Cyprus problem with President Clerides during the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting last October. I have not had any discussions with him about the talks due to begin on 17 February. However my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, has been in close touch with the parties. He met the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Michaelides, on 2 February.

Biodiversity Convention

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what action he is taking to co-ordinate the policy of the FCO and the Department of the Environment in relation to the ratifaction of the biodiversity convention to include the land and marine environments of Ascension Island, British Indian Ocean territory, the Cayman Islands, Chagos Archipelago, Gibraltar, Montserrat, Pitcairn Island, St. Helena, South Georgia and the south Sandwich Islands, Tristan da Cunha, Turks and Caicos Islands and Virgin Islands.

The Prime Minister: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has overall responsibility for the administration, and direct responsiblity for certain external relations, of the United Kingdom's 14 dependent territories and two dependencies.

Policy towards the territories is co-ordinated through an inter-departmental group, including the Department of the Environment, chaired by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. That group has endorsed a strategy for consultation with the dependencies on whether they wish to be included in the United Kingdom's ratification of the biodiversity convention and, if not, whether they envisage the convention being extended to them at a later date.

As part of that process dependent territory Governments need to consider taking on the new commitments arising from Rio. The FCO is helping the dependent territories to assess the costs and benefits to them of any new legislation required.

Government Car Service

Mr. Soley: To ask the Prime Minister what is the procedure for recording the use of ministerial cars; and what arrangements are made to allow inspection of it by hon. Members.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

The procedure is that car log sheets are maintained for recording the use of all ministerial cars. The log sheets are retained as internal documents.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the Spongiform Encephalopathy advisory committee.

International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tuna

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action she is taking to allow the United Kingdom through the EC to join the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tuna; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The European Community applied to join the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tuna—ICCAT—in the mid-1980's. Since ICCAT's constitution did not allow for regional organisations to become members, an amendment was necessary before the EC's application could be progressed.

The EC's application has now to be ratified by all the members of ICCAT before it can be accepted. Currently, ratification is still required from two member states; Morocco and Gabon, who have both indicated that they will be ratifying in due course.

The EC currently holds observer status with ICCAT whilst France, Spain and Portugal are members in their own right.

Farmers' Early Retirement Scheme

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which EU member states have implemented a farmers' early retirement scheme; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Under Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2079/92 the farmers' early retirement scheme is optional for all member states. The following countries have implemented the scheme: France, Ireland and Belgium.

The United Kingdom, Denmark, Greece, Italy, Germany, Portugal, Luxembourg, Spain and the Netherlands have to date not implemented the EC early retirement scheme. The scheme is not suited to the structure of farming in the United Kingdom and if implemented the cost required to come from national resources could be provided only by reducing expenditure on existing United Kingdom programmes.

Livestock Premium Scheme

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the due payment date for each livestock premium scheme for each year since 1985; what percentage has been paid for each after this date; and what representations she has received on late payment.

Mr. Jack: For the suckler cow premium scheme, European Community rules specified payment within 12 months of the opening of the scheme for 1985 to 1988, within 15 months of the opening of the scheme for 1989, and within 20 months of the opening of the scheme for 1990 to 1992. For the 1993 scheme, payments must be completed by 30 June 1994. Nearly all payments are made before the deadline.

There was no payment due date for the beef variable premium scheme which operated until March 1989. For its successor, the beef special premium scheme, European Community rules required payment to be made within nine months of a claim between 1989 and 1992. For the 1993 scheme, payments must be completed by 30 June 1994. Between 1989 and 1992, less than 0·1 per cent. of claims were paid after the due date. Figures for 1993 are not yet available.

European Community regulations specify that sheep annual premium payments must be paid by 15 October —31 December for the 1992 and earlier schemes—of the year following that to which the scheme relates. Nearly all payments are made before the deadline. There is no payment due date for the hill livestock compensatory allowance scheme.

Representations are received from time to time about late or delayed payments. Every effort is made to pay premium as quickly as possible consistent with the need to ensure that applications meet the conditions of the schemes.

Fish Exporters

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to compensate fish exporting merchants and others who suffer financially as a consequence of action by French fishermen; if she will seek compensation from the French Government; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend has been in touch with the French Minister, Mr. Puech, and left him in no doubt that we expect him to ensure that the deplorable behaviour of some French fishermen is brought to an end as soon as possible.

We have secured the co-operation of the French authorities in providing police protection for fish consignments on arrival in France upon prior notification, via MAFF, of transport plans. A number of consignments have already passed through this system, which remains available to help trade continue.

We have also secured the French Government's assurance that compensation will be available, from the regional authorities in France, to those who suffer direct losses as a result of acts of vandalism. MAFF officials can advise and assist exporters on the construction of claims.

It is totally unacceptable that people going about their lawful business should be subjected to violence and intimidation. We shall maintain our pressure on the French authorities to restore normality.

Sheep Dipping

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will now make sheep dipping compulsory; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I have no plans to do so.

Fishing Fleets (Monitoring)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money has been made available by the EU to improve monitoring of fishing fleet activity; and how it will be spent.

Mr. Jack: Responsibility for ensuring compliance with the provisions of the common fisheries policy rests with individual member states. Under the terms of Council decision 89/631 EEC the Commission may contribute up to 50 per cent. of the costs of the acquisition or modernisation of capital equipment for use in fisheries enforcement. This scheme runs from 1991 to 1995 and provision is made for expenditure of up to 22 million ECUs in each calendar year. To the end of 1992 a total of 32 million ECUs had been spent.

EDUCATION

Learning Disabilities

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps have been taken during the implementation of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 to ensure the continuation and expansion of non-vocational courses for students with learning disabilities.

Mr. Boswell: The duties on the Further Education Funding Council and LEAs under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 require them to ensure that adequate further education provision, including non-vocational courses, is available for students with learning difficulties or disabilities. We have promoted, through guidance to the Council and LEAs, the maintenance and development of provision for these students. The Government funds the FEFC to enable it to meet its responsibilities, and the local authority grant settlement takes account of all local authority responsibilities, including provision of non-vocational further education for students with learning difficulties or disabilities.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by his Department (a) in the current financial year and (b) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Robin Squire: In 1993-94, the campaigns listed included newspaper advertising but did not include radio or television advertising:

The 1993 school testing campaign

The objective was to advertise the availability of an information leaflet for parents summarising tests and assessments at seven, 11 and 14 in the national curriculum.

GM schools campaign

The objective is to advertise the availability of publications giving factual information about grant-maintained status.

The 1994 school testing campaign

The objective is to advertise the availability of an information leaflet for parents which summarises tests at seven, 11 and 14 in the national curriculum.

The following campaign included both press and radio advertising:

The Charters for Further Education and Higher Education

The objective was to publicise the charters to allow as many students, potential students, parents, employers and others to obtain copies.

All of the above advertising campaigns offered individuals the opportunity to order their own copy of the relevant information leaflet. In each case, providing the public with a mechanism for directly obtaining information was an important objective of the campaign.

The following campaign did not include advertising:

The DFE roadshow—A Sound Education

The roadshow visited a number of venues around the country with the objective of updating parents on the Department's education policies and explaining how they can become more involved in their children's education.

Campaigns are evaluated by pre- and post-campaign market research into their effectiveness, the number of coupon and telephone responses and the number of leaflets issued.

Publicity activities for 1994-95 have not yet been decided.

Capital Programmes

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consideration he has given to changing place cost multipliers in assessing capital programme allocations to take into account real costs incurred by local authorities.

Mr. Forth: The cost-multipliers used in the calculation of cover for basic need projects are derived from analysis of actual costs incurred by local education authorities through projects to provide new places. They represent a challenging but achievable target.

My right hon. Friend will consider carefully any representations he receives about changing the means by which cover is provided to meet basic need.

Examinations

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the extent of anomalies in the published tables of school examination results arising from pupils entering for GCSE a year early; and what proposals he has for rectifying the figures for the overall performance of schools for pupils at the age of 16 years.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend is well aware of the arguments concerning the basis on which GCSE information should be presented in school performance tables, and has considered them carefully on several occasions. He continues to believe that the case for publishing data which reflect pupils' achievements before or during the year in which they reach the age of 16 has much to commend it, since it provides a clear and consistent record of results gained by the end of compulsory schooling. He will however shortly be consulting about the basis on which the 1994 tables should be published. Final decisions will be taken in the light of that consultation.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement concerning the validity of comparing results in different areas when they are based on examinations of different boards.

Mr. Robin Squire: Such comparisons should be generally valid since national examinations have built-in safeguards to ensure consistency in examining standards. All GCE A/AS level and GCSE syllabuses must satisfy criteria set by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority—SCAA. GCSE examinations must be conducted in accordance with the code of practice which my right hon. Friend introduced last year. The Office for Standards in Education has reported that the GCSE code has had a beneficial effect on examining and awarding standards at that level in 1993, and my right hon. Friend has now commissioned SCAA to develop a similar code for GCE. The National Council for Vocational Qualifications requires the awarding bodies for general national vocational qualifications to comply with a code of practice on external testing.

School Governors

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consideration he has given to introducing a scheme for payment of loss of earnings for members of school governing bodies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: No such scheme has been considered. There is little difficulty in recruiting people to school governorship, which is part of the long tradition of unpaid voluntary service in this country.

Dyslexia

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 4 February, Official Report, column 933, if he will provide details as to the way in which the £300,000 for research into dyslexia is being spent; and what plans exist for additional spending into the early identification of this condition.

Mr. Forth: The Department has provided £250,000 for a research project based at Harris city technology college which is examining ways in which information technology can assist dyslexic pupils; and £74,500 for joint research being carried out by the Hereford and Worcester Dyslexia Association and the University of Birmingham into phonological awareness in pre-school children and ways in which teachers can identify and teach children with dyslexia. The latter amount includes £43,500 which the Department has recently agreed to provide to enable the research to continue for a further two years until 1996. The Department is currently considering further requests for funding research into dyslexia.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many children are estimated to suffer from dyslexia in England and Wales; what is the trend in numbers; and how the figures are collected.

Mr. Forth: The Department does not collect such statistics.

The British Dyslexia Association estimates that approximately 300,000 children in England and Wales have dyslexia. There is no discernible trend in the number of children with dyslexia.

SCOTLAND

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times the sites of special scientific interest appeals committee has met; and what decisions have been taken on each occasion.

Sir Hector Monro: The advisory committee on sites of special scientific interest has met five times. Those meetings have been used to put in place the procedures under which the committee will consider any cases referred to it by Scottish Natural Heritage. SNH is required to receive and consider the advice of the committee on the matters that have been referred to it. To date no cases have been referred to the committee. A copy of the committee's report for 1992-93 has been placed in the Library.

Astronomer Royal

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he hopes to reach conclusions about the appointment of an Astronomer Royal for Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Advice will be given in due course to Her Majesty the Queen on an appointment to the office of Astronomer Royal for Scotland.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the maximum, (b) the minimum and (c) the average amount paid out under the arable area payments scheme in Scotland in the latest available year; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 28 January 1994]: In 1993, the maximum payment made to a Scottish producer under the arable area payments scheme was just over £340,000. The minimum AAPS payment cannot be identified at this time because of the need to update the computer system for recording individual claims under the simplified element of AAPS. The average AAPS payment in Scotland in 1993 was £8,100, although this figure does not take into account the final oil seeds payment due to be paid by the end of March.

Diabetics

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of insulin-dependent diabetics in Scotland; and how many of them live alone.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1994]: The number of insulin-dependent diabetics in Scotland is not recorded. However, in 1986 a working group of the National Medical Consultative Committee estimated that there were some 50,000 diabetics in Scotland, and that some 35 per cent. of them were insulin-dependent. On that basis the number of insulin-dependent diabetics in Scotland would be about 17,500, of whom perhaps 25 per cent. live alone.

Environmental Sponsorship

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many requests for environmental sponsorship have been received by Scottish Natural Heritage; and if he will list those granted and those rejected.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 4 February 1994]: Details of grants made in 1992-93 will be given in SNH's annual report for that year which will be published later this month.

Holyrood House

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what accommodation is designated for members of the royal family excluding Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Phillip at Holyrood house; what accommodation is available for their staff; and how costs are allocated between the occupants and his Department.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 1 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend is responsible for the entire cost of the maintenance of the fabric of the palace, for security and for the cost of utilities such as fuel and telephones. All other costs are met by the royal household, which is also responsible for the allocation of accommodation within the palace. I understand that no accommodation is allocated to any particular member of the royal family.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit the west Dykebar area of Paisley to discuss with residents the provision of local government services.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 9 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit the west Dykebar area. The hon. Member will, of course, have the opportunity to raise the issue of the provision of local government services in west Dykebar and other parts of Scotland during the passage of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill.

Local Authorities (Applicants)

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to make regulations governing the vetting of qualifications, claimed by applicants to senior and promoted posts in local government; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the arrangements made by local authorities to vet the qualifications of applicants for professional posts in local government; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what advice he has given to local authorities on the vetting of professional qualifications claimed by applicants for promoted posts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 February 1994]: It is for local authorities, as independent corporate bodies, responsible for the appointment of staff, to arrange to vet the qualifications of job applicants as they consider necessary. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has no locus in this matter.

After School Care Initiative

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was given to each local enterprise council in 1993-94 for the after school care initiative; and what is the estimated outturn expenditure by each LEC in 1993-94 in that area of activity.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The allocation of resources to the local enterprise companies is an operational matter for Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. I have asked the chairmen of those bodies to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Scottish Arts Council

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the organisations or individuals in receipt of awards from the Scottish Arts Council; if he will give details of the funding of the Scottish Arts Council; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 3 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland, will assume responsibility for the Scottish Arts Council from my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for National Heritage, on 1 April 1994. The Scottish Arts Council's annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library, list the organisations and individuals in receipt of Scottish Arts Council funding. Subject to Parliamentary approvals, funding for the Scottish Arts Council in 1994-95 will be £23·777 million.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 February 1994]: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Scottish Homes

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many properties have been sold by Scottish Homes in the parliamentary constituency of Cunninghame, South during each of the last five years; and how much money has been raised from these sales;

(2) how many Scottish Homes properties there are in each of the parliamentary constituencies in Scotland; and what is the current valuation of the Scottish Homes' properties in each.

Lord James Dougas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 February 1994]: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked its chairman, Sir James Mellon, to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Training

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Scottish Office and European Community money has been spent on training (a) unemployed youths aged 16 to 18 years, (b) 18 to 24 years and (c) the long-term unemployed in the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow; how many such trainees subsequently found employment; and which organisations were so financed to (i) commission and (ii) conduct the training programme in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 8 February 1994]: Responsibility for the delivery of Government training programmes in Scotland was transferred from the training agency to Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise in April 1991. The information on expenditure requested by the hon. Member is not available at parliamentary constituency level.

Old Royal High School

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to put the former Crown Office building, the Old Royal high school in Edinburgh on the market.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

Detailed consideration has been given to the future use of the Old Royal high school in conjunction with the Scottish Office and the House authorities. An announcement on that will be made shortly.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Science and Engineering

36. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what initiatives he is taking to promote a greater interest by young people in science and engineering.

Mr. Waldegrave: My hon. Friend is right to highlight the importance of encouraging young people to take an interest in science and engineering. This campaign which I launched last month includes a range of activities aimed at young people. In particular, the Office of Science and Technology is providing grants of £150,000 for projects involving school children.

41. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many scientists and engineers there are employed in Britain in absolute numbers and as a percentage of the work force; and what is the average for Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries.

Mr. David Davis: The spring 1993 labour force survey indicated that of just over 24 million employees, just over 1·5 million, or 6·7 per cent., held a higher education qualification in a science, engineering or technological subject. According to OECD figures, which are based on 25 to 34-year-olds only, in 1991 there were about 770 science and engineering graduates per 100,000 of the United Kingdom labour force. This compares with a mean for the OECD of 633 per 100,000.

37. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the costs of the citizens charter, to the latest possible date.

Mr. David Davies: The citizens charter applies to all public services, and this is reflected in their individual expenditure programmes. Centrally, the cost of the charter unit between the inception of the citizens charter and 31 December 1993 was £6,870,549.

38. Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further plans he has to make the citizens charter justiciable.

Mr. Waldegrave: The strength of the citizens charter lies in raising the standard of public services. We have no plans to make it legally enforceable. However, where necessary, specific charter provisions are backed by legislation.

Civil Service

39. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has had from staff organisations regarding his plans to introduce changes to the civil service.

Mr. David Davis: The Government keep in touch with the civil service unions on key issues as they arise.

Science White Paper

40. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what response he has received from industrialists and academics for the technology foresight proposals set out in the science White Paper.

Mr. Waldegrave: Industrialists and academics have welcomed the technology foresight proposals set out in the White Paper. Well over 3,000 individuals, representing companies, academic institutions, Government Departments and other organisations have been consulted.

Research Programmes

42. Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what research programmes he has authorised directly connected to his Government's commitments at the United Nations conference on environment and development.

Mr. Waldegrave: The research councils already make a major contribution to the strategic areas addressed by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development through established and developing research programme, which are reviewed annually. The Government's commitments post-Rio did not include an undertaking to commission new research programmes in any particular area.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil service posts have now been included in executive agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Over 346,000 civil servants, 60 per cent. of the total, are now working in 91 executive agencies and other organisations operating on next steps lines. Functions covering over a further 88,000 civil servants are under consideration for agency status.

Public Bodies

Mr. Straw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consideration he has given to the establishment of a national register of members of appointed public bodies and authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government have no proposal to establish a United Kingdom-wide register of members of appointed public bodies and authorities. It is normal practice for the names of members of public bodies to appear in the individual body's annual report. Public bodies should always be ready to provide a list of their membership and the organisation's postal address at which members may be contacted.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what requirements are made in respect of members and appointed public bodies and authorities as to the availability to the public to their names, addresses, telephone numbers, occupations, political affiliations and financial interests.

Mr. Waldegrave: Because of the diversity in the nature and functions of these bodies, there are no general requirements. "Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs): A Guide to Departments" states that Departments are responsible for ensuring that appropriate rules of conduct are brought to the attention of candidates for membership; that the legislation founding NDPBs with trading or other financial objectives should include safeguards against conflicts of financial interest; that Departments considering restrictions on business appointments by NDPB board members should seek legal advice; and that members of NDPBs are expected to follow the long-standing rules on participation in political activities. For those bodies which are not NDPBs, Departments are expected to make separate provisions.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Natural Environment Research Council.

Mr. Waldegrave: The current members of the Natural Environment Research Council are:

Mr. R. Malpas, CBE, FEng (Chairman)
Dr. Eileen Buttle (Acting Chief Executive)
Professor J. R. L. Allen, FRS
Professor G. S. Boulton, FRS
Dr. P. J. Bunyan
Dr. M. J. Carter
Professor W. G. Chaloner, FRS
Lord Chorley
Dr. D. J. Fisk
Dr. I. J. Graham-Bryce
Mr. E. R. Hassall
Professor M. P. Hassell, FRS
Professor B. J. Hoskins, FRS
Professor H. E. Huppert, FRS
Professor P. S. Liss
Dr. R. J. Pentreath
Professor D. A. Ritchie, FRSE
Dr. G. W. Robinson
Professor J. I. Sprent, FRSE
Professor S. A. Thorpe, FRS

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Board for Research Councils.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Advisory Board for the Research Councils was abolished on 31 December 1993.

Roads

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 698, how may private citizens obtain information relating to local authorities cost-benefit analysis calculations in respect of local highway schemes.

Mr. Waldegrave: Private citizens should write to the director of transport within the relevant local authority.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what provisions of the citizens charter assist private citizens wishing to ascertain the background assumptions and method of calculation for cost-benefit analysis prepared by local authorities in respect of local road schemes.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are no such provisions within the citizens charter. However, local authorities have discretion to disclose what information they see fit. There are also statutory requirements within the Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985 which requires local authorities to provide members of the public with information of this type.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 698, regarding cost-benefit analysis carried out by local authorities in respect of bypass schemes, what powers he has to compel local authorities to disclose this information to citizens.

Mr. Waldegrave: Ministers do not have such powers over local authorities.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Personal Pensions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of those covered by personal pensions at the rebate-only level are entitled only to the minimum benefits needed to contract out of state earnings-related pensions.

Mr. Hague: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Langbaurgh (Mr. Bates) on 30 November 1993 at column 433.

National Insurance Rebate

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the progress of his discussions on the reconsideration of the national insurance rebate for those contracted out of state earnings-related pensions and in particular the possibility of changing an age-related rebate.

Mr. Hague: The Government are committed to considering options for a new system of rebates related to age for personal pension holders and possibly other contracted-out schemes. A consultation exercise was conducted between 10 December 1993 and 15 January 1994. We are now considering the responses received.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps the Chancellor has taken to promote the citizens charter in respect of the Child Support Agency and discrimination against men.

Mr. Burt: The Child Support Agency is committed to the principles of public service set out in the citizens charter. This commitment is underpinned by its own client charter, published in April 1993 at the agency's launch.

The agency's charter sets out the standards of service that clients using its services are entitled to expect, and is freely available from agency offices. A leaflet explaining these standards is sent out automatically with every child support maintenance application or enquiry pack.

A basic principle of the Child Support Act is that parents should provide financial support for their children whenever they can afford to do so, whatever their relationship may be with each other. Child maintenance is calculated using a formula which assesses the ability of both parents to contribute towards the upkeep of their children, irrespective of which parent has day-to-day care of them.

Income Support

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to monitor the circumstances of income support claimants resident in care or nursing homes to ensure that the placement being funded is appropriate to their particular circumstances.

Mr. Burt: Under the community care scheme people who need financial help to enter residential care or nursing homes have their care needs assessed by their local authority who are also responsible for placement and funding. Responsibility for monitoring the new scheme rests with the Department of Health.

For claimants with preserved rights to the special limits of income support payment is made depending on the registration category of the home.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if people eligible for income support disability premium on the grounds of incapacity, but not receiving severe disablement allowance or incapacity benefit, will be eligible from April 1995 for payment of that premium from the 53rd week of incapacity.

Mr. Burt: From April 1995, for those who have no other means of entitlement to the disability premium, the period of incapacity needed to qualify will be 52 weeks.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if people eligible for income support disability premium only by reason of receipt of severe disablement allowance will be entitled from April 1995 to payment of the premium from the 53rd week of incapacity.

Mr. Burt: Severe disablement allowance will continue to be payable after 28 weeks incapacity, and receipt of severe disablement allowance will continue to bring entitlement to the disability premium.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if people claiming the income support disability premium on grounds of incapacity, but not in receipt of severe disablement allowance or incapacity benefit, will undergo the new incapacity test after the first 28 weeks of incapacity.

Mr. Burt: People receiving income support because of their incapacity will be expected to undergo the new incapacity test in the same way as anyone else who is claiming a social security benefit on the basis of being incapable of work.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were taken off invalidity benefit in Fife in 1993 and in (a) the first three months and (b) the last three months of 1993.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if existing claimants of invalidity benefit who pass the new incapacity test will continue to receive benefit at the rate of their previous invalidity benefit if (a) they start therapuetic work, (b) they start voluntary work, (c) they go abroad for fewer than eight weeks or (d) they go into hospital for fewer than eight weeks.

Mr. Scott: Existing claimants of invalidity benefit whose incapacity benefit is paid at their previous rate of invalidity benefit will continue to be entitled to incapacity benefit at that rate for as long as their period of incapacity for work continues unless an adult dependency increase ceases to be payable for more than eight weeks. In this case the new rules governing that increase will then apply.

Benefit would continue at the invalidity benefit rate for people who start working and satisfy the new therapeutic work rules or voluntary work rules. It would also continue for a period abroad of less than eight weeks, except in some exceptional circumstances when payment may cease. Where a person is in hospital for a period in excess of six weeks the normal hospital downrating rules will apply. At the end of that period in hospital, or a period of less than eight weeks abroad, the previous rate of benefit would again apply.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if existing claimants of invalidity benefit who pass the new incapacity test will continue to receive the same level of allowances for adult and child dependants as their previous invalidity benefit; and under what circumstances these allowances could be reduced or lost.

Mr. Scott: The replacement of invalidity benefit by incapacity benefit will make no difference to provision for child dependants for those people on invalidity benefit at the point of change. The rules on adult dependants will change but all those transferring from invalidity benefit will be protected, including those who are required to satisfy the new incapacity test. The Government propose, however, that the new rules should apply if an adult dependency increase ceases to be paid for more than eight weeks, or two years in the case of people who receive disability working allowance or undertake training for work.

Disability Premium

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated saving to his Department from delaying entitlement to the disability premium in (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Benefit	1995-96 £ million	1996-97 £ million
Income Support	20	25
Housing Benefit	*	*
Council Tax Benefit	*	*

Benefit	1995-96 £ million	1996-97 £ million
Total	20	25

Notes:

1. Estimates are expressed in constant 1993-94 prices and are rounded to the nearest £5 million. "*" denotes savings of less than £2·5 million.
2. Estimates show the savings that would arise if the policy of extending the qualifying period for the disability premium paid with the income-related benefits were introduced in isolation.

Christmas Bonus

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the value of the Christmas bonus in the next financial year if it had increased in line with (a) prices and (b) earnings since 1979.

Mr. Hague: Value of Christmas bonus in 1994-95 if increased in line with prices—£22·35. Value of Christmas bonus in 1994-95 if increased in line with earnings—£32·00.

Notes:

1. Prices revaluation based on movement in the Retail Prices Index.
2. Earnings revaluation based on movement in the New Series Index (Whole Economy) Unadjusted.
3. Amounts rounded to the nearest 5p at each uprating.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to extend the length of the qualifying period of incapacity for severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Scott: None.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will answer the questions from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Walton tabled for answer on 27 January regarding the appointments he makes to public bodies.

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given on 9 February 1994 at column 364-65, 10 February 1994 at column 392-93, and 11 February 1994 at column 497-98.

TRANSPORT

London Underground

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing for each London underground station and line, for the period January to December 1993, the number and length of station closures (a) exceeding 20 minutes during usual period for passenger travel, (b) exceeding one hour during usual period for passenger travel, (c) exceeding one day, (d) exceeding one week and (e) exceeding one month; which stations closed during the above period have yet to be re-opened; when each closed station will re-open; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: None of this information is held by the Department on a station-by-station basis. Line-by-line data for closures over 20 minutes and one hour are shown on the table. Longer station closures over the period in question have included Cannons Park station—closed between 9 August 1993 and 13 September 1993—Mornington Crescent station—closed since 24 October 1992—and a number of stations on the Central line which were open for ticket issue only between 24 and 29 November 1993.

Station closures—including non attributable causes between 3 January 1993 and 1 January 1994

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will publish a table showing for each London underground station and line, for each of the past 12 months and as a total over the same period, the number of non-violent crimes broken down into (a) theft from the person, (b) theft from the vehicle and (c) sexual offences; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a table showing for each London underground station and line, for each of the past 12 months and as a total over the same period, the number of violent crimes broken down into (a) assault and (b) robbery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The Department does not hold this information in exactly the form requested. The table breaks down the 1993 crime figures on a line-by-line basis between crimes of violence—including assaults—robbery and other crimes.

Rail Fares

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if franchise agreements for shared rail routes following privatisation will require mandatory inter-availability and common pricing for (a) full fare standard, (b) first class and (c) discounted tickets.

Mr. Freeman: It is our intention to include the following paragraph in the Secretary of State's formal guidance to the franchising director:

"In considering the need for tickets to be inter-available between franchisees, you should consider whether the benefits outweigh the likely benefits of price competition and service diversity. You should encourage appropriate arrangements for co-operation between operators on the pricing of tickets and apportionment of revenues."

In many cases, private operators will make arrangements to ensure that ticket inter-availability continues because it will be in their own interests to do so. However, the franchising director has said that he expects inter-availability normally to be a requirement of franchise agreements for season and full-fare standard and first class tickets on routes over which two or more franchisees operate. At the same time, there would be freedom for operators to introduce differential pricing and validity restrictions on discounted tickets in order to attract customers to their particular services.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he was first made aware by Eurotunnel that commencement of freight and passengers services through the channel tunnel would be delayed beyond 7 March and 6 May; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information was supplied to him by Eurotunnel about possible delays in opening the tunnel by its published deadlines of 7 March for freight and 6 May for passengers, before he agreed to extend the channel tunnel concession period for a further 10 years; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list the commissioning programmes and commissioning tests which have to be repeated or rescheduled before opening of the channel tunnel can take place; what information Eurotunnel has supplied to him about the likely additional time which will be needed for commissioning locomotives; what plans he has to meet with Eurotunnel to discuss the further delays in opening of the channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The probability of delay became clear at meetings between United Kingdom and French officials and Eurotunnel in January. Those contacts are continuing to cover the timing and content of outstanding commissioning tests for fixed equipment and rolling stock. Public statements about the programme can have commercial importance and financial consequences, and I think it should continue to be for Eurotunnel to make them.

Trains, Glasgow

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will publish a list of all correspondence between his Department and (a) Strathclyde passenger transport executive and (c) Lombard Tricity Finance regarding operational leasing for new trains in the Glasgow commuter network area; what assessment he has made of the implications of local government organisation for the immediate future of such operational leasing deals; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a list of all meetings held by Ministers or officials in his Department with Ministers or officials in any other Government Departments regarding operational leasing for new trains in the Glasgow commuter network area, giving (a) the dates of each meeting, (b) a full list of those attending and (c) the outcome of each meeting; whether any further such meetings are planned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: There have been no exchanges of correspondence between the Department and (a) Strathclyde passenger transport executive and (b) Lombard North Central about the Strathclyde rolling stock leasing deal. I wrote to Councillor Waugh on 5 November saying that I was aware of nothing in the Government's proposals for local government reform in Scotland that would alter the Accounts Commission's view that it would be in order for the regional council to conclude the leasing deal.

My officials and I attended meetings in November and December 1993 with Scottish Office Ministers and officials, present at which were representatives of Strathclyde region and Strathclyde passenger transport executive. These meetings discussed a range of issues including the leasing deal and concluded that that issue was primarily a matter for the local authority to resolve. A further meeting is planned for later this month at which representatives of Lombard North Central will be present.

Probationary Drivers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce a "P" sign for probationary drivers.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 9 February by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friend, the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) at column 270.

British Rail

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings he has held with British Rail concerning the operation and funding of the Barking to Gospel Oak line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend and I regularly have meetings with British Rail management. None has been held specifically to discuss the Barking to Gospel Oak line.

Commuter Car Traffic

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average volume of commuter car traffic entering (a) Greater London and (b) central London per day for each of the last 10 years; and what are his predictions for the next five years.

Mr. Norris: The available information is given in the following table:

Cars entering London daily between 7 am and 10 am

Thousands

	London boundary cordon	Central London cordon
1983	231	[1]—
1985	[1]—	127
1986	235	[1]—
1987	[1]—	123
1989	249	127
1991	[1]—	123

[1] Not available.

No predictions have been made of traffic five years ahead but over the longer term growth is expected to continue broadly in line with previous trends. This would give an increase of around one per cent. a year in the number of cars entering Greater London during the morning peak but no change in the number entering central London.

M25

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost per mile at 1994 prices of the construction of the M25; and what will be the cost at 1994 prices of the construction of a widened M25.

Mr. Key: The cost of building the M25 was nearly £1,000 million which gives a price of approimately £6·85 million per mile. The price base in 1986 when the M25 was completed, was similar to the current level according to the road construction price index. Using current prices the estimated cost of widening the M25 to four lanes is £7.59 million per mile. The estimated costs of the link roads proposed between junctions 12 and 16 work out at £15.45 million per mile. Proposals for other sections considered to need capacity beyond dual four-lane carriageways have not been assessed in sufficient detail to give comparative figures.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the widening of the M25; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The plans for the further development of the M25 were announced by my right hon. Friend last July. Subject to anything that might emerge from the review of the national road programme, I have no reason to reconsider that strategy.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many visits abroad the Minister of State for Public Transport made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Freeman: I made four trips abroad during 1993.

Place and purpose	Cost (£)
Bonn/Berlin
To meet the German Transport Ministry and Deutsches Bundesbahn for discussions on Rail Privatisation in Germany and to promote British Railway supply industry in Germany	826.97
Paris
To meet the French Transport Ministry for discussions on Channel Tunnel security issues and to visit GEC'S factory in Ayte to review progress on Eurostar trains	320.20
China
To meet Chinese Ministry officials for discussions on railway issues	[1]268.000
Paris
To meet the French Transport Ministry for discussions on Channel Tunnel security issues	242.00

[1] Engagement undertaken during private holiday.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many visits abroad the Minister for Transport in London made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Norris: I made five trips abroad during 1993.

Place and purpose	Cost (£)
Chicago
To study parking enforcement and adjudication systems	1,274.12
Paris
To attend the Paris Air Show	813.89
Brazil
To deliver a paper and chair a session on alcohol, drugs and traffic safety as part of the annual conference of the International Disciplinary Group of Studies on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence	3,099.58

To study public transport operations and congestion charging systems	5,029.57

Belfast International Airport

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what broad criteria his Department requires operators to meet when applying for a licence to operate services out of Belfast international airport; what applications he has received to run (a) transatlantic routes and (b) other routes from Aldergrove; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The criteria for the grant of an operating licence are laid down in EC Council Regulation 2407/92. The criteria relate principally to the adequacy of financial resources, fitness and insurance. In addition holders of operating licences must be majority owned and effectively controlled by EC member states or their nationals.

Holders of EC operating licences do not need formal permission to operate scheduled or charter services within the EC provided that traffic rights are available under Council Regulation 2408/92. Carriers planning scheduled services outside those allowed by EC regulations will in most cases need to be formally designated by their authorities under the relevant bilateral air services agreements.

The Secretary of State for Transport gave exceptional permission outside the terms of the United Kingdom/United States air services agreement in April 1993 for American Trans Air to operate services between New York and Belfast, to enable Northern Ireland to have direct services to the United States which until then it did not have. The Department currently has a further application from American Trans Air for permission to operate fifth freedom services between Belfast and Riga.

Within Europe, the Civil Aviation Authority is considering two licence applications for services from Belfast international to the Isle of Man and Reykjavik respectively.

Stansted Airport

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last visited London Stansted airport.

Mr. MacGregor: I last visited London Stansted airport on Sunday, 20 June 1993, when I returned from Luxembourg to Stansted following a special EC Transport Council meeting.

Lorries

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received in response to his proposed changes to the London night-time and weekend lorry ban.

Mr. Norris: I have received various representations from hon. Members, noble Lords, Members of the European Parliament, London borough councillors, the London Boroughs Transport Committee, the Freight Transport Association and members of the general public. Many of these are seeking clarification of the proposals.

Executive Agencies

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the effect on each executive agency within his Department of the recently announced £25 million reduction in running costs.

Mr. MacGregor: The recently announced reduction in running costs compared to the PES 1992 baseline applies to the Department's gross running cost control total. Of the Department's five executive agencies, only the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's running costs fall within the control total. DVLA will reduce running costs in 1994-95 by efficiency savings that were already planned as part of its target setting and planning arrangements.

Foreign Airlines

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of existing regulations for the safety of foreign airlines flying into and from British airports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Minimum safety standards for foreign aircraft are set by the International Civil Aviation Organisation. The United Kingdom is bound to recognise certificates of airworthiness issued according to these standards. Where there are indications of failure to meet ICAO standards, the Department asks the aeronautical authorities of the country concerned to investigate urgently and identify whether ICAO standards have been breached and, if so, to detail what measures have been taken to rectify the position. The Civil Aviation Authority also has powers to detain foreign aircraft where they consider there has or could be a serious breach of safety. It is also open to the United Kingdom to refuse operating permission for a non-EC carrier failing to meet ICAO standards.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who are the members currently appointed to the traffic commissioners/licensing authorities.

Mr. Key: The names and traffic areas of the traffic commissioners/licensing authorities are as follows:

Traffic commissioner/Licensing authority	Traffic area
Air Vice-Marshal Ronald Ashford, CBE (Senior Traffic Commissioner)	Western Traffic Area
Mr. Martin Albu	North Western Traffic Area
Mr. Michael Betts	Scottish Traffic Area
Brigadier Compton Boyd	Eastern Traffic Area
Mr. John Pugh	South Wales Traffic Area and West Midland Traffic Area
Brigadier Michael Turner	South Eastern and Metropolitan Traffic Area
Mr. Keith Waterworth	North Eastern Traffic Area

NORTHERN IRELAND

Pensioners

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people of pensionable age in Northern Ireland are currently also receiving income support; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The information which is available shows that at 30 November 1993, there were 61,382 income support claimants in receipt of pensioner premiums in Northern Ireland.

Shipyards

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide the same level of assistance to Harland-Wolff Ship Repair Division Northern Ireland as is available to German and Dutch shipyards in 1994.

Mr. Tim Smith: It is the practice of the Government to provide intervention funding within the limits set by the European Commission in respect of eligible shipbuilding projects in the United Kingdom. The Government have consistently taken the view that priority should be given to protecting the builders of new ships, rather than those who repair or refit them. At the request of the Shipbuilders and Shiprepairers Association the Government recently reviewed this policy but have decided that it should remain unchanged.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will investigate assistance available to shipyards and ship repairers in other European Union countries and provide an equal level of support in Northern Ireland to make tendering for major refitting work a realistic option.

Mr. Tim Smith: Assistance available for shipbuilding and conversion projects in other European Community countries is a matter for the relevant authorities in the country concerned. It is not the policy of the United Kingdom Government to provide direct aid towards ship conversion. In certain circumstances alterations to ships carried out by United Kingdom yards can be considered for support under the home shipbuilding credit guarantee scheme. The seventh directive on aid to shipbuilding does not permit the granting of assistance for shiprepair.

Company Records

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when and why the company records of SRC Components Ltd. and Canira Technical Corporation Ltd. were removed from Companies house, Belfast.

Mr. Tim Smith: The company records of SRC Composites Ltd. and Canira Technical Corporation Ltd. are, and always have been, held by the Registry of Companies, Department of Economic Development, IDB House, 64 Chichester street, Belfast, BT1 4JX. There is no record of a company called SRC Components Ltd.

Scottish Interconnector

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the actual cost of the proposed interconnector link project between Northern Ireland and Scotland.

Mr. Tim Smith: Northern Ireland Electricity plc estimates the total cost of the project to be £175 million at December 1992 prices.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations he has had with regard to the contract and costs of the arrangement between Northern Ireland Electricity and Scottish Electric in respect of the interconnector project.

Mr. Tim Smith: None. This is a matter for the two parties concerned, NIE plc and Scottish Power plc.

Social Security Offices

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the social fund budget for each social security office in Northern Ireland in each of the last four years, the numbers of (a) loans and (b) community care grants applied for, the numbers awarded and their total values.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. Wylie to Mr. John Hume, dated 10 February 1994:

As Chief Executive of the Social Security Agency I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on Social Fund budgets, applications and awards.

The information is not held in the form you have requested but I have set out the available data in the attached tables. Details for each Social Security Office can only be supplied for the period 1 April 1989 to 31 March 1991. From April 1991 the Social Fund has been managed on a District basis and I am therefore providing information from that date for each District.

You may be interested to know that information about the budget allocations, the number of crisis loans, budgeting loans and community care grants applications processed, the number of awards and the amount paid is available in the Library under Social Fund Data. The figures are updated on a monthly basis.

As the tables accompanying this letter are too long to be printed in the Official Report, arrangements will be made for a copy to be deposited in the Library.

I hope you will find this information helpful.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available about social fund budgets in each of the past four years to indicate the pattern of priority categorisation constraints for each social security office in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. However, I understand that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what evaluation and comparative analysis has been conducted by the Department of Health and Social Services or the Social Security Agency of the distribution of the social fund budget with regard to equality of treatment and need targeting across all districts; and if he will publish that research.

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Health and Social Services and the Social Security Agency regularly monitor and evaluate the working of the social fund and information of the relative levels of need is one of the factors taken into account in allocating budgets to districts. Details of the basis of allocation and district allocations for 1993-94 have been placed in the Library.

Nurses

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total number of (a) whole-time equivalent registered nurses, (b) whole-time equivalent unregistered nurses and (c) whole-time equivalent nurses in training in Northern Ireland for each year from 1988 onwards.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

Whole-time equivalent nursing staff employed in Northern Ireland health and personal social services and nurses in training

Nurse type	September 1988	September 1989	September 1990	September 1991	September 1992	September 1993

HEALTH

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who are the members currently appointed to the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration.

Dr. Mawhinney: The current members of the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration are:

C. Brandon Gough, Esq. (Chairman)
Douglas T. Boyd, Esq.
Ms Tina Boyden
Ms Sally Field
Dr. Elizabeth Nelson
Professor George F. Thomason, CBE

There are currently two vacancies as the terms of Mr. Anthony J. P. Vineall and Mr. Dennis Fredjohn expired with the publication of the 23rd report.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who are the members currently appointed to the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine.

Mr. Sackville: The current members of the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine are:

Mr. Michael Bett, CBE (Chairman)
Mr. Jan Hildreth
Miss Anne Machie, OBE
Dr. Gillian Raab
Professor George F. Thomason, CBE
Miss Diana Wittingham

There are currently two vacancies as the terms of Dame Anne Mueller, DCB and Mrs. Rachel Pickavance expired with the publication of the 11th report.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Mathew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by her Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Secretary of State in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's travel costs are not budgeted separately from those of other Ministers. The travel and subsistence figures, excluding the cost of services provided by the Government car service, for all Ministers and their private office staff and those in the parliamentary relations unit are as follows:

	Travel and Subsistence
Financial Year	Domestic £	Overseas £
1992-93
planned	[1]51,619
actual	49,296	11,085
1993-94
planned[2]	70,000	50,000
actual[3]	46,138	57,641

[1] No specific sum allocation for domestic or overseas expenditure.
[2] Funds increased to take account of price increases, the addition of an extra Minister and private office and for commitments to visits overseas.
[3] To December 1994.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many visits abroad the Minister of State made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State made three overseas visits at an estimated cost of £5,526. Two of these visits were to attend meetings of Ministers of the European Community Health Council, while the third was a fact finding visit to the United States of America in connection with his ministerial responsibilities.

Pacing

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals carry out pacing and pacing follow-up in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sackville: According to the national pacemaker database there are 133 centres providing pacing and pacing follow-up in the United Kingdom. A list of these centres will be placed in the Library.

Contraceptive Pill

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to limit the national health service prescribing of the contraceptive pill and make it available in pharmacies without NHS prescription; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Junior Doctors

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines she has for freedom of speech by junior hospital doctors.

Dr. Mawhinney: The management executive advice "Guidance for staff on relations with the public and the media" was issued to national health service employers under cover of executive letter (93)51 on 8 June 1993. The guidance provides a framework within which local procedures can be developed to enable all NHS employees to raise concerns about health care issues. Copies of the executive letter and accompanying guidance are available in the Library.

Hepatitis B

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage carrier rate for hepatitis B among pregnant women in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: These data are not collected routinely but studies have shown carrier rates between one in 2,000 —0·05 per cent.—in rural areas and 1 in 100—1 per cent. —in some inner city areas.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which EC countries have a hepatitis B universal vaccination strategy in place.

Mr. Sackville: We understand that only Italy has a universal vaccination strategy in place; in addition, seven of the autonomous regions of Spain have introduced universal adolescent vaccination. All other European Union countries have a selective strategy aimed at particularly higher risk groups.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the carrier rate of hepatitis B in England per 1,000 population.

Mr. Sackville: The prevalance of hepatitis B carriage in the United Kingdom is low. Recent data from analysis of blood donations suggest that it is in the order of one in 1,500—0·07 per cent.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has of acquisition of hepatitis B by blood products in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: Confirmed cases of hepatitis B infection reported to the public health laboratory service's communicable disease surveillance centre—England and Wales—where the patient had a history of receiving blood or blood products within the United Kingdom during the previous six months, and where no other risk factors were present were:

	Number
1988	8
1989	4
1990	3
1991	3
1992	2

Figures for 1993 are still being received.

Infectious Diseases

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of polio, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, hepatitis B, mumps, measles, rubella, tuberculosis, haemophilia influenzae and meningitis were reported in England in 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Number of cases notified for polio, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, hepatitis B, mumps, measles, rubella, tuberculosis, haemophilus influenzae and meningitis in England for 1991 and 1992

	1991	1992
Polio	3	3
Diphtheria	2	8
Whooping Cough	4,908	2,171
Tetanus	8	6
Hepatitis B	471	481
Mumps	2,828	2,333
Measles	9,126	9,801
Rubella	6,917	6,024
Tuberculosis (all forms)	5,726	6,149
Haemophilus Influenzae	396	451
Meningitis (all forms)	2,558	2,361

Tobacco

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates she has made of decreases in consumption of tobacco as a result of the voluntary code on tobacco advertisements.

Mr. Sackville: In October 1992 the Department of Health published a discussion document, the "Effect of Tobacco Advertising on Tobacco Consumption", a copy of which is available in the Library, reviewing the evidence on the effects of tobacco advertising on tobacco consumption. The review did not identify any studies which seek to quantify the reduction in smoking that can be attributed to the voluntary agreement on tobacco advertising and promotion.

Lung Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) male and (b) female lung cancer deaths occurred in each region in 1993.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table for 1992, the latest year for which data are available:

Numbers of deaths from cancer of the trachea, bronchus and lung (ICD 162[1]) for males and females by regional health authority, 1992

Regional Health Authority	Males	Females

Hospital Beds, London

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital beds here were in each of the last five years in the area covered by the London implementation group.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information about the average daily bed availability in London for 1988-89 to 1992-93 is shown in the table.

Year	Number
1988-89	43,997
1989-90	41,947
1990-91	38,793
1991-92	36,045
1992-93	34,811

KHO3 return.

During the same period there was a 4·49 per cent. increase in the number of in-patients treated.

Referrals and Readmissions

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how second referrals and readmissions are recorded within the NHS patient volume record system; and what percentage of finished consultant episodes are second referrals and readmissions;

(2) pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) of 31 January, Official Report, column 531, how readmissions are recorded in finished consultant episode statistics.

Mr. Sackville: All admissions to national health service hospitals are recorded as consultant episodes, reflecting the use of resources by consultant specialists. Readmissions from any source are included in the count but cannot be separately identified. On admission to hospital, a patient commences a hospital spell which may include periods of care under more than one consultant. There are about 103 consultant episodes for every 100 spells in hospital. Patients referred to hospital consultants by general practitioners are usually seen in out-patients clinics. New referrals, including second referrals for the same condition, are recorded as new attendances, subsequent attendances are recorded as consultant initiated attendances. Second referrals to out-patient clinics cannot be identified separately.

Mental Health Legislation

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received since April 1992 suggesting amendments in the mental health legislation providing for trustees to manage a person's financial affairs if two doctors certify that this is required.

Mr. Bowis: None. The Law Commission is currently reviewing the law and procedures relating to decision making on behalf of mentally incapacitated adults and will publish its report later this year.

Nurses

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of newly qualified nurses completed their training in NHS hospitals (a) in London and (b) in England in the 12-month period ended in December 1993; and what percentage of them found full-time permanent employment (i) in London and (ii) in England in NHS hospitals.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance will be given to managers to measure the productivity of nurses in the NHS.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is currently drawing up guidance on the basic principles for local performance-related pay schemes.

Hospital Sales

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she is aware of to sell NHS hospitals to private health care providers.

Mr. Sackville: I am not aware of any.

Former Military Hospitals

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are in each region to invest in extending or adapting former military hospitals for NHS use; and how much it is planned to spend on each such hospital.

Mr. Sackville: There are currently discussions between the Ministry of Defence and the Department of Health about the future use of one hospital, the Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Woolwich which is due to close by 1998. Further details will be available later this year.

Cervical Smear Tests

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a table showing the average time patients currently wait for the results of cervical smear tests in each health authority area in England and Wales.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 9 December 1993 at column 325-26.

Community Health Sheffield Trust

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when and by whom a final decision will be made as to the land and buildings in the Sheffield area that will transfer to Community Health Sheffield trust.

Mr. Sackville: Trent regional health authority together with Sheffield District health authority and representatives of the proposed trust, will determine which land and buildings will transfer to Community Health Sheffield trust. Discussions are in progress and it is expected that a final decision will be reached by the end of March 1994.

AIDS

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the organisations involved in AIDS counselling, advice and information and the amount of grant each received from Government for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: The information for 1993-94 is shown in the table. Each of these voluntary organisations includes HIV/AIDS counselling advice and information among its activities to a greater or lesser degree.

[1] Care and resources for people affected by AIDS and HIV.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those hospitals and medical research facilities undertaking research of AIDS; and if she will list the amount of central Government grant each attracts.

Mr. Sackville: The main agency through which the Government support research into HIV and AIDS is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

In the current financial year it is estimated that the Government will fund research on HIV/AIDS to a value of £26,209,000.

The annual report of the MRC and "The Health and Social Care of People with HIV Infection and AIDS", which list the hospitals and medical research facilities currently undertaking AIDS/HIV research for the Department and for the MRC, are available in the Library.

Special Transitional Grant

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what have been the reasons for the delay in announcing how much of the special transitional grant was to be spent on non-local authority services; what assessment has been made of the impact of this delay on local authorities and other care providers; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The decision was announced as soon as we had considered all the relevant factors. Local authorities should always be committed to value for money through the mixed economy of care.

Health Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 116, whether any restrictions are placed on health authorities with regard to the use of capital receipts.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 24 January at column 116.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 116, what Treasury guidelines have been issued to health authorities, or health trusts, as to the use of capital receipts.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) her Department and (b) her agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each one the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Sackville: The information for 1993-94 will be placed in the Library. Decisions have not been made on the use of advertising for 1994-95.

Special Health Authorities

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the revenue and capital expenditure for each of the special health authorities within the four London regional health authorities' areas for 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: Information for the London postgraduate special health authorities is shown in the table.

Special health authority	Revenue Expenditure £	Capital Additions £
The Hospitals for Sick Children	65,197,843	19,392,220
The National Hospital for Neurology and Neurosurgery	33,819,688	11,945,668

Notes:

(a) Total additions of fixed assets purchased is used as the capital expenditure figure. Capital charges are included within revenue expenditure.

(b) Figures are provisional.

Mr. Fred Hoult

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Leeds Central (Mr. Fatchett), Official Report, 31 January, column 536, if he will name the companies of which Mr. Fred Hoult is a director.

Mr. Sackville: The directorships held by Mr. Hoult are:

Hoults Holdings Ltd.
Hoults Ltd.
Hoults Estate Ltd.
Hoults (London) Ltd.
Hoults (South West) Ltd.
Hoults (Cumberland) Ltd.
Wheelers of Gosforth Ltd.

Super Janet Computer Network

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the potential contribution of the academic computer network Super Janet to patient care; and what steps she is taking to preserve the confidentiality of any patient information transferred to such a network, and to ensure the security and integrity of any NHS system to which an external network might be connected.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is monitoring the work currently being undertaken at the Hammersmith and Queen Charlotte's hospitals to assess the potential benefits and problems associated with the use of the Super Janet network.

As regards the confidentiality of information, any person controlling personal health data who proposes to put them onto a computer network must abide by the requirements of the Data Protection Act 1984. In addition, the national health service-wide networking programme is addressing the security implications of connections to external networks including Super Janet.

Emergency Hospital Admissions

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what proportion the number of emergency admissions to hospitals in each health authority changed between 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Sackville: Nationally, the proportion of admissions to hospital which are non-elective has marginally declined. These account for some 47 per cent. of total recorded consultant episodes for the last three years, and it is estimated that over 80 per cent. of non-elective admissions are emergencies. Proportions of the total number of finished consultant episodes that are non-elective admissions by regional health authority for 1992-93 and 1993-94—forecast and subject to revision—are shown in the table.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the general practices in each health authority were fundholding on (a) January 1993 and (b) 1 January 1994.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information available centrally relates to the proportion of the population covered by fundholding practices in each regional health authority area. The figures for the first, second and third wave fundholders are shown in the tables.

Brain-damaged Patients

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will respond to the report of the health service committee "Failure to Provide Long Term NHS Care for a Brain Damaged Patient"; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The report to which the hon. Member refers was produced by the health service commissioner, not the health service committee. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 9 February at column 328.

Asthma (Road Traffic)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies are being made by her Department about the link between road traffic and child asthma; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is currently studying the effects on health from air pollutants from all sources. The Advisory Group on the Medical Aspects of Air Pollution Episodes, set up in 1990, and the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants, which was established in 1992, are examining the evidence with a view to estimating the likely effects of air pollution in the United Kingdom and to recommend research needed. The advisory group produced reports on ozone in 1991 and on sulphur dioxides, acid aerosols and particulates in 1992, and on the effects of oxides of nitrogen—one of the main pollutants from motor vehicles—at the end of 1993. Asthma is an important health issue and the Department is concerned about the rise in its incidence among all age groups. Further research is needed to help identify the underlying causes of this rise in incidence. Air pollution is one possibility, but investigation is also under way into other factors, such as the indoor environment, smoking habits and diet. The newly formed Medical Research Council institute for environment and health, funded by the Department and by the Department of the Environment, has made research into the health effects of air pollution its first priority. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 20 October 1993 at column 236.

Organ Transplants

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are currently on the waiting list for organ transplant of kidneys, liver and heart-lung respectively; how many were added to the list in each category in the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; how many had transplant operations; and how many died while waiting for a suitable donor organ.

Dr. Mawhinney: The figures give are for the United Kingdom and are provisional. They have been supplied by the United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority.

At 31 December 1993 there were 3,947 patients awaiting kidney transplants—including 29 kidney and pancreas transplants—111 awaiting livers and 409 awaiting hearts—including 172 heart and lungs. During the year to 31 December 1993 there were 1,701 kidney transplants—including 125 transplants from live donors and 14 kidney and pancreas transplants—520 liver transplants and 336 heart transplants—including 35 heart and lungs transplants.

The latest year for which information on patients joining the list and those who died while waiting for a suitable donor organ is available is 1992. There were 1,992 added to the waiting list for kidneys—including 22 kidneys and pancreas—537 for hearts—including 124 for heart and lungs—and 419 for livers. One hundred and thirty patients died while waiting for a suitable donor heart transplant —including 60 heart and lungs—and 53 died while waiting for livers.

Children (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by region the number of children on waiting lists for medical treatment for each year since 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on waiting lists for in-patient and day case treatment by regional health authority and specialty is given in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England". This is published twice yearly and copies are available in the Library. Information is given on waiting lists for various paediatric specialties, but the numbers of children and adults on waiting lists for other specialties are not counted separately.

NHS Employees

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost to the NHS in the last financial year of salary payments for NHS employees suspended on full pay.

Dr. Mawhinney: I will write to the hon. Member.

WALES

Health Provision

13. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of health provision in West Glamorgan.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend will announce his decision following the period of public consultation currently underway in the county.

Departmental Efficiency

14. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to improve the efficiency of his Department.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Office is already an efficient organisation successfully administering a very wide range of central Government functions throughout Wales. I am, nevertheless, continually looking for ways in which to improve its efficiency including, for example, through market testing and close controls on its running costs.

Labour Statistics

15. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) males and (b) females were unemployed in Wales at the latest available date; and what are the figures in percentage terms.

Mr. Redwood: Seasonally adjusted, there were 99,600 males and 26,500 females who were claimant unemployed in Wales in December 1993. These represent workforce-based unemployment rates of 13·6 per cent. and 4·9 per cent. respectively.

Tir Cymen

16. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what appraisal there has been of the take-up rate and the general success of the Tir Cymen pilot schemes in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: A pilot scheme was launched in July 1992 and is planned to run for five years. A full appraisal will take place towards the end of the period. The target for take-up of the scheme is to have 50 per cent. of eligible land entered within five years. To date some 25 per cent. has been entered. The indications are that the scheme is proving to be successful.

Welsh Development Agency

17. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the review of the management structure of the Welsh Development Agency.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Parliamentary Boundaries

18. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had concerning the re-distribution of parliamentary boundaries in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Whilst my right hon. Friend has responsibility for the appointment of one of the members of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales, overall responsibility for the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England and Wales rests with my right hon. and learned Friend, the Home Secretary. My right hon. Friend has received two representations in respect of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales' latest proposals.

National Curriculum

19. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will consult the Welsh Language Board regarding proposed changes to the national curriculum in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales, which supersedes the Curriculum Council for Wales on 1 April, will undertake consultations this year on proposals for revised national curriculum orders. I shall ensure that the authority consults the Welsh Language Board on revisions to the National Curriculum Order for Welsh.

M4 Relief Road

20. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he received during the consultation period on the proposal to extend the M4 relief road through the Gwent levels; how many of these representations approved of the Welsh Office proposal; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: A report on the results of the consultation and the issues raised is in preparation. The information requested will be made public when a decision is taken on whether or not to proceed with any of the published routes.

Sustainable Development

21. Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to promote sustainable development following the United Nations conference on environment and development.

Mr. Redwood: A number of important measures in support of sustainable development objectives are already underway in Wales, for example the Welsh Development Agency's major land reclamation programme which is returning derelict and contaminated land to beneficial use. Welsh Office Ministers are also keen to ensure that Wales makes an appropriate contribution to the follow up action planned on the recently published "UK Strategy on Sustainable Development", copies of which have already been distributed to key Welsh interests.

Quangos

23. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applicants for posts in Welsh quangos have notified the Secretary of State of their connections with the Tory party within the last two years.

Mr. Redwood: The information supplied by nominees to the register of candidates for public appointment is confidential.

25. Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress he is making in the elimination of bureaucracy, waste and mal-administration in the conduct of non-Governmental public bodies in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have impressed upon the chairmen of non-departmental public bodies the need for the highest standards of propriety in the conduct of public affairs in Wales. Steps have been taken to tighten up procedures and I am introducing new arrangements for monitoring and controlling the performance of bodies in Wales. I will make sure that both the number of bodies and appointments to them are strictly controlled.

Wind Farms

24. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the planning guidelines issued by his Department on the siting and construction of wind farms in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Guidance is contained in the annex to planning policy guidance note "Renewable Energy", which was published jointly by the Welsh Office and the Department of the Environment in February 1993.

Local Government Finance

26. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what have been the total credit approvals for capital spending for all the local authorities in Wales in the years 1986-87, 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94 at 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Total credit approvals used to finance local authority capital expenditure in Wales at 1993-94 prices are:

Year	£m
1991-92	326·803
1992-93	331·376
1993-94	[1]311·430

[1] Forecast

A comparable figure for 1986-87 is not available. A credit approval system was introduced in 1990-91: the previous system placed controls on authorities' total capital expenditure.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what rate support grant Clwyd county council would receive in 1993-94 if it were treated for standard spending assessment purposes as the average within Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: An authority's revenue support grant, share of redistributurbed non-domestic rates and council tax income at a standard level, together equal its standard spending assessment. The standard spending assessment per head of population for county councils in Wales for 1993-94 is £675. For Clwyd it is £644, 95·4 per cent. of the Wales average.

Education

27. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new initiatives he intends to take to improve education in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: We have a comprehensive programme of reforms to improve standards in education and to provide improved opportunities for all. We are currently implementing the wide-ranging provisions of the Education Act 1993 and have introduced further legislative proposals on teacher training matters. We announced on 5 January the changes that will be made as a result of the review of the national curriculum. These changes will be implemented promptly and fully. They will remove bureaucracy and over-prescription and substantially ease the burden on teachers.

Housing

28. Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking in relation to the recent housing policies of the Development Board for Rural Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Public Accounts Committee, at a hearing on 24 January, took evidence from the accounting officer of the Welsh Office and the chief executive of the Development Board for Rural Wales about matters raised in the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General on the board's 1992-93 annual accounts. The Committee will report in due course on the results of its inquiry. I do not wish to anticipate or pre-empt that report. The DBRW introduced revised rules and procedures for housing allocations in September 1993 which meet the statutory requirements.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the development of national health service trusts in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are currently 14 operational NHS trusts in Wales and my right hon. Friend announced on 19 November 1993 that he was establishing a further eight trusts with an operational date of 1 April 1994.

Additionally, public consultation on applications received from north unit—Morriston hospital—in West Glamorgan and Taff Ely health unit—East Glamorgan hospital—Mid Glamorgan has now ended. In the light of representations received, and taking account the individual merits of both applications, my right hon. Friend has decided to establish these units as NHS trusts also to become operational from this April. The orders giving effect to these decisions have been signed today. I will announce shortly the details on the chairmen and non-executive directors of these further NHS trusts.

This announcement today means that, from april 1994, some 90 per cent. of acute services and 85 per cent. of community services in Wales will be delivered by NHS trusts.

Pupil-teacher Ratio

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the pupil-teacher ratio in Welsh in each local education authority for pupils preparing for key stage 4.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not available.

Welsh Language

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will discuss with Clwyd education authority and the Welsh Language Board the refusal by the Associated Examinations Board to translate A-level physical exercise examination papers into the Welsh language; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The translation of the A-level physical education paper offered by the Associated Examinations Board is a matter for the board to consider. Discussions are continuing between the individual school concerned, AEB and the Welsh Joint Education Committee to make appropriate arrangements for pupils to take the 1994 examinations in the language of their choice.

Welshpool Bypass

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any specific proposals for safety improvement on the Welshpool bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Action has already been initiated as a result of driver behaviour on the bypass and, as is normal practice with newly improved sections of trunk road, the situation is being closely monitored.

A detailed review has been completed and the opinions of the local highway authority and the police have been obtained. Works already undertaken to improve driver awareness include the relocation and modification of some direction signs and the provision of additional warning signs; the introduction of ladder hatched centre lines to discourage overtaking and reduce speeds; the addition of white hatching to hard strips through each junction to emphasise the carriageway edges and to reduce speeds; the provision of extra chevron plates at roundabouts and the re-positioning of tourist information signs away from junctions.

Further measures are being considered including the banning of right turn manoeuvres from Salop road.

Housing Subsidy

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the amount of housing revenue account subsidy paid per council house to each district council in Wales for the years 1992-93 and 1993-94, showing the percentage increase or decrease in each case.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A wide range of factors affect subsidy calculations. Subsidy is not paid on a per dwelling basis alone.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the level of notional rent set by his office for the purposes of calculating housing subsidy for each district council in Wales, and for Wales as a whole, for each financial year since 1991-92 and for 1994-95.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Authorities calculate guideline rents according to a formula within the housing revenue account subsidy determination for the relevant year. The guideline rents calculated by each authority for the years 1991-92 to 1993-94 are given in the following table. The figures shown for Wales have been derived from these figures.

The Department's estimate of guideline rents for 1994-95 were given to the hon. Member in my reply on Friday 4 February 1994.

Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are unemployed in Wales and in Clwyd.

Mr. Redwood: In December 1993, the unadjusted numbers of claimant unemployed in Clwyd and Wales were 15,866 and 128,299 respectively.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation in relation to its consultancy contract with Quadrant public relations.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what communications he has received from the European Commission on the future of the Cardiff bay site of special scientific interest; and if he will place the relevant correspondence in the Library.

Mr. Redwood: The Government have had various contacts with the Commission about the issue of Cardiff bay. In accordance with long-standing convention, the substance of the correspondence on this matter is confidential.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the complaint by the World Wide Fund for Nature to the European Commission in relation to the future of the Cardiff bay site of special scientific interest; and if he will place these representations in the Library.

Mr. Redwood: I have received a number of representations about the complaint by the World Wide Fund for Nature to the EC Commission. Some appear to have been inspired by the fund's "Factsheet" of September 1993 which contained acknowledged errors.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of Cardiff Bay development corporation in relation to the corporation's public relations agents soliciting the names of companies employed by the city council from council employees.

Mr. Redwood: I have had none personally and have not raised the issue with others.

Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales in relation to (a) the advertising of the vacant post of executive director, (b) additions or subtractions in respect of the membership of the board and (c) completion of the management reorganisation plan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The appointment of a new chief executive is a matter for the chairman and the board of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales. However, I would expect the chairman to keep the Welsh Office fully informed of the actions that are being taken.

I have had no consultations with the chairman about any membership issues.

The management reorganisation of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales was fully implemented on 17 January 1994.

Quango Guidelines

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue new guidelines to the Welsh quangos on the conduct of public relations consultancy contracts so as to debar the interference with commercial printing contracts let by third parties.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has given to the chairman of (a) all quangos in Wales and (b) Cardiff bay development corporation on the conduct of public relations consultants to whom they give contracts.

Mr. Redwood: I have issued no such guidelines to non-departmental public bodies in Wales.

Health Board Rights

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he will issue in relation to the rights of members of health authority or trust boards with respect to the principles of open government and its applicability to the operations of those authorities and trusts.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend wrote to health authorities and NHS trusts about corporate governance matters on 27 January and indicated that the Department of Health was undertaking further work on open government. It will be consulting on their recommendations in early summer and we propose to undertake parallel consultation in Wales.

A copy of the letter is being placed in the Library of the House.

Nurses

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of (a) whole time equivalent registered nurses, (b) whole time equivalent unregistered nurses and (c) whole time equivalent nurses in training in Wales for each year from 1988 onwards.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information available, which relates to nursing and midwifery staff, is given in the following tables:

Directly employed NHS nurses[1]

	Registered[2]	Unregistered[3]	Learners[4]
1988	17,507	7,076	3,337
1989	17,849	7,070	3,118

1989	1,541	2,838
1990	1,927	3,634
1991	2,298	4,575
1992	2,623	5,274

[1] Staff in post (whole-time equivalents as at 30 September). Includes staff employed by the Welsh Health Common Services Authority. The use of locally devised payscales from 1991 onwards may affect the comparability of figures as these staff cannot be allocated centrally to a specific staff group and are not, therefore, included in the table.
[2] Enrolled nurse and above in 1988, grade C and above thereafter.
[3] Nursing auxiliaries and nursery nurses in 1988, grades A and B thereafter.
[4] Pupil and student nurses. Since the autumn of 1991 student nurses have been classified as students and are no longer included in the NHS staff figures. Staff included here are students finishing courses begun before this date. However at 1 October 1993 there were about 1,900 Project 2000 nursing students in Wales.
[5] Staff in post as at 1 October (whole-time equivalents). All these staff are registered nurses.
[6] Staff in post as at 31 March (whole-time equivalents) as notified by the individual premises.

Health Service

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received with respect to the suitability for appointment, reappointment or continuation in office of the chairmen of present health authorities or health trusts and trusts-designate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Over the last 18 months I have received around 20 representations on these matters.

DEFENCE

Engagements (Extension)

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: Too ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the available figures for each year since 1990-91 on the numbers and proportions of those officers and other ranks in each service who have applied for extension of their original engagement.

Mr. Hanley: The figures as requested for the Royal Air Force are set out in the tables. The Royal Navy and Army could provide this information in the exact form requested only at disproportionate cost; details on extensions granted are, however, set out in the tables.

Royal Air Force: applications for extension of service

Financial year	Officers	Airmen/ women	Total	Total trained strength at 31 March	Proportion of trained strength who applied for extension (Per cent.)
1990-91	520	1,971	2,491	82,621	3·0
1991-92	573	3,848	4,421	81,973	5·4
1992-93	339	4,262	4,601	78,863	5·8

Royal Naval Services: extensions of service granted

Financial year	Officers	Ratings	Total	Total trained strength at 31 March	Proportion of trained strength who were granted an extension (Per cent.)
1990-91	92	933	1,025	57,078	1·8
1991-92	22	703	725	56,052	1·3
1992-93	33	437	470	56,064	0·8

Army: extensions of service granted

Financial year	Officers	Soldiers	Total	Total trained strength at 31 March	Proportion of trained strength who were granted an extension (Per cent.)
1990-91	876	944	1,820	137,240	1·3
1991-92	1,002	929	1,931	136,514	1·4
1992-93	818	827	1,645	133,366	1·2

Notes:

1. Figures include non-commissioned personnel who have applied for/been granted, an extension beyond their 22 year point.
2. Figures exclude personnel who have converted from Short Service Commissions to longer commissons and those whose service is extended automatically upon reaching a certain rank.

Premature Voluntary Release

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the latest available figures for each service, by rank and length of service, of applications for premature voluntary release, together with any available information on the reasons given.

Mr. Hanley: The breakdown by rank and service of the numbers of applications for premature voluntary release in the 12 months ended 1 October 1993, the latest date for which figures are available, is given in the table. Details of the length of service of applicants for premature voluntary release could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The reasons most frequently give for asking to leave prematurely are:

Civilian job offer
Disillusionment with service life
Lack of opportunities for promotion
Family/compassionate reasons

Applications for premature voluntary release in the 12 months ended 1 October 1993

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information is held by his Department on the proportion of low flying complaints which are made by persons who have not previously complained about low flying.

Mr. Hanley: Records are not maintained of the proportion of low flying complaints received from those who have not complained about the training before.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if details of complaints about low flying are held on a computer database by his Department.

Mr. Hanley: Yes.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities are made available to Royal Air Force strike/attack/reconnaissance aircrew deployed on operational duties to (a) Italy, (b) Turkey and (c) Saudi Arabia, for low flying training at less than 250 ft above ground level.

Mr. Hanley: All necessary training is undertaken prior to deployment.

Colonel Edward S. Cowan

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the official dates and engagements of Colonel Edward S. Cowan since July 1992 in regard to his position at the Ministry.

Mr. Hanley: Colonel Angus Edward Frances Cowan retired early from the Army on 12 August 1990 at his own request.

Royal Navy (Fishing Protection)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps is is taking to instruct the Royal Navy to protect British fishing activities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The Royal Navy Fishery Protection Squadron conducts fishery protection duties on behalf of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency under a contract arrangement.

Laser-guided Bombs

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the award of the contract for the low-level laser-guided bomb.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) on 3 February 1994 at column 907.

Defence Procurement Tender List

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidelines he has issued with respect to the validity of ISO9001 quality assurance systems certificates issued by Bureau Veritas UK for the purposes of the defence procurement tender list; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Bureau Veritas UK does not issue ISO9001 quality assurance systems certificates; neither does it hold national accreditation to do so.

Service Women (Pregnancy)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take measures to withdraw from any liability for compensation to dismissed service women whose dismissal related to pregnancy at a time when such a dismissal was public policy.

Mr. Hanley: My Department accepted at a High Court hearing in December 1991 that the policy of discharging service women on grounds of pregnancy was in breach of the EC Equal Treatment Directive 76/207 which came into effect on 9 August 1978. Consequently the Department has accepted liability to pay compensation to service women dismissed on pregnancy between that date and August 1990 when the policy was discontinued and maternity leave was introduced.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were placed in employment by Lewisham's job centres in each month since April 1992.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mrs. Bridget Prentice, dated 14 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of people placed into employment by Lewisham Jobcentres in each month since April 1992.

There are two Jobcentres in close proximity in the Lewisham district, Lewisham and Catford. Jobseekers from Lewisham also use the Catford Jobcentre so I have shown the information required for both of these offices on the tables attached.

I hope this is helpful.

Placings achieved by Lewisham and Catford Jobcentres April 1992 to March 1993

Acquired Rights Directive

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has made or is planning to make to the European Commission in response to the Commission's review of the employee acquired rights directive; whether he sought the views of the trade unions whose members are affected by the directive; and if he will publish the representations he has made.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government welcome the review of the acquired rights directive. The European Commission has not yet published any results of the review and the Government have not, therefore, made any representations in response to it. Any response will accordingly depend on any proposals that the Commission may bring forward following its review. The normal practice is for the Commission to consult social partners on any proposed changes to a directive, and for the Government to present an explanatory memorandum to Parliament. It is expected that this will be done in due course.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is set out in the table.

The Department is undertaking the following campaigns in 1993-94 budgeted to cost in excess of £10,000:

Campaign	Objective	Evaluation
Make It Your Business	To increase awareness of Investors in People and National Vocational Qualifications among senior managers	Pre- and post-campaign market research, measurement of direct response to the campaign (ie requests for further information)
1993 National Training Awards	To invite entries for the competition and to publicise the winners	Post-campaign market research, number of requests for entry packs to the competition
Career Development Loans	To invite enquiries about Career Development Loans	Market research and assessment of the number of enquiries received
Careers Service	To announce the availability of the Careers Service prospectus	Post-campaign market research
New Horizons for Women	To encourage women to diversify their participation in the workforce and in public life	Assessment of the number of people attending the New Horizons events.
Just the Job/New Measures	To raise awareness of Employment Service programmes among long-term unemployed people	Tracking research and take up of publications
Employer Campaign	To raise awareness and encourage the use of Jobcentre services among employers	Tracking research
Disability	To raise the awareness of disabled people and employers of the help available to disabled workers	Tracking research
Workstart	To promote the Workstart programme to employers in its pilot areas	Number of responses from employers
Jobfinders Grant	To launch the Jobfinders grant in its pilot areas	Number of people who take up the grant
Work Trials	To promote Work Trials to employers and the long-term unemployed	Number of places offered by employers and take up by unemployed people
Community Action	To launch Community Action to employers and the long-term unemployed	Numbers taking part in the programme

Note:
It is planned that the above campaigns will continue in 1994-95. New campaigns are planned to form the relevant groups about the modern apprenticeships programme and the new small firms training loan scheme.

Objective 3 Funding

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications have been submitted for EC funding under objective 3 for funds to assist with retraining in parts of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Until the negotiations on the objective 3 plan to use European social fund resources throughout Great Britain have been concluded, it is not possible for the Employment Department to approve any applications for ESF assistance. The Government submitted the objective 3 plan at the beginning of November 1993, and there have been a number of discussions since then. We continue to press upon the Commission the need for an urgent decision so that essential training for the unemployed is not disrupted.

Access to Work

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many companies applied for grants under the access to work scheme in each region during 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Access to work is not yet operational.

Job Interview Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many unemployed people took part in the job interview guarantee scheme in each region and in Great Britain as a whole in 1993; how many participants secured full-time or part-time employment with their sponsoring employers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 14 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the Job Interview Guarantee Programme.

The table attached shows the number of unemployed people who took part in or who were assisted by the Job Interview Guarantee in 1993. It also shows regional figures and Great Britain as a whole.

The information relating to numbers of people gaining employment includes those placed into both part-time and full-time jobs. Separate statistics are not collected on those going into part-time work.

I hope this is helpful.

Job interview guarantee January to December 1993

	Number of people assisted	Number of people placed into jobs

Income Support

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in each region and Great Britain as a whole were refused income support in 1993 because they were deemed to be not actively seeking work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department does not hold information about the number of income support claimants who are refused benefit on that ground.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment for each region and for Great Britain as a whole how many people who received unemployment benefit for 12 months were refused income support after being means-tested in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: I have been asked to reply.
The information requested is not available.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of disabled people out of work in each region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The following table shows the number of ILO unemployed people who, in response to questions in the summer 1993 labour force survey, said that they had a short-term or long-term disability or health problem which limited the kind of paid work that they could do.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people and what percentage of the labour force in each region and for Great Britain as a whole were classified as being in temporary employment in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: For the years from 1984 onwards, this information is available from the labour force survey and can be obtained via the Quantime LFS service available in the Library.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest estimates from the labour force survey, for each region, of the number and percentage of (a) all males, (b) all adults over 50 years of age and (c) all males between 50 and 65 years of age who are recorded as economically inactive; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Latest estimates from the summer 1993 labour force survey are given in the following table. The numbers who are economically inactive relate to those who are neither in employment nor ILO unemployed, and will therefore include, for example, all those who are looking after a home or are retired.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for each standard occupational and industrial classification (a) the numbers employed, (b) the numbers unemployed and (c) the numbers of long-term unemployed under the International Labour Organisation classification where previous occupation or employment fell within each classification for each region and Great Britain as a whole at the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: This information is available from the summer 1993 labour force survey and can be obtained via the Quantime LFS service available in the Library.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list for each region (a) the number of people unemployed, (b) the percentage of the total number who are unemployed and (c) the percentage of the labour force unemployed for 12 months or more for each month since January 1991; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list for each region (a) the number of people unemployed, (b) the percentage of the total number who are unemployed and (c) the percentage of the labour force unemployed for six months or more for each month since January 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is available from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Training

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many people were participating in (a) employment training, (b) employment action, (c) the enterprise allowance scheme and (d) youth training in each region and in Great Britain as a whole in 1992-93 and 1993-94 to date; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a table showing, for each region and for Great Britain as a whole, the destination of leavers from employment action, giving the most recent figures available and figures for each year since the scheme began, broken down by (a) full-time employment with their work experience employer, (b) full-time employment with another employer, (c) employment in their own business, (d) part-time employment, (e) voluntary employment, (f) another Government training programme, (g) full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit, (j) job club and (k) other; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will publish a table showing for each region and for Great Britain as a whole the destination of leavers from youth training, giving the most recent figures available and figures for each year since the scheme began, broken down by (a) full-time employment with their work experience employer, (b) full-time employment with another employer, (c) employment in their own business, (d) part-time employment, (e) voluntary employment, (f) another Government training programme, (g) full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit, (j) job club and (k) other; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will publish a table showing for each region and for Great Britain as a whole the destination of leavers from employment training, giving the most recent figures available and figures for each year since the scheme began, broken down by (a) full-time employment with their work experience employer, (b) full-time employment with another employer, (c) employment in their own business, (d) part-time employment, (e) voluntary employment, (f) another Government training programme, (g) full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit, (j) job club and (k) other; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will publish a table showing for each region and for Great Britain as a whole during 1993 how many unemployed disabled people participated in (a) employment training, (b) restart and (c) training and enterprise council schemes and the destinations of those participating; and if he will make a statement;

(6) if he will list for each training and enterprise council the total number of leavers from training courses and the number and percentage who went on to (a) full-time employment, (b) part-time employment, (c) further training, (d) a further course, (e) further education, (f) unemployment and (g) other destinations in each quarter of 1993; and if he will make a statement;

(7) if he will list for each training and enterprise council (a) the number of participating trainees who are over 40 years old, (b) the male to female ratio and (c) the number of disabled trainees; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: As the information is contained in a large number of tables, I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure on (a) employment training, (b) employment action, (c) the enterprise allowance scheme and (d) youth training in each region and in Great Britain as a whole in 1992-93 and 1993-94 to date; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is in the following tables for each of the Employment Department regions.

Earnings

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the average total weekly earnings in (a) each travel-to-work area and (b) Great Britain as a whole in (i) cash and (ii) current prices for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Information by each travel-to-work area is not available. The following tables provide details of average earnings by area at April of each of the last five years. The information on the retail prices index, all items, at April, to convert 1989 figures to 1993 prices is published in table 6.4 of the Employment Gazette and in table 26 of the annual supplement to "Economic Trends" for April of earlier years.

The majority of areas show a positive change in real earnings over the five-year period. Outside London and the south-east there is little evidence of any great disparity in earnings. Any differences that do exist result from the concentration of industries and occupations with relatively lower earnings in certain regions.

Job Clubs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing for each region and for Great Britain as a whole during 1993 (a) the number of job clubs in operation, (b) the number participating in job clubs and (c) the destinations of those participating, broken down by (i) full-time employment, (ii) part-time employment, (iii) self-employment, (iv) further participation in job club, (v) full-time education or training course, (vi) unemployment and (vii) other options; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 14 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about Jobclubs.

The attached table shows the number of Jobclubs open in December 1993, the number of people who joined Jobclub from 1 January to 31 December 1993 and the number who left during the same period to go into jobs, other positive outcomes and for other reasons.

Details of the number who joined Jobclub during the year have been given on the table as records of the number participating on the programe at any one time are not kept.

As the primary focus of Jobclub is on getting people into work we do not keep detailed statistics on the different destinations of Jobclub leavers. Included in the "other positive outcomes" category are those leaving to go into full-time education, training (including Training for Work), self-employment, or to join a temporary work programme. The "other leavers" category includes people who are still unemployed on leaving the Jobclub and those leaving for other reasons such as health problems, or taking up part-time education. There are no figures available to show how many people subsequently re-join a Jobclub.

A more detailed examination of the destination of Jobclub leavers was carried out in January 1991. This was based on a postal survey of individuals who joined in Autumn 1989. At that time 43 per cent. of respondents went into full-time employment, 10 per cent. into part-time employment, 2 per cent. into self employment, 14 per cent. joined Employment Training, 2 per cent. went into full-time education or training and the remaining 29 per cent. left for other reasons.

The Employment Service is planning a wide ranging evaluation of its programmes and services which lead to jobs. This should begin in spring 1994 and will, amongst other things, allow us to update our information abut the destination of leavers.

Jobclubs continue to be an effective and popular programme. We are now helping more people than ever before and almost half of those who join leave with a job to go to.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentres

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing the number of vacancies in jobcentres that were (a) temporary and (b) permanent in each quarter since December 1990 in each region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 14 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the numbers of vacancies in Jobcentres.

Tables showing the number of temporary and permanent vacancies notified to Jobcentres by region were published in Hansard on 8 December 1993, column 212 refers. The information covers the period from April 1987 to 8 October 1993.

I enclose a table which gives similar information for the latest available period, from 11 October 1993 to 7 January 1994.

I hope this is helpful.

Early Retirement

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many men took early retirement in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is not available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those topics on which it is not his practice to answer parliamentary questions; and if he will list any recent changes in the practice of his Department.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 9 February 1994]: There has been no change from the practice of this and previous Administrations, as described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May". Also, it is not this Department's practice to reply on matters that are "in confidence" or "commercial in confidence".

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those responsible for making appointments of (a) chairs and (b) members of the boards to each of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are two executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by the Lord Chancellor's Department: the Legal Aid Board and the Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board. The Lord Chancellor makes the appointments of both the chair and members of each of them.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, for each of the non-departmental bodies sponsored by his Department, whether the public has a statutory right to attend all board or committee meetings and to inspect (a) minutes of meetings, (b) the annual reports and (c) the annual accounts.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There is no statutory right to attend the board or committee meetings, or to inspect the minutes, of any of the Lord Chancellor's Department's non-departmental public bodies. However, as far as the tribunals are concerned, it is open to the public to attend the hearings.

The following bodies are required by statute to produce annual reports which are laid before Parliament:

Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct
Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board
Legal Aid Board
Council on Tribunals
Legal Aid Advisory Committee
Legal Aid Advisory Committee (NI)
Transport Tribunal
Law Commission

The first four of these bodies include their accounts in their reports; the others do not produce accounts. In addition:

—the annual report of the Advisory Council on Public Records is included in the annual report of the Keeper of Public Records which is required by statute to be laid before Parliament; and —the Judicial Studies Board produces periodic reports which are published by HMSO, but no accounts.

The remaining bodies produce neither reports nor accounts.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year since 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each year to 1995-96 for each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department, as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department has two executive non-departmental public bodies: the Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board and the Legal Aid Board.

Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board

	£ million
1990-91	0·290
1991-92	0·349
1992-93	0·231

The figure for 1990-91 was the cost of setting up the board, which has been inactive since March 1992. The costs in 1992-93 relate to on-going costs and the scaling down of its operations. No provision was made for its financing after 31 March 1993.

Legal Aid Board
Gross public expenditure

	£ million
1990-91	634
1991-92	886
1992-93	1,117
1993-94	[1]1,328
1994-95	[1]1,592
1995-96	[1]1,808

[1] estimated outturn.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to the Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The membership of the Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board at 31 January 1994 is as follows:

Members
Alan Brakefield Esq
Ms Tamara Goriely
Alan Mills Esq
Ms Katharine Mortimer
Mrs. June P. O'Dell OBE

There is currently a vacancy for the post of chairman.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Council on Public Records.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The membership of the Advisory Council on Public Records as at 31 January 1994 is as follows:

Chairman
Sir Thomas Bingham, the right honourable Master of the Rolls

Members
Professor Bernard Alford
Sir John Blelloch
Dr. Alan Borg
Mrs. Lynne J. Brindley
Alexander Charles Carlile Esq. MP
Professor Richard Chapman
Terence Anthony Gordon Davis Esq. MP
Professor Richard Barrie Dobson
Miss Andrea Duncan
Victor Gray Esq
Mrs. Lynette Lithgow
Professor Shula Marks
David Sumberg Esq. MP
David Vaisey Esq. FSA

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to the Legal Aid Board.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: The present members of the Legal Aid Board are John Pitts, chairman, Martin Acland, Diana Beale, Valerie Boakes, Fred Collins, Peter Jones, Kate Markus, Steve Orchard, Penelope Pearce, George Pulman QC, David Sinker, John Smith and Andrew Thomas.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to the General Commissioners of Income Tax.

Mr. John Taylor [holding answer 3 February 1994]: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The latest figures available show that there are 3,948 general commissioners in England and Wales. If the hon. Member wishes me to give the names of general commissioners on particular divisions I shall be pleased to do so.

Stubbings v. Webb

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will now consider amending section 11 of the Limitation Act 1980, in light of the House of Lords decision in the case of Stubbings v. Webb; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The matter is presently under consideration.

Financial Services Tribunal

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who are the members currently appointed to the Financial Services Tribunal.

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

Current appointments to the panel of the Financial Services Tribunal:

Chairmen

Mr. J. M. Bowers
Mr. D. Campbell
Mr. P. E. Heim
Mr. E. C. Woods
Mr. A. Gordon
Mr. J. E. Drummond Young

Mr. G. Willetts
Mr. P. D. Williams
Mr. H. Woods

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Batons

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when all police areas will have access to expandable batons.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Chief officers may equip their officers with any of the expandable batons currently undergoing trials, although the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State is required in the case of the Metropolitan police.

Fraud Sentences

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the result of the review to determine whether unduly lenient sentences in cases of serious and complex fraud should be referrable to the Court of Appeal.

Mr. Maclean: I hope shortly to make an announcement about the scope of the Attorney-General's power to refer lenient sentences to the Court of Appeal.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what considerations he takes into account when deciding whether an asylum seeker should be detained;

(2) what is his policy on keeping asylum seekers in detention where relatives are prepared to offer sureties.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The policy is to use the powers of detention under the Immigration Act 1971 only where there is no alternative and where there are good grounds for believing that the person concerned will not comply with any conditions attached to his release. All relevant factors are taken into account, including the person's previous immigration history, the existence of any connections with the United Kingdom, the likelihood and time scale of removal and any compassionate circumstances, including the person's medical condition.

Any application to an immigration officer to grant release on bail in accordance with paragraph 29 of schedule 2 of the 1971 Act is considered on its merits taking into account all relevant factors, including the willingness of relatives to offer sureties. A similar approach is taken in deciding whether or not to oppose an application for bail to the independent immigration appellate authorities or to the courts.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost in the last year available for keeping asylum seekers in detention.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information does not identify separately those detention costs which relate to asylum seekers.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently detained in prisons (a) in the west midlands and (b) nationally.

Mr. Charles Wardle: On 10 February, 46 men who had claimed asylum at some stage were detained in the west midlands area, all at Birmingham prison. The number detained in prisons nationally was 278.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he expects to announce section 11 funding for the current financial year for the London borough of Wandsworth;

(2) what has been the total financial funding under section 11 that has been made to the London borough of Wandsworth in the current financial year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Section 11 grant is currently paid on the basis of an authority's actual expenditure. Grant payable in relation to expenditure by the London borough of Wandsworth in the first two quarters of the current financial year amounted to £921,859.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of teachers employed in schools in the Tooting constituency of the London borough of Wandsworth whose salaries are paid in full or part from section 11 funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Some 48·6 full-time equivalent teaching posts approved for funding under section 11 are currently allocated to schools identified as being in the Tooting constituency. This figure does not include posts in central teams which provide a service to schools throughout the borough, but does include posts in grant-maintained schools which have opted out of local authority projects.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Education on section 11 funding for schools within the Greater London area for the coming financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education was consulted about national changes to the levels and the methodology of the grant.

Trial by Jury

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to retain the right to choose trial by jury in all cases where election is currently possible.

Mr. Maclean: The Government are still considering the recommendations made by the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice on this matter.

Ritual Abuse

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the result of the survey carried out into the nature and extent of ritual abuse in Britain by Jean La Fontaine and the Obscene Publications Department of Scotland Yard; and if the result will be made public.

Mr. Maclean: The results of research carried out by the Obscene Publications Branch of the Metropolitan police are not yet ready for publication. It will be for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to decide what information he wishes to make public, as it will be for the Department of Health to decide in the case of the separate research study by Professor la Fontaine.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the members currently appointed to the Parole Board.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Membership of the Parole Board is set out in its annual report which is placed in the Library of the House. As there have been changes since the report was last published, I will arrange for an up-to-date list of the membership to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the local review committees.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are more than 2,000 members of local review committees in England and Wales. The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The chairman of the Commission is the Speaker of the House of Commons. The deputy chairman is the hon. Sir Malcolm Pill. The members are Mr. Murray McLaggan JP DL MA and Mr. Peter Davey CBE.

Prisons

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of cells at each prison in England and Wales and the number of prisoners presently held.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. A. J. Butler to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 15 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of cells in prisons in England and Wales and the number of prisoners presently held.

Accommodation for prisoners consists of cells, double cells, cubicles and rooms or dormitories. Most prisons consist of more than one type of accommodation. The latest date for which a breakdown of these types of accommodation is available is 31 March 1993. The numbers for the separate parts of each establishment are listed in Apprendix 1 to the Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts for April 1992—March 1993, Volume Two, which is available both in the Library of the House and in the Vote Office. The list is followed by definitions of each of the types of accommodation.

The attached table gives the total number of prisoners held at each establishment on 4 February 1994.

Police Inquiries (Press Leaks)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will discuss with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis the manner in which details of police inquiry are released to the media; if he will take steps to ensure that, in the case of death, no such details are released until the next of kin are officially informed; if he will issue new guidelines to Association of Chief Police Officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has established an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the divulging of information to the media in the tragic case my hon. Friend may have in mind. We shall consider in the light of the report of that inquiry if there are matters which should be pursued centrally.

Official Secrets Act 1989

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the numbers of (a) cases brought and (b) prosecutions leading to convictions under the Official Secrets Act 1989 from 1 March 1990 to 31 December 1993.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 11 February 1994]: Information held centrally shows that there were two prosecutions in 1991, both of which resulted in convictions. There was also a further prosecution in 1992 where the defendant was committed for trial. Data for 1993 are not yet available.

Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has made for the current year's review of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989; and how observations from interested persons or organisations should be submitted for consideration.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply 8 December 1993, column 276]: I have now received a report from Mr. J. J. Rowe, QC and I have placed copies in the Library.

Criminal Justice Act 1993

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to implement the remaining provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 1993.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to my reply of 3 December 1993, column 786]: The following new provisions to combat money laundering are being brought into force today by means of commencement order No. 4: sections 16 to 17, 29 to 31, 33, 47, 49 and 74, together with section 79 to the extent necessary to bring into force consequential amendments, repeals and revocations in schedules 5 and 6.

An announcement about implementation of the remaining sections of the Act will be made in due course.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Lorrain Osman

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General what advice the Treasury solicitors offered to potential Government witnesses in the Lorrain Osman case.

The Attorney-General: The Treasury Solicitor was instructed by the Home Office and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to act for them in connection with civil proceedings in the High Court in London brought by Lorrain Osman for writs of habeas corpus and for judicial review. The Treasury Solicitor assisted with the preparation and filing of affidavit evidence in these and related interlocutory proceedings. The advice given in this connection is protected by legal professional privilege.

The Treasury Solicitor was not involved in, and did not advise in connection with, the criminal proceedings brought in Hong Kong.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Internal Mail

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 859, if he will request the Serjeant at Arms, in his review of the Members' internal mail service, to consider how hon. Members may mail all their colleagues without the expense of using franked envelopes.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Yes.

Photocopying Facilities

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he will arrange for a small photocopying facility to be in or near the Table Office.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I have been asked to reply.

I shall arrange for this matter to be considered by the Administration Committee.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by the Privy Council Office (a) in the current financial year and (b) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Newton: The Privy Council Office has conducted no such campaigns in the current financial year, and none are planned for 1994-95.

Parliamentary Broadcasting Signals

Mr. Page: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Broadcasting Committee's mid-term review of the performance by CCT Productions of its contract to provide the parliamentary broadcasting signals.

Mr. Newton: The contract between Parliamentary Broadcasting Unit Ltd.—PARBUL—and CCT Productions for the generation of the parliamentary broadcasting signals provides for a mid-term review of the financial and editorial aspects of the contract. The halfway point of the five-year contract fell at the end of 1993 and the Broadcasting Committee accordingly commissioned a series of reports on CCT's performance to date. In view of the generally satisfactory nature of these reports the Committee concluded that the present arrangements appeared to be working well and that no changes were called for at this stage. I have arranged for copies of the reports—from CCT, PARBUL, the Supervisor of Parliamentary Broadcasting, the House of Lords Broadcasting Committee, and the Assistant Serjeant at Arms—to be placed in the Library.

HEALTH

Safer Sex Advice

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been spent to date by the Health Education Authority on the safer sex advice integrated media campaign;

(2) what instructions have been issued by her Department to the Health Education Authority regarding the future of the safer sex advice integrated media campaign; and what were the reasons for those instructions.

Mr. Sackville: Since assuming responsibility for the HIV/AIDS/safer sex campaigns from the Department of Health, the Health Education Authority has been allocated the following sums for the purpose:

Year	£ million
1987-88	4·470
1988-89	8·500
1989-90	10·700
1990-91	8·500

Year	£ million
1991-92	9·500
1992-93	9·775
1993-94	9·756

The Health Education Council has a continuing general remit to develop programmes to deliver advice on safer sex through mass media and targeted campaigns. There is an agreed procedure for consulting United Kingdom Health Ministers about advertising material, which the HEA has followed with recent proposals. No specific instructions have been given about future campaigns.

Waiting Times

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the average waiting time for initial assessment in accident and emergency departments in 1992-93; and what proportion of people attending accident and emergency departments had to wait (a) five minutes or more, (b) 15 minutes or more and (c) 30 minutes or more;

(2) what proportion of NHS outpatients were given specific appointment times in 1992-93; and what proportion were seen within 30 minutes of their appointment time.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information about average waiting times for initial assessment in accident and emergency departments is not available centrally. As at 31 March 1993, 74 per cent.—estimates based on samples—of patients were assessed within five minutes of arriving in an accident and emergency department.

From 1 April 1992 all patients should have a specific out-patient appointment time. As at 31 March 1993 73 per cent.—estimates based on samples—of patients were seen within 30 minutes of their out-patient appointment time.

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 888, what actual examples she has of ways in which savings by general practitioner fundholders have been used for the benefit of patients.

Dr. Mawhinney: Fundholders are spending their savings in a number of ways—for example, reducing waiting times; and bringing more services into the practices. The rules governing how savings should be spent are in the National Health Service (Fundholding Practices) Regulations 1993, copies of which are in the Library.

Fulwood House Site

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the staff reduction at the Trent regional health authority Fulwood house site in the last two years; what space has been made available as a consequence; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for Trent regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Michael Carlisle, the chairman, for details.

Audiologists

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are for permanent audiologists in the London health service; how many permanent audiologists are employed in the London health service; how many agency audiologists are employed in the London health service; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: There were 140 whole-time equivalent staff working in audiology in London, as of 30 September 1992. Information on the number of vacancies is not available centrally.

Smoking

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department first and last received representations from the British Medical Association for a ban on tobacco promotion as a major means of reducing smoking and if she will estimate the reduction in smoking (a) during that period and (b) from the peak to the present day.

Mr. Sackville: The Secretary to the Council of the British Medical Association, BMA, wrote to the Department of Health in May 1964, indicating the council's support for a general decrease in advertisements for tobacco products beginning with a ban on all television advertisements. The most recent occasion on which the BMA made a formal representation to the Government for a ban on tobacco advertising was 24 September 1993.

According to the estimates of the Tobacco Advisory Council—now the Tobacco Manufacturers Association—69 per cent. of men and 41 per cent. of women in Great Britain smoked cigarettes, pipes or cigars in 1964. The 1992 general household survey showed that 36 per cent. of men and 28 per cent. of women now smoke cigarettes, pipes or cigars. The two sources of data are not strictly comparable.

The Tobacco Advisory Council's estimates of smoking prevalence go back to 1948. The highest prevalence of smoking among men, 82 per cent., occurred in the first year of the series, 1948. The highest prevalence among women, 44 per cent., occurred first in 1957 and most recently in 1974.

Diabetes

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received regarding injection pens and special needles for diabetics in relation to prescription charges; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to make injection pens and special needles available free on prescription for diabetics; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Disposable insulin injection pens are already available on national health service prescription. People with diabetes mellitus, except where treatment is by diet alone, are exempt from prescription charges. Reusable injection pens and their needles are not available on general practitioner prescription and there are currently no plans to make them available in this way. These pens, however, may be provided free of charge from hospitals if the consultant in charge of a patient's treatment thinks this is appropriate.

Dentistry

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental patients have been deregistered in each family health services authority since July 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is contained in the table. Over the period 1 July 1992 to 4 February 1994 dentists notified their family health services authorities of 632,242 patient deregistrations. Over the shorter period of 1 July 1992 to 30 November 1994 there was a net increase in patient registrations of 1·890 million.

Cornwall Health

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will pay the legal costs of the Cornwall Health non-executive directors currently facing charges of libel.

Dr. Mawhinney: This matter is currently being considered by Sir Duncan Nichol, chief executive of the national health service management executive.

NHS Charges

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to increase current NHS charges and the value of optical vouchers; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall lay before the House regulations providing for increases in charges and spectacle voucher values in the national health service in England and Wales. These changes will take effect on 1 April 1994. The prescription charge will increase by 50p, from £4·25 to £4·75 for each quantity of a drug or appliance dispensed. The overall value of optical vouchers will be increased by an average of 4 per cent.

The new prescription charge is still significantly less than the average total cost of a single prescription item to the NHS. Extensive exemption arrangements and charge remission under the NHS low income scheme ensure that no one need be deterred from getting necessary treatment or medication for financial reasons. The rates for prescription prepayment certificates will rise in line with the increase in prescription charges.

A prescription charge is now paid on around only one item in five dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors. This compares with about two items in five when the Government took office. In 1992-93, the family health service drugs bill was over £2·6 billion.

Income from prescription charges in 1994-95 will raise about £292 million in much-needed revenue for the national health service. This money is sufficient to provide, for example, 71,000 hip replacement operations or 46,000 coronary artery bypass grafts or 221,000 cataract removals.

Charges for fabric supports supplied through the hospital service will increase by 50p. Charges for elastic stockings and tights, and wigs supplied through the hospital service, will also be increased by a similar percentage to the rise in the prescription charge.

The maximum patient charge for a single course of dental treatment begun on or after 1 April 1994 will increase from £250 to £275.

I am pleased to announce that from 1 April 1994, the overall value of optical vouchers will increase by an average of 4 per cent. However, the most commonly used vouchers, constituting over 85 per cent. of the total, will be increased by 4·5 per cent. and, as a result, the majority of beneficiaries will find themselves better off.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will lay regulations to increase charges and spectacle voucher sales in Scotland by the same amounts. Similar arrangements will apply in Northern Ireland. Details of the revised charges and voucher values have been placed in the Library.

Low Income Scheme

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if she has concluded her review of the administration of the NHS low-income scheme; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: As part of the Government's commitment to ensuring ready access to financial help with national health service charges for those who need it, the NHS low income scheme provides help with prescription and other charges for many thousands of people on low incomes who are not exempt or otherwise automatically entitled to full charge remission through receipt of income support or family credit. We have recently reviewed the scheme.

In addition to making number of operational improvements, we have considered a large number of options arising from the review. We have concluded that the present arrangements for administering the low income scheme are satisfactory, and we have not identified any options for immediate change within what can be afforded.

Existing arrangements will be extended from 1 April 1995 to provide automatic charge remission for recipients of disability working allowance. This is in line with the announcement made on 1 December 1993 at column 1039 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

The review of forms presently being carried out will continue to ensure that they are as easy to understand and use as possible. We are also examining the potential for computerisation.

Blind People

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was made available for regional associations for the blind in each year since 1985; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The Department has made available to the regional associations for the blind the following levels of funding:

	South Regional Association for the Blind £	North Regional Association for the Blind £	Total £
1984-85	65,090	42,634	107,724
1985-86	74,746	53,738	128,484
1986-87	72,389	52,206	124,595
1987-88	75,905	52,007	127,912
1988-89	106,702	53,169	159,871
1989-90	107,381	62,097	169,478
1990-91	127,577	67,619	195,196
1991-92	132,084	71,768	203,852
1992-93	145,000	69,391	214,391
1993-94	143,079	84,100	227,179

From April 1994, under the visual impairment sub-programme of the training support programme TSP, the Department will be making £250,000 available to local authorities to spend specifically on the training of such workers.

Photorefractive Keratectomy

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which London hospitals provide excimer laser photorefractive keratectomy to national health service patients; what is the size of the waiting lists for each of the hospitals for this treatment; what is the average monthly rate of operations for each of the hospitals; what is the cost per operation for each of the hospitals; and what is the total cost of treating a patient under this programme for each of the hospitals.

Dr. Mawhinney: The treatment of myopia by excimer laser photorefractive keratectomy is still experimental and being evaluated. We are aware that this procedure is undergoing clinical trials in two London hospitals—St. Thomas's and Moorfields eye hospital.

West Yorkshire Health Authority

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will outline the budget which has been allocated for the West Yorkshire health authority for 1994-95; what the comparable figure was for 1993-94; what this increase represents in cash and percentage terms; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Allocations are made to regional health authorities and it is they who allocate to district health authorities.

West Yorkshire's health authority's allocations for resident population in 1993-94 and 1994-95 are:

1993-94 (£000's)	1994-95 (£000's)
214,026	225,279

This represents a cash increase of £11·253 million and a percentage increase of 5·26 per cent.

Additional sums for specific purposes may be added during the financial year.

NHS Purchasing Authorities

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to ensure that NHS purchasing authorities involve the general public in their purchasing decisions.

Dr. Mawhinney: The national health service management executive document "Local Voices" and the priorities and planning guidelines for 1994-95—EL(93)54—identified the steps that authorities need to take to ensure that they involve the general public in their purchasing decisions. I wrote last month to all district health authorities emphasising the importance that the Government attach to responsiveness to the views and needs of local people.

NHS Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of employees in each district health authority area were engaged in (a) management posts, (b) clerical and administration posts and (c) nursing and midwifery posts in each of the past five years.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 17 December 1993]: The information for 1988, 1989 and 1990 will be placed in the Library. Information for later years is not centrally available. The increase in general and senior managers should be treated with caution. Much of the increase arises from reclassification of existing staff, including many senior nurses, as managers.

Dental Services

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many family health services authorities have been unable to provide emergency dental services in each month since July 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 11 February 1994]: The available information is shown in the table.

General dental practitioners have an obligation under their terms of service to provide emergency cover to their registered patients. They may also offer emergency treatment to non-registered patients. Family health services authorities make arrangements for those patients who are not registered. All FHSAs report that they are able to help patients contacting them to obtain national health service dental treatment.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) who are the members currently appointed to the board of the British Tourist Authority;

(2) who are the members currently appointed to the English tourist board.

Mr. Sproat: Adele Biss is joint chairman of the British Tourist Authority and the English tourist board. Other members appointed to the tourists boards are as follows:

British Tourist Authority

Hon. Rocco Forte
Ivor T. Manley CB
John H. J. Lewis
Gordon Dunlop CBE

The Development of Tourism Act 1969 confers membership of the British Tourist Authority on the chairmen of the Scottish and Wales tourist boards, currently Ian D. Grant CBE and Tony Lewis respectively. The chairman of the Northern Ireland tourist board also attends meetings by invitation. The current post holder is Hon. Hugh O'Neill. Appointments to these tourist boards are made by the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland respectively.

English Tourist Board

John F. Jarvis CBE
John Poppleton
John Lee
Sir Basil Feldman
Geoffrey Thompson
Eve Pollard

In accordance with the Development of Tourism Act 1969, when members are appointed or reappointed to the boards of the British Tourist Authority and English tourist board, statements are placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the South Bank theatre board.

Mr. Brooke: The present members of the South Bank theatre board are:

The Lady Soames DBE
Mr. Anthony Everitt (Secretary-General, Arts Council of Great Britain)
Mr. Vaughan Rees (Department of National Heritage).

The post of chairman is currently vacant.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the board of the British museum.

Mr. Sproat: The members of the board of trustees of the British museum are:

Sir David Attenborough, CVO CBE FRS
Nicholas Barber Esq.
Professor Gillian Beer, FBA
Professor Rosemary J. Cramp, CBE FSA
Lord Egremont, DL
Sir C. Matthew Farrer, KCVO
HRH The Duke of Gloucester, GCVO

Right Hon. Sir Timothy Raison
Lord Renfrew of Kaimsthorn, FBA FSA
Professor Guenter H. Treitel, DCL FBA QC
Lord Weinstock, BSc FSS
Lord Windlesham PC CVO (Chairman)

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the board of British Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Brooke: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Houghton and Washington (Mr. Boyes) on 24 January, Official Report, columns 32-33.

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what is the present value of the television licence fee concession for people registered as blind, adjusted for inflation since it was set at £1·25;

(2) how many people who are registered as blind obtain the television licence fee concession of £1·25.

Mr. Brooke: The £1·25 concession for registered blind people, if adjusted for inflation since 1971, would be worth £8·92 today. I understand that, in the year ended 31 March 1993, 40,731 registered blind people received the concession.

EDUCATION

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much the Department for Education has spent on the operation of the assisted places scheme in each year since 1981; how many pupils have been covered by the scheme since 1981; and if there was any overspend on the budget allocated in each of these years.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is given in the following table for each year up to 1992-93, the latest year for which complete figures are available. Expenditure exceed the original budget estimate in 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Year	Total cost £ million	Total number of assisted pupils
1981-82	3·0	4,185
1982-83	8·7	8,616
1983-84	15·0	13,102

[1] Includes £4·9 million brought forward from financial year 1993-94.
Note: The figures are for England only.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many formal assessments are currently being undertaken by Barnsley local education authority and what length of time each stage of the assessment has taken so far together, indicating whether that time exceeds the current legislative maximum time for each stage.

Mr. Forth: The Barnsley LEA has told my officials that it is currently undertaking 337 formal assessments. Information about the length of time taken for each stage of assessment is not availble centrally. There is at present no statutory maximum time for making a formal assessment. However, subject to Parliament's approval, regulations made under the 1993 Education Act will set statutory time limits for the making of assessments and statements, with effect from autumn this year.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many appeals have been submitted to his Department from within Barnsley local education authority since 1981; and what length of time each has been with his Department indicating when that time exceeds the current legislative maximum time for such appeals.

Mr. Forth: Since 1981, the Department has received a total of 28 appeals under the 1981 Act and related complaints under the 1994 Act from within Barnsley LEA. A breakdown of this figure for each year since 1981, and information about the length of time taken to resolve each appeal or complaint, could be made available only at disproportionate cost. There is no statutory maximum time for resolving appeals under the 1981 Act. The Department is currently consulting upon draft regulations and rules of procedure which will, subject to Parliament's approval, govern the operation of the new special educational needs tribunal, to be established under the Education Act 1993. The tribunal will set time targets for the various stages of an appeal. These will be set out in the tribunal's guide for parents. Performance will be assessed in the tribunal's annual report.

Dyslexia

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many children have been (i) statemented and (ii) formally assessed by Barnsley local education authority in each year since 1981, whose special need is as a result of diagnosis of dyslexia;

(2) how many appeals from Barnsley local education authority relating to dyslexia are being dealt with by his Department;

(3) how many appeals are currently with his Department in respect of children who have been statemented by Barnsley local education authority; how many statements have been issued; and how many children have been made the subject of formal assessment by Barnsley local education authority for each year since 1981.

Mr. Forth: The Department is currently dealing with eight appeals in respect of children with special educational needs from Barnsley local education authority —LEA. All concern children with specific learning difficulties, and four of these appeals are in respect of children who have been made the subject of a statement.

Information on the number of formal assessments and statements made by Barnsley LEA, for each year since 1981, is shown in the table. Information for the 1993 calendar year is still being collated, and is not yet available.

Information on pupils who have been made the subject of a formal assessment or a statement is not categorised by disability.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what action he proposes to take as a consequence of the late payment of tuition fees by local education authorities to universities.

Mr. Boswell: The Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations place local education authorities—LEAs—in England and Wales under a statutory duty to pay most tuition fees in three instalments on specified dates or within one month of the receipt by the LEA of a valid request for payment, whichever is the later. My right hon. Friend wrote last September to the chairmen of all LEAs to remind them of the problems caused by the late payment of fees. My Department is pursuing complaints about late payments against a number of LEAs, including complaints made by the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals of the Universities of the United Kingdom.

Environmental Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to increase the provision of initial and in-service education for teachers in environmental education.

Mr. Robin Squire: "Biodiversity: the UK Action Plan" and "Sustainable Development: The UK Strategy"

include suggestions for action by schools and institutions in support of environment education. My right hon. Friend's policies in respect of the initial and in-service education of teachers were set out in my reply of 16 December 1993, column 772.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much it costs his Department annually to publicise and administer the operation of the assisted places scheme.

Mr. Forth: Publicity for the scheme is undertaken chiefly by schools themselves and organisations such as the Independent Schools Information Service—ISIS. The Department produces each year a brief guide for parents and a list of schools participating in the scheme at a cost in 1993-94 of £3,200. The scheme is administered by some eight staff whose direct staff costs are some £134,000 per annum.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what safeguards are used by his Department to ensure that schools covered by the assisted places scheme meet recognised educational standards.

Mr. Forth: All 295 schools participating in the scheme satisfy stringent criteria relating to high academic achievement. They must offer a broad and balanced curriculum and must be able to demonstrate and maintain high academic standards. The Department monitors these standards through its annual examination results survey.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement indicating the level of fees charged by the institutions in England covered by the assisted places scheme in the current academic year.

Mr. Forth: Tuition fees charged by participating schools vary considerably and are dependent to a large degree on the type of institution and its location. In the current academic year 1993-94, the average fee charged is about £4,100 per year. The highest fee charged is £9,348 per year in respect of sixth-formers and the lowest fee charged is £2,283 per year.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment his Department has made of the assisted places scheme.

Mr. Forth: The scheme is a success and more popular with parents than ever. Virtually all new places on offer each year are being taken up with a significant proportion going to those children from families with incomes below the threshold, currently £9,225 per year, for full fee remission. To ensure that participating schools carry out assessments of income correctly, the Department also issues regular comprehensive guidance and carries out random audit surveys of income assessments. These surveys, together with the statistical information collected, show that schools are indeed administering the scheme properly and targeting the pupils for whom the scheme is intended.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the schools in England that have pupils under the assisted places scheme for the current academic year; how many pupils are supported at each institution; and how much it has cost his Department to provide this support.

Mr. Forth: The information requested has been placed in the Library. The estimated cost to the Department for the current academic year 1993-94 is £97·5 million.

SCOTLAND

Freight and Passenger Traffic

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the volume of freight traffic by (a) road and (b) rail between (i) Glasgow and Aberdeen, (ii) Aberdeen and Glasgow, (iii) Edinburgh and Aberdeen, (iv) Aberdeen and Edinburgh, (v) Glasgow and Inverness, (vi) Inverness and Glasgow, (vii) Edinburgh and Inverness and (viii) Inverness and Edinburgh in the last year for which figures are available;

(2) what was the total number of passengers travelling by (a) road and (b) rail between (i) Glasgow and Aberdeen, (ii) Aberdeen and Glasgow, (iii) Edinburgh and Aberdeen, (iv) Aberdeen and Edinburgh, (v) Glasgow and Inverness, (vi) Inverness and Glasgow, (vii) Edinburgh and Inverness and (viii) Inverness and Edinburgh.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many visits abroad he made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 December 1993, Official Report, columns 689-90.

Roads

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his projected spending on roads in 1993-94 in (a) Scotland and (b) Grampian.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The projected spending on trunk roads and motorways in 1993-94 for Scotland and Grampian is as follows:

	£ million
Scotland	240·2
Grampian	9·3

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of organisations representing housing co-operatives to discuss funding and strategy; what is his policy regarding the development of housing co-operatives; what criteria he applies when determining financial assistance to housing co-operatives; what plans he has to encourage the development of housing co-operatives; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 10 February 1994]: In June last year I addressed the annual conference of the Scottish Federation of Housing Associations which represents housing co-operatives, and

I expect to meet representatives of the federation soon to discuss a number of issues of concern to the housing association and co-operative movement. The Government continue to be committed to the support of housing co-operatives, through their substantial funding of Scottish Homes, which is responsible for the development and funding of housing associations and co-operatives. The hon. Member may wish to consult Scottish Homes direct about the criteria it applies when determining financial assistance to housing co-operatives.

Johnstone

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he, or any of his ministerial team, last made an official visit to the town of Johnstone; when he next plans to make a ministerial visit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 10 February 1994]: I have not myself nor have any of my ministerial colleagues made an official visit to the town of Johnstone. There are at present no plans to make such a visit.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many parliamentary questions have not received a substantive answer by his Department due to disproportionate cost in each of the last five years; and if he will list those which could now be answered due to the effectiveness of computerisation.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 10 February 1994]: The information requested is shown:

Year	[1] PQs answered in full/part with disproportionate cost Number	PQs that can now be answered due to effective computerisation Number
1989	7	3
1990	14	9
1991	20	6
1992	8	1
1993	11	4

Geese

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions have taken place between officials of his Department and representatives of Scottish Natural Heritage regarding the impact on agriculture throughout Scotland of wintering barnacle geese and Greenland white-fronted geese; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 8 February 1994]: Officials from both the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department and the Environment Department are in regular contact with Scottish Natural Heritage on this matter. Their most recent meeting was on 26 January 1994.

Trains (Glasgow)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish a list of all correspondence between his Department and (a) Strathclyde passenger transport executive and (b) Lombard Tricity Finance regarding operational leasing for new trains in the Glasgow commuter network area; what assessment he has made of the implications of local government organisation for the immediate future of such operational leasing deals; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a list of all meetings held by Ministers or officials in his Department with Ministers or officials in any other Government Departments regarding operational leasing for new trains in the Glasgow commuter network area, giving (a) the dates of each meeting, (b) a full list of those attending and (c) the outcome of each meeting; whether any further such meetings are planned; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 February 1994]: There have been no exchanges of correspondence between the Scottish Office and (a) Strathclyde passenger transport executive and (b) Lombard North Central about the Strathclyde rolling stock leasing deal. I wrote to Councillor Waugh, chairman of Strathclyde regional council's roads and transportation committee, on 17 December 1993 saying that I saw nothing in our proposals for local government reform to prevent this deal proceeding.

My officials and I have attended meetings in November and December 1993 with Department of Transport Ministers and officials, and representatives of Strathclyde region and Strathclyde passenger transport executive. These meetings discussed a range of issues including the leasing deal and concluded that the issue was primarily a matter for the local authority to resolve. A further meeting is planned for later this month at which representatives of Lombard North Central will be present.

Local Government

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out his intentions for the future of the public analyst, agricultural analyst and regional chemist services under the proposed local government reorganisation in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 February 1994]: Each local authority requires a public analyst service for both statutory and non-statutory functions and under current arrangements this service is provided by four laboratories based in Strathclyde, Lothian, Tayside and Grampian regions. The remaining regions, districts and islands councils use the services of these laboratories. This arrangement illustrates the very effective co-operation which can exist between authorities, which I would expect to continue and develop under the proposed new single-tier structure.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he has made to the document on "Local Government Reform and Planning", sent to him by Professor Brian Parnell of Stirling and the university of Strathclyde.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 February 1994]: My right hon. Friend has not yet received this document.

Aberdeenshire Council

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what venues he has in mind outside the city of Aberdeen as headquarters of the proposed new Aberdeenshire council.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 February 1994]: The location of headquarters for the new Aberdeenshire council will be for the council itself to determine in the light of local circumstances.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

World Summit for Children

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has, and what resources have been allocated, within the overseas aid budget, for the implementation of commitments made by Her Majesty's Government at the 1990 world summit for children.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We remain committed to the goals for promoting child survival, development, and protection adopted by the 1990 World Summit for Children. The Government will continue to pursue these aims within their overall objective of reducing poverty and promoting sustainable economic and social development.

The overseas aid budget contains no specific allocation for children. However, in the financial year 1992-93, for example, over £180 million, or more than 31 per cent. of that part of our bilateral aid which can be allocated by sector, was spent in the social sectors which are particularly likely to benefit children. We also contribute to a wide range of multilateral organisations, including UNICEF, which play an important role in helping to achieve the goals of the world summit for children.

A copy of Command No. 1984 entitled "Report on the United Kingdom Implementation of the Goals agreed by the World Summit on Children", of July 1992 was placed in the Library of the House.

Jordan

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 71-2, which United Kingdom water company is involved in a possible professional link with the water authority of Jordan; which United Kingdom company carried out the study and what was the value of the contract; and whether this study was funded under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No United Kingdom water company has yet been invited to form the possible professional link. Thames Water carried out the study at a cost of £67,959. It was not funded from the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, columns 71-72, which United Kingdom company is providing advice to the Jordan Industrial Consortium Engineering Company; what is its precise brief and what are the key functions of the Jordan Industrial Consortium Engineering Company.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In 1989-90, Price Waterhouse advised the Jordan Industrial Consortium Engineering Company on the methodology for conducting the economic and financial feasibility studies, and Environmental Resources Ltd. assisted with the preparation of an environmental impact study, in respect of the Dead sea chemicals project. The Jordan Industrial Consortium Engineering Company was founded in 1986 to develop the skills of Jordanian engineers and create a local consulting and engineering company.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, columns 71-72, which United Kingdom company carried out the study of possible contamination of groundwater in the Amman Zarka basin, what was the value of the contract; and whether this study was funded under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The study was undertaken by British Geological Survey at a cost of £15,374. It was not funded from the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, columns 71-72, which United Kingdom company carried out the study of the aquifer at Qa Disi; what was the value of the contract; and whether this study was funded under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Qa Disi study is being carried out by Haiste International. The value of the contract is £1,325,190. The study is not being funded from the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, columns 71-72, which United Kingdom company carried out the feasibility study into centralising the water authority of Jordan's maintenance facilities on a single site; what was the value of the contract; and whether this study was funded under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The feasibility study was carried out by the Crown Agents at a cost of £124,256. It was not funded from the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 71, which United Kingdom company carried out the study into pollution at the King Talal dam; what was the value of the contract; and whether this study was funded under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox Boyd: The study was carried out by Thames Water International with the Natural Resources Institute at a cost of £16,259. It was not funded from the aid and trade provision.

Nigeria

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 67, regarding general balance of payments support provided by the Overseas Development Administration to Nigeria, when the commitments and the disbursements were made over the last five years; and what was the amount involved in each case.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The information is set out in the table:

Size of commitment	Date of commitment	Date(s) of disbursement
£43·6 million	8 May 1989	During financial year 1989-90
£10 million	8 May 1989	During financial years 1989-90 and 1990-91
£6 million	6 September 1989	During financial years 1989-90 and 1990-91
£20 million	1 October 1990	During financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92
£6·5 million	1 October 1990	During financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92

British Virgin Islands

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the purpose of each Overseas Development Administration-funded project or post in the British Virgin Islands in each of the past five years; and what was the cost to the Overseas Development Administration of each project or post.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A list of project funded by the ODA in British Virgin Islands, BVI, over the period 1988-89 to 1992-93 has been placed in the Library of the House.

The project cost figures include the cost of posts where these are also funded. The present average annual cost of an ODA-funded post in BVI, salary and allowances' is £70,000.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the professional discipline, (b) the duties and responsibilities and (c) the cost to the Overseas Development Administration, including the cost of offices and support staff, of each of the technical co-operation officers funded by his Department to work in the British Virgin Islands; and if he will place a copy of the job description and a letter of appointment of each of those officers in the Library.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are nine technical co-operation officers serving in the British Virgin Islands—BVI. Their disciplines cover financial services and taxation —three posts—engineering—two posts—police—two posts—Customs and Excise—one post—and computer development—one post.

The cost of offices and support staff are met by the BVI Government. The cost to the Overseas Development Administrtion of each officer depends on individual personal circumstances, but the average cost including accommodation and air fares is approximately £70,000 per annum.

We are unable to make publicly available the individual letters of appointment for each officer, but a note containing the terms of reference for each post has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Caribbean Islands

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much financial assistance is available to the territories of Guadeloupe and Martinique from the European Community under Lomé IV; and how much financial assistance is available to Belize, Dominica and Jamaica.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No financial assistance is available to Guadeloupe and Martinique under Lomé IV; financial assistance is available to Belize, Dominica and Jamaica as follows:

National indicative programme (1990-95)

	Million ecu
Belize	9
Dominica	6·5
Jamaica	46

Belize, Dominica and Jamaica are also eligible for structural adjustment support, export earnings stabilisation —STABEX—support for the mining sector—SYSMIN —emergency and refugee assistance and loans from the European investment bank.

Thailand

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which water projects the Overseas Development Administration has funded in Thailand over the last five years; which companies have won those contracts; what was the value of those contracts; and which of those projects were funded under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The following water projects have been supported with bilateral aid for Thailand over the last five years:

Dam Panel for the Royal Irrigation Department. Company: Sir Alexander Gibb and Partners. Value: £0·2 million.

Sukhothai Groundwater Project (Phase 2). Company: Howard Humphreys and Partners. Value: £3·2 million—all but some £50,000 was spent prior to 1989.

Provincial Waterworks Training Project. Companies: Thames Water PLC, North West Water PLC and Applied Research and Project Management Services. Value: £400,000.

Production of a training video programme. Company: Hydraulics Research Station, Wallingford. Value: £45,000.

Two projects were jointly funded with non-governmental organisations at a total cost of £325,000. In addition, two other small water projects were funded at a total cost of £7,300. No companies were involved with these four projects as they were small, mainly village-based, schemes undertaken by local communities.

None of the projects mentioned was funded under the aid and trade provision.

Banana Producers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to offer support to Belize to implement a scheme of diversification for banana producers.

Mr. Lennox Boyd: The ODA's aid programme to Belize is already focused on agricultural development, but there are no plans for specific aid to banana producers. Funds for development of the banana industry in African,

Caribbean and Pacific countries have already been approved in the EC budget for 1994, to which the United Kingdom contributes. We are working with the European Commission to define how these can best be spent.

Balkans Customs Corridor

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the United Kingdom's contribution to the European Commission's initiative, under the PHARE programme, for a Balkan customs corridor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are no current plans under the PHARE programme for a Balkan customs corridor. PHARE is currently helping a number of countries neighbouring Serbia and Montenegro to improve their transport infrastructure and customs administration, with special emphasis on relieving bottlenecks at border crossings. Any proposals for a customs corridor would need to be consistent with the UN Security Council resolutions imposing sanctions on Serbia and Montenegro.

Some £43 million was committed to PHARE regional transport and customs programmes during 1992 and 1993. Around £25 million of this has been allocated specifically to assist border crossings. The United Kingdom's contribution to the PHARE programme is around 16 per cent.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Link steering group.

Mr. Waldegrave: The current membership of the Link steering group is as follows:

Dr. J. Parnaby—Chairman
Professor W. D. P. Steward FRS FRSE
Dr. R. C. Whelan
Dr. G. Robinson
Professor T. L. Blundell FRS
Dr. Peter Bunyan
Dr. G. Pope FEng
Professor J. S. Mason
Sir John Cadogan CBE FRS

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, for each of the non-departmental bodies sponsored by his Department, whether the public has a statutory right to attend all board or committee meetings and to inspect (a) minutes of meetings, (b) the annual reports and (c) the annual accounts.

Mr. Waldegrave: The non-departmental public bodies sponsored by the Cabinet Office, the Office of Public Service and Science and the other Departments for which I am responsible are:

Executive Bodies

Agriculture and Food Research Council
Economic and Social Research Council
Medical Research Council
Natural Environment Research Council
Science and Engineering Research Council

Advisory Bodies

Advisory Committee on Advertising
Advisory Committee on Business Appointments
Advisory Committee on Human Genome Research
Council for Science and Technology
Citizen's Charter Panel of Advisers
Civil Service Appeal Board
Link Steering Group
Political Honours Scrutiny Committee
Security Commission

The public does not have a statutory right to attend meetings of any of these bodies, or to see minutes of meetings where they are produced.

There is a statutory requirement for research council annual reports and annual accounts to be laid before Parliament, under the provisions of schedule 1 of the Science and Technology Act 1965. They are published documents, and are freely available to the public.

The advisory bodies do not in general produce annual reports or accounts.

Exceptions are:

Council for Science and Technology

Information generated by the council will normally be made openly available, as stated in the White Paper "Realising our Potential".

Citizens Charter Panel of Advisers

The accounts of the panel of advisers are included in the accounts of the citizens charter unit, which are published in the OPSS annual report.

Civil Service Appeal Board

The CSAB publishes an annual report and transcripts of hearings are available to appellants, their representatives and departments.

Link Steering Group

The LSG produces reports but not on an annual basis. Its first report was published in February 1992.

Security Commission

Reports of the commission are, so far as it is consistent with the requirements of national security, made public.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year since 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each year to 1995-96 for each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department, as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Mr. Waldegrave: The executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department are the Agricultural and Food Research Council, AFRC, the Economic and Social Research Council, ESRC, the Medical Research Council, MRC, the Natural Environment Research Council, NERC and the Science and Engineering Research Council, SERC. With effect from 1 April the AFRC and the SERC will cease to exist and three new bodies will come into being, namely the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, BBSRC, the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council, EPSRC, and the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council, PPARC. The activities of the AFRC and SERC will be transferred to new and existing research councils.

Details of gross expenditure financed by grants in aid are as follows:

£ million at 1992-93 prices

	[1]1990-91	[1]1991-92	[1]1992-93	[2]1993-94	[3]1994-95

[3] Source: Allocations of the Science Budget 1993-94 as announced to the House on 2 February 1994, modified by appropriate GDP deflator.

Allocations for 1995-96 to the research councils have not yet been announced.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those responsible for making appointments of (a) chairs and (b) members of the boards to each of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department.

Mr. Waldegrave: As Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, I am responsible for the appointment of the chairmen and all members of the Economic and Social Research Council, the Medical Research Council, the Natural Environment Research Council and the Science and Engineering Research Council. I am also responsible for the appointment of the chairman and 14 of 20 members of the Agricultural and Food Research Council—AFRC. Of the remaining six members of the AFRC, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food appoints four and the Secretary of State for Scotland appoints two.

Ministers (Travel)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure by his Department on (1) internal and (2) overseas travel by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in 1992-93 after 11 April 1992 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. David Davis: Budgeted and actual expenditure by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on internal and overseas travel and subsistence for official purposes in 1992-93 after the 11 April 1992, and in 1993-94, was as set out in the table:

	Budgeted provision		Actual expenditure
	Internal (£)	Overseas[1] (£)	Internal (£)	Overseas[1] (£)
1992-93	1,600	1,000	5,700	16,600
1993-94[2]	5,600	27,300	4,600	25,100

[1] Includes, where appropriate, the costs of officials from the Chancellor's private office travelling with the Chancellor.
[2] Budgeted expenditure covers the full financial year 1993-94; actual expenditure covers the period April to December 1993.

Consultation Exercises

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those departments of state that currently publish details of responses received to consultation exercises.

Mr. Waldegrave: The code of practice on Government information commits Government Departments to publishing relevant facts and analysis underlying major policy proposals and decisions and this will include the details of consultation responses. It is already usual practice for comments to be sought in consultation exercises on the understanding that they can be made publicly available unless respondents have requested that their remarks be treated as confidential.

The code does not require provision of the responses themselves, although this will often be the most straightforward way of providing the information. Indeed, I will soon be placing responses to the "Open Government" White Paper in the Libraries of both Houses.

Market Testing

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what advice has been provided by the Government Actuary on the viability and comparability of the pension schemes of private contractors seeking to secure contracts in market testing exercises; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what has been the impact on the volume of market testing exercises of the decision to require contractors to offer a pension scheme comparable to Crown employees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: A number of Departments have sought advice from the Government Actuary's Department on pensions arrangements offered by private sector bidders in market testing exercises. The details of this advice vary from case to case and have not been recorded centrally.

The purpose in seeking such advice is to assess the value of the pensions package, having taken into account any compensating changes in the value of other terms and conditions. This is necessary, because, as my right hon. and learned Friend, the then Solicitor-General, explained in 1990 to the Standing Committee on the Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers Bill, rights and obligations relating to civil servants' pension benefits, while not protected by the acquired rights directive and the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981, are protected by United Kingdom employment law. In the case of a person transferred under TUPE the transferor and the transferee must so arrange things that the pension rights enjoyed by staff after the transfer are broadly comparable with those enjoyed by staff before. Contractors are therefore asked to provide pensions arrangements of comparable value as otherwise employees must be compensated for any detrimental change, either directly, or through offsetting changes in the value of other terms and conditions, such as pay.

I have no evidence that the advice on pensions arrangements has had any impact on the volume of market testing exercises.

Citizens Charter

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the Government will publish the second annual report on the citizens charter; and what were the reasons for the delay.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright) on 10 February 1994, Official Report, columns 486-87.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the United Kingdom are currently unemployed but are receiving (a) income support, (b) invalidity allowance, (c) attendance allowance or (d) other social security benefits.

Mr. Burt: The number of people in Great Britain who are registered as unemployed and also receiving income support is 2,003,000. Available information about other social security benefits received by this group can be found in "Income Support Statistics, Quarterly Enquiry, February 1993", a copy of which is in the Library.

Information on other benefits received by individuals registered as unemployed but who are not receiving income support is available only for those receiving unemployment benefit. Such information as is available is in the table. Invalidity benefit is not payable to people who are registered as unemployed.

Unemployment Benefit claimants receiving other benefits

Date	Benefit	Unemployed claimants
May 1992	Housing Benefit	156,000
May 1992	Community Charge Benefit	322,000
June 1993	Family Credit	16,000
August 1993	Disability Working Allowance	24
August 1993	Unemployment Benefit	532,000

Notes:
1. All figures are for Great Britain and are rounded to the nearest thousand except Disability Working Allowance which is an exact figure.
2. Benefit recipients may be in receipt of more than one benefit.
3. Disability Working Allowance and Family Credit figures relate to residual entitlement from claims made prior to unemployment.
4. Housing Benefit figure includes 49,000 cases receiving Income Support. Community Charge Benefit figure includes 116,000 cases receiving Income Support.

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of working age adults claiming income support or unemployment, sickness or invalidity benefits as their main source of income for each year since 1989.

Mr. Scott: It is not possible to provide reliable estimates of the numbers whose main source of income is derived from income support or unemployment benefit, sickness benefit or invalidity benefit. Estimated average numbers of people receiving income support with and without other benefits can be found in table 7 of "Departmental Report, The Government's Expenditure Plans 1993-94 to 1995-96" (Cm 2213), a copy of which is in the Library.

Information on the number of recipients of unemployment benefit, sickness benefit and invalidity benefit is in the table.

Thousands

	Unemployment Benefit	Sickness Benefit	Invalidity Benefit
1989	378	108	952
1990	299	103	1,003
1991	555	109	1,068
1992	669	138	1,175
1993	659	[1]—	[1]—

[1] Figures not available.

Notes:
1. Working adults defined as males aged 16 to 64, females 16 to 59.
2. Recipients may be receiving more than one benefit.

Disablement Benefits

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people will lose the right to claim short-term incapacity benefit by virtue of the changes in contribution conditions; and what estimate he has made of the annual savings resulting from each change.

Mr. Scott: The contribution conditions for short-term incapacity benefit will be the same as those which currently apply to sickness benefit, but the exemption from satisfying these conditions in industrial injury and disease cases will not be carried forward. This change will affect around 3,000 claims a year, producing net savings of under £5 million in 1995-96; and around £5 million in 1996-97.

Note: Estimates expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to the nearest £5 million, and net of offsetting changes in income related benefit expenditure.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated savings to his Department arising from each clause of the Social Security (Incapacity For Work) Bill.

Mr. Scott: The estimated savings are in the table. Clauses 1 and 2 have been grouped because it is not feasible to apportion the savings further. The total savings shown differ from those specified in the explanatory and financial memorandum in two ways:

savings that arise from extending the qualifying period for the disability premium paid with income-related benefits to 52 weeks are excluded. This will be given effect in regulations and not the Bill;

the savings in the Explanatory and Financial Memorandum were given in cash terms.

Clause	1995-96 £ million	1996-97 £ million
1 and 2	−145	−325
3	n.a.	n.a.
4	−160	−475
5	−50	−180
6	n.a.	n.a.
7	Negligible	Negligible
8	n.a.	n.a.
9	+5	+5
10	n.a.	n.a.
11	−25	−90

Note:
Estimates are expressed in constant 1993-94 prices and are rounded to the nearest £5 million. Totals may not add up due to rounding.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people found incapable of work under the new incapacity test would be excluded from receiving incapacity benefit by other changes included in the Social Security (Incapacity For Work) Bill; and how much each category of change is expected to save.

Mr. Scott: We estimate that as a result of the proposed upper age limits for incapacity benefit some 50,000 people in 1995-96, and 150,000 in 1996-97, will receive retirement pension instead of incapacity benefit. The estimated effect on benefit expenditure is negligible, as sickness benefit and invalidity benefit currently paid to people over pension age is based on their retirement pension entitlement. The exemption from the sickness benefit contribution conditions for people suffering from industrial injury or disease will not apply to incapacity benefit. This change will affect around 3,000 claims a year, producing net savings of under £5 million in 1995-96; and around £5 million in 1996-97.

Notes: Estimates expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to the nearest £5 million, and net of offsetting changes in income related benefit expenditure.

Take-up Rates

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the percentage take-up rate of social security benefits in each year since 1987.

Mr. Burt: For most of the main contributory benefits —for example, retirement pension, widows' benefits and unemployment benefit—and child benefit, take-up is thought to be close to 100 per cent.

Information on the take-up of income-related benefits can be found in "Income Related Benefits—Estimates of Take-up in 1987" published July 1991 and "Income Related Benefits—Estimates of Take-up in 1989" published January 1993, copies of which are in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons the specific information requested about the Child Support Agency on 5 November, Official Report, column 580, is largely unavailable, with particular reference to a breakdown of applications by region and of assessments by applicant type.

Mr. Burt: I understand that the information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost because information on the performance of the Child Support Agency comes from computer-generated figures summarising work at the agency's six computer centres on a monthly basis, supported by clerical counts.

Where requests are made for data not produced either by the computer, or by existing clerical counts, the cost of arranging for collection of the information must be considered. In the case of the chief executive's reply of 5 November 1993, which was subsequently amended in her reply dated 23 November, figures were not available on the number of child applicants in Scotland, nor in the breakdown of assessments by applicant type. To provide these figures would, in both cases, have necessitated the individual investigation of a large number of cases, either in an individual centre in the case of the numbers of child applicants in Scotland or in all six centres in the case of the breakdown of assessments by type.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements have been made by the Child Support Agency to assess and collect maintenance on behalf of a parent who is resident in, and whose child or children is or are resident in, the United Kingdom from an absent parent who is resident abroad.

Mr. Burt: The jurisdiction of the Child Support Agency does not extend beyond the United Kingdom. The Lord Chancellor's Department administers reciprocal enforcement agreements with many foreign countries. These provisions allow for the enforcement of British court orders abroad and for the enforcement of foreign orders in Britain. We have no plans to change these arrangements.

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual cost to public funds of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The latest estimate of the cost of the Child Support Agency for 1993-94 is £117 million.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to extend the power of the Child Support Agency with regard to the division of any assets of divorcing partners after 1996.

Mr. Burt: We have no such plans. Division of assets will remain a matter for the courts.

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what saving of public money is expected to be achieved by the Child Support Agency in the first 12 months of its operation.

Mr. Burt: Benefit savings were originally estimated at £530 million. The actual amount will be lower, but it is not possible to provide an accurate revised figure, since the full impact of the recent policy changes is not yet known.

Residential Care

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total projected expenditure on income support claims towards the cost of residential or nursing home care inclusive of cases that have been and will be handled by local authorities under the provisions of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 for (a) the current financial year, (b) 1994-95 and (c) 1995-96; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The latest estimates are:

(a) £2,500 million
(b) £2,280 million, and
(c) £2,180 million.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table.

1994-95 campaigns and promotions
Plans for promotion work in 1994-95 for DSS headquarters and the agencies have not yet been confirmed.

Incapacity for Work

Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what consultations are taking place with the British Medical Association on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests for each category of functional limitation as proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(2) what consultations are taking place with the Manic Depression Fellowship on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(3) what consultations are taking place with the Royal College of Nursing on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(4) what consultations are taking place with the Royal College of General Practitioners on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests for each category of functional limitation as proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(5) what consultations are taking place with the British Medical Association on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(6) what consultations are taking place with the Royal College of Physicians on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests for each category of functional limitation as proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(7) what consultations are taking place with the Scottish Schizophrenic Fellowship on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(8) what consultations are taking place with the Royal College of Psychiatrists on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(9) what consultations are taking place with the Department of Health on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests for each category of functional limitation as proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(10) what consultations are taking place with the Royal College of Surgeons on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests for each category of functional limitation as proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(11) what consultations are taking place with the Institute of Psychiatry on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(12) what consultations are taking place with the Royal College of General Practitioners on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work;

(17) what consultations are taking place with the Manic Depression Fellowship (Scotland) on the development, field testing and evaluation of the objective medical tests in relation to the mental health impairment score proposed in the "Consultation on the Medical Assessment for Incapacity Benefit"—annex 1—for use in the assessment of capacity for work.

Mr. Scott: Discussions about the proposed new medical incapacity test have been held with the joint consultants committee and with representatives of the Royal College of General Practitioners, the Royal College of Physicians, the Royal College of Psychiatrists, the Royal College of Surgeons and the British Medical Association. Officials have also discussed the test with officials in the Department of Health. The consultation document on the proposed test is freely available and over 4,700 copies have been distributed. A panel of 80 experts has been formed to help us construct the incapacity scales to be used in the test. The members of the panel have been asked to give their individual expert opinions, not to act as representatives of any particular organisation. Separate and additional discussions are being held about the mental health impairment score with experts in psychiatry, psychology and occupational medicine who are members of the panel.

National Insurance

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will seek to bring the present eight-hour part-time employment penalty rule for national insurance contributions into line with the present 16-hour penalty rule applying to benefits and with the future limits he is proposing.

Mr. Hague: National insurance contributions are normally credited to individuals in respect of complete weeks of qualifying unemployment. As a concession, employment of up to eight hours a week may be disregarded for this purpose. The extent of the concession is currently under review.

Family Credit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people claiming family credit do not pay tax.

Mr. Burt: Two hundred and four thousand people who receive family credit do not pay tax.

Source: Five per cent. sample of Family Credit recipients as at 31 July 1993.

Benefits (Administration Costs)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) of 26 January, Official Report, columns 266-67, what have been the administrative costs of each of the benefits for each of the last four years for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table:

Estimated administration costs of benefits:

	1988-89 (£ million)	1989-90 (£ million)	1990-91 (£ million)	1991-92 (£ million)
Child Benefit and One Parent Benefit[1]	105	111	107	118
Income Support	1,114	1,180	1,348	1,373
Sickness and Invalidity Benefit[1]	154	182	208	275
Family Credit	24	30	[1]46	[1]33
Social Fund	n/a	n/a	132	163

Note:
[1] Includes increased capital investment for information technology and publicity costs.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to undertake research into any correlation between the levels of sickness claims and the proportion of full-time employees working over 46 hours per week in England.

Mr. Scott: None.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1988, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table.

Year	Current prices £ million	1993-94 prices £ million
1988-89	49·5	65·2
1989-90	43·3	53·4
1990-91	83·2	94·9
1991-92	69·7	74·7
1992-93	100·9	104·2

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, c. 215, how many applicants for assistance from the independent living fund were turned down on the grounds that the value of the applicant's existing package totalled £500 or more; and how many of such applicants subsequently went into residential care.

Mr. Scott: I am informed by the director of the independent living (1993) fund that the information requested is not available.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for each of the non-departmental bodies sponsored by his Department, whether the public has a statutory right to attend all board or committee meetings and to inspect (a) the minutes of meetings, (b) the annual reports and (c) the annual accounts.

Mr. Hague: There is no statutory right for members of the public to attend meetings or inspect the minutes of any of those bodies listed in "Public Bodies 1993", a copy of which is in the Library.

An annual report is published by the chief adjudication officer and by the disability living allowance advisory board. Reports are also published periodically by the Social Security Advisory Committee and the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council. Otherwise none of the bodies listed is required to produce annual reports or accounts.

Students

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the aims, scope and nature of the consultations taking place between his Department and the Department for Education regarding full-time students who temporarily suspend their studies yet under the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987 are precluded from claiming income support or housing benefit even though they are not attending an institution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: Most full-time students are not eligible for income support or housing benefit because support is provided through the student support system. Those with mandatory awards who temporarily suspend their studies because of illness will not have their awards reduced for the first 28 days' absence, but beyond that the amount and duration of payments is at the discretion of the local education authority. When students are absent with the leave of their college for some other reasons, the amount and duration of payments is at the authorities' discretion from the start of their absence. Full-time students who suspend their studies because of ill-health for more than 28 weeks, and supply supporting medical evidence, are eligible to claim income support and housing benefit by virtue of having become one of the prescribed vulnerable groups. Our discussions with the Department for Education are about the extent and circumstances in which temporary suspension of studies occurs.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals there were against invalidity benefit being removed in Fife in 1993.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Gordon Brown, dated 14 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about appeals against the removal of Invalidity Benefit (IVB) in Fife in 1993.

The information is not available in the exact format requested. This is because Benefit Agency District boundaries do not correspond exactly with county or borough boundaries. Whilst the majority of Fife is dealt with by the Agency's Fife District, a small area of North Fife is dealt with by Dundee District Office (DO). However, because Dundee DO deals with a large area other than Fife, statistics for Dundee DO would include many people not living within Fife. I have therefore provided statistics for Fife District only.

The statistics have been obtained from the District's own record of appeals.

Indonesia (Visit)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, columns 6-7, regarding his visit to Indonesia, if he will name the Indonesian and expatriate business people whom he met; indicating what advantages to Britain will ensue; and whether the British-funded railway project which he visited was funded from the Overseas Development Administration funds.

Mr. Nelson: In addition to meetings with the President of Indonesia, senior Ministers and the Governor of the Bank of Indonesia, the Chancellor of the Exchequer met:

Cigading railway project—Ministry of Communication and PERUMKA representatives; BRI and Davy hosts.

PT Peni—Dr. J. M. Hay, President Director; Mr. Gregory Kosasie, Vice-President Director; Mr. Kevin Dunne, Associate President, British Petroleum companies in Indonesia.

Indonesia British Association—Lunch given for 55 guests from the banking, business and financial sectors hosted by Mr. R. M. Hajiwibowo, Chairman, Indonesia British Association.

World Bank—Mr. Nicholas Hope (Director) Indonesia and his staff.

Lippo Bank—Mr. Markus Parmadi, President, Director and senior colleagues.

The Chancellor also gave a reception for 150 senior Indonesian and British business people, and there were 95 guests at a dinner given by the ambassador.

The visit enabled my right hon. and learned Friend to raise the profile of the United Kingdom in Indonesian Government and business circles. This will help to improve investment and trade relations, and has provided valuable support for the efforts of the embassy to promote British business. It also provided the British business men who accompanied the Chancellor with access to key Indonesian decision makers which they might otherwise have found difficult to achieve.

The Cigading to Serpong railway project is being supported from an aid and trade provision.

VAT on Fuel

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made as to the effect of the imposition of value added tax on domestic fuel on residents of sheltered housing units with communal facilities.

Sir John Cope: No such estimate has been made. In cases where supplies of electricity or gas or unmetered by the landlord to individual tenants there will normally be no separate VAT charge since the VAT liability of the fuel will follow that of the accommodation. However, since in many cases the landlord will be unable to recover the VAT charged by the gas/electricity companies there is likely to be a commensurate increase in sheltered housing fees. Most tenants in such units will be eligible for the extra financial assistance being made available by the Government to help meet increased costs resulting from this VAT charge.

VAT-registered Businesses

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, columns 777-80, if he will provide a comparable table showing the stock of VAT registered businesses at January 1991 and December 1993 by Customs area.

Sir John Cope: Numbers of VAT-registered traders are available only for calendar quarters. Those for quarters ended December 1990 and December 1993 were as follows:

Collection	Total number of registered traders at December 1990	December 1993
Belfast	53,886	54,684
Birmingham	122,255	112,776

Draft Budget

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to publish a draft Budget.

Mr. Dorrell: No.

Health and Education Spending

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of public expenditure during (1) 1993-94 and (2) 1994-95 will be spent on (a) health and (b) education.

Mr. Portillo: The available information is in the table. Local authorities have not yet announced their detailed spending plans for 1994-95.

Spending on health and education

Life Assurance

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of individuals who have transferred their assets from one life insurance policy to another provided by a different company.

Mr. Nelson: Records of such transfers are not kept by the Treasury.

Forward: Civil Service Catering

Mr. Hunter: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will publish the terms of the sale of Forward: Civil Service Catering.

Mr. Nelson: Forward has been sold to the Sutcliffe Catering Group Ltd. for £4·6 million. The transfer of the business took place on 14 February. The staff of Forward have transferred to Sutcliffe on their existing terms and conditions in accordance with the TUPE regulations.

Labour Statistics

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide data for the period 1978-79 to 1994-95, showing (a) the size of the work force in employment, (b) the number of individuals in the employed work force paying income tax and the resulting percentage of the employed work force paying income tax and (c) the number of individuals in the employed work force paying national insurance and the resulting percentage of the employed work force paying national insurance.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 7 February 1994]: The table gives the available information for the size of the work force in employment at a particular point in each year, the numbers paying income tax for the year and those paying national insurance contributions at any point during the year. The figures in columns (b) and (c) are therefore not directly comparable with the estimates in (a).

[3] Provisional.

Top Rate Taxpayers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the number of top rate taxpayers in (a) 1992-93, (b) 1993-94 and (c) 1994-95 giving estimates where necessary (i) in absolute terms and (ii) as a percentage of the total number of income taxpayers and also the change as between 1992-93 and 1994-95, (i) in absolute terms and (ii) as a percentage change.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 8 February 1994]: The information requested is as follows:

	Total number of taxpayers (Thousands)	Number of higher rate taxpayers (Thousands)	Higher rate taxpayers as a percentage of total taxpayers (Per cent.)
1992-93	25,100	1,800	7
1993-94	25,100	1,900	8
1994-95	25,400	2,300	9

Change in higher rate taxpers between 1992-93 and 1994-95 (Thousands)	(Per cent.)
500	28

Sports Clubs

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make an announcement about the details of value-added tax concessions and rebates for amateur sports clubs.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 11 February 1994]: Customs and Excise have issued an information paper setting out details of the scope of the proposed VAT exemption for sporting services supplied by non-profit making clubs and including a draft of the relevant Treasury order. Copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Public Bodies

Mr. Straw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce arrangements to ensure that members of appointed public bodies and authorities may be subject to surcharge and disqualification or other similar sanctions in respect of any wilful misconduct in the expenditure of public funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 14 February 1994]: Public bodies are already able to apply disciplinary sanctions, including seeking prosecutions where appropriate. The Government have no plans to seek new powers for surcharging or disqualification. The Government are considering whether the approach recommended in the Cadbury Committee's report on financial aspects of corporate governance could be adapted to meet the needs of public bodies.

European Investment Bank

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the present borrowing limits of the European Investment Bank; what sum has been borrowed to date; and if he will make a statement outlining the manner in which the bank raises its borrowing.

Mr. Nelson [pursuant to his answer, 17 December 1993, column 977]: The total figure given for the European Investment Bank's subscribed capital was 57·6 million ecu, while the limit on the banks total outstanding lending was given as 144 million ecu. These figures are incorrect, and should have read 57·6 billion ecu and 144 billion ecu respectively.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Members of the European Parliament

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what telephone calls are allowed free to Members of the European Parliament (a) within the EU and (b) within the rest of the world; whether Members of the European Parliament's travel allowances are calculated at first class rate even when such a service is not available; and whether the constituency travel allowance for Members of the European Parliament is calculated on the basis of actual mileage incurred.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Members of the European Parliament receive a general expenditure allowance of 2,732 ECU—£2,131—per month to cover office management costs including telephone calls.

Members of the European Parliament receive a flat-rate travel allowance of 0·73 ECU—57p—per kilometre for the first 800 km and 0·37 ECU—29p—for each additional kilometre for travel within the Community to attend official meetings. Members are reimbursed the actual cost of the return air fare by the most direct route for travel outside the EC to attend official meetings, and receive a travel allowance of up to 3,000 ECU—£2,340—per annum for travel on official business other than to attend official meetings.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the allowances payable to Members of the European Parliament.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The European Parliament's allowances for Members are as follows:

Subsistence

Subsistence allowance of 199 ECU, approximately £155, per day for attending official meetings within the European Community plus the cost of overnight accommodation, etc. for attending official meetings outside the Community.

Travel

Flat rate travel allowance of 0·73 ECU—57p—per kilometre for the first 800 km and 0·37 ECU—29p—for each additional kilometre of travel within the Community to attend official meetings. Reimbursement of the return air fare by the most direct route for travel outside the EC to attend official meetings. Travel allowance of up to 3,000 ECU—£2,340—per annum for travel on official business other than to attend official meetings.

Office and Secretarial Assistance

Secretarial Assistance Allowance of up to 7,468 ECU—£5,826—per month. General Expenditure Allowance of 2,732 ECU—£2,131—per month for office management costs, telephone, postage and travel within member states. Halved in respect of Members who, for no valid reason, have failed to attend at least half the number of plenary sittings.

Data Processing

Data Processing allowance of up to 1,000 ECU—£780—per annum for purchase or rent of equipment.

Malaysia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions were held with the Government of Malaysia on the question of arms sales during the visits of (a) the Minister of State, the former right hon. Member for Wallasey in August 1987, (b) the Secretary of State in April 1988, (c) the Minister of State, the Lord Glenarthur, in November 1988, (d) the Secretary of State in October 1989, (e) the Minister of State, the Lord Brabazon, in January 1990, (f) the Minister of State, the former hon. Member for Warwickshire, North, in February 1990, (g) the Minister of State, the Lord Caithness, in April 1991, (h) the Minister of State, the right hon. and learned Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg), in September 1991, (i) the Minister of State, the Lord Caithness, in September 1991, (j) the Secretary of State in July 1992 and (k) the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), in April 1993.

Mr. Goodlad: During their visits to Malaysia, FCO Ministers regularly discuss a wide range of issues, including trade, education, defence, regional, aid, economic and security matters.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions were held with the Government of Malaysia on the question of aid during the visits of (a) the Minister of State, the former right hon. Member for Wallasey in August 1987, (b) the Secretary of State in April 1988, (c) the Minister of State, the Lord Glenarthur, in November 1988, (d) the Secretary of State in October 1989, (e) the Minister of State, the Lord Brabazon, in January 1990, (f) the Minister of State, the former hon. Member for Warwickshire, North, in February 1990, (g) the Minister of State, the Lord Caithness, in April 1991, (h) the Minister of State, the right hon. and learned Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg), in September 1991, (i) the Minister of State, the Lord Caithness, in September 1991, (j) the Secretary of State in July 1992 and (k) the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), in April 1993.

Mr. Goodlad: During their visits to Malaysia, FCO Ministers regularly discuss a wide range of issues, including trade, education, defence, regional, aid, economic and security matters.

UN World Summit on Social Development

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to set up a United Kingdom national committee to prepare for the United Nations world summit on social development to be held in Copenhagan in March 1995; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The first preparatory committees for the world summit for social development took place in New York from 31 January to 11 February. Her Majesty's Government were represented by officials from London and New York. We have no plans at present to establish a national committee.

UN (50th Anniversary)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for marking the 50th anniversary of the United Nations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Plans for marking the 50th anniversary of the United Nations are still in their early stages. Under the auspices of the United Nations Association of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, a national committee has been set up to co-ordinate the national programme of events. The president is the right hon. the Lord Howe of Aberavon, QC. Commemorative events are envisaged on the three key dates: 26 June 1995—the anniversary of the signing of the United Nations charter—24 October 1995—the anniversary of the Charter coming into force—and 10 January 1996, the anniversary of the first session of the General Assembly.

Guatemala

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Guatemalan Government on the abuse of street children.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have made clear to the Guatemalan authorities the concern felt in this country about street children and the importance of upholding human rights, especially the rights of children.

Bosnia

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has to suggest that Serbian forces and Croatian forces have been fighting in Bosnia during the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Reports from various sources suggest that both regular Croatian army forces are active in Bosnia. Both Croatia and Serbia also appear to have given material support to their respective allies in Bosnia through the provision of equipment and by recruiting personnel. The European Union and the United Nations have made clear on a number of occasions the unacceptability of outside intervention in Bosnia. Serbia is already subject to wide-ranging economic sanctions. The European Union has put Croatia on notice of possible measures against it, if its involvement continues.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, column 122, on arms sales to Indonesia, whether the principle that sovereign states have a right to defend themselves applies equally to Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Article 51 of the UN charter recognises the right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a member of the United Nations, until the United Nations Security Council has taken measures necessary to monitor international peace and security. United Nations Security Council resolution 713 imposed a mandatory arms embargo on all the former Yugoslav republics. We share the view of the United Nations, the co-chairmen and the majority of members of the Security Council that to lift the arms embargo at this stage would be a mistake.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the military situation and condition of the civilian population in and around Mostar in Bosnia-Herzegovina; whether this was discussed at the NATO meeting on 8 February; and if the possibility of air-strikes against either Croat or Muslim forces in the area has been contemplated.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Eastern Mostar is a Bosnian Muslim enclave, which has come under continuous shelling by the Bosnian Croats. The humanitarian situation remains of profound concern. Aid convoys are getting through under escort from the Spanish battalion of UNPROFOR. After a long delay a mobile hospital donated by the South Africans was recently delivered.

Mostar was not discussed specifically at the NATO meeting on 8 February. But the NATO decisions of last August, reaffirmed at the 10-11 January summit, stated the alliance's readiness to conduct air strikes, with the approval of the UN Secretary-General, to prevent the strangulation of Sarajevo and other areas. The situation in Mostar is under constant review.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation took place with the Ukraine, and other non-NATO states, before the decision of NATO on 9 February to contemplate air strikes against Bosnian-Serb forces was taken; and whether such forces will be under NATO orders should such air strikes take place.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No consultation took place with Ukraine immediately before the 9 February NATO decision. However, the action contemplated is consistent with the existing UN mandate. The UN Secretary-General or his delegated representative must authorise the first use of air power, and UNPROFOR commanders must be closely consulted.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what were the contents of the UNPROFOR report concerning the artillery attack on the Sarajevo market on Saturday 5 February; what were the contents of subsequent reports on the incident; and what progress has been made to establish responsibility for the incident;

(2) whether the site or sites from which the artillery attack on Sarajevo market took place on Saturday 5 February was one which had previously been inspected by or monitored by United Nations observers; what was the position of the nearest United Nations observer team at the time of the incident; and what report was filed by observers on the ground.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations Secretary-General has informed the Security Council that the massacre at Sarajevo market on 5 February resulted from the detonation of a single 120 mm mortar shell, and not an artillery attack. The site from which the mortar was fired has not been determined. UNPROFOR has been able to establish only a broad area straddling the line of confrontation.

Reports by United Nations military observers are not made available outside the UNPROFOR military chain of command. We do not have available information on the day-to-day deployments of United Nations military observers.

The special representative of the Secretary-General, Yasushi Akashi, announced on 11 February that he has decided to establish an investigative team to look into the details of the tragic incident. The five-member team will consist of military officers from UNPROFOR with appropriate technical expertise. The team will be led by the UNPROFOR force engineer, Colonel Gauthier of Canada, and include officers from France, Spain, Pakistan and Russia. The investigative team will report its findings to the special representative as soon as possible.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has in respect of the present situation in the area in and around Bihac in Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he is able to assess the state of relations between the Bosnian Muslim authorities there and (a) the Bosnian Government of President Izetbegovic, (b) the Bosnian Serbs and (c) the Bosnian Croats.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We remain concerned about the security situation in the Bihac pocket. It is clear from recent reports that intra-Muslim tension remains high, and that the Bosnian Serbs have resumed artillery attacks on Bosnian Muslim forces. We have seen nothing to suggest that there is any fighting involving the Bosnian Croats in this area.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any of the warring factions in Bosnia-Herzegovina have proposed any investigating commission being set up to establish responsibility for the artillery attack on the Sarajevo market on Saturday 5 February; and what offers of co-operation in such an investigation have been made by (a) the Bosnian Serbs and (b) the Bosnian Muslims.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations Secretary General's special representative, Mr. Akashi, has now announced the establishment of such a commission. This will require the full co-operation of both the Bosnian Serbs and the Bosnian Government.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support any Russian request for a meeting of the United Nations Security Council to debate the continuing conflict in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations Security Council discussed the situation in Bosnia on 14 February.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what precautions were discussed at the NATO meeting on 8 February to ensure that Bosnian-Muslim forces do not enter demilitarised zones vacated by the Bosnian-Serb army; if the use of force to prevent this from happening was agreed; and what action would be taken in the event of Bosnian-Serbs repelling such advances by force.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The aim of the NATO decision of 9 February was to enforce, together with UNPROFOR, an end to the bombardment of Sarajevo. To this end, the alliance called on the Bosnian Government to place heavy weapons, located within the exclusion zone 20 km around Sarajevo, under United Nations control. NATO did not, however, demand full demilitarisation of the city. UNPROFOR monitors have been positioned at all key and sensitive points within both Muslim and Serb-held areas, and the ceasefire negotiated by UNPROFOR has been generally respected so far.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place a copy of each report from UNPROFOR on the conflict in the former Yugoslavia in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Copies of the reports of the United Nations Secretary-General to the Security Council on the situation in the former Yugoslavia pursuant to Security Council resolutions are already placed in the Library of the House. The United Nations Secretary-General's reports take into account the views of his special representative who is head of mission for UNPROFOR.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Bosnian-Muslim forces have been put on notice of air strikes against their positions in the event of any use of artillery by Muslim forces.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The NATO decision of 9 February applies to all parties involved in the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia. Any heavy weapons identified by the United Nations as attacking civilians in Sarajevo, or, if within 20 km of the centre of Sarajevo, not under UN control by midnight on 20 February, will be subject to air strikes. We welcome the assurances given by the Bosnian Prime Minister, Mr Silajdzic, that his Government are ready to comply with the NATO decision.

British Virgin Islands

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the real gross domestic product per capita in the British Virgin Islands in 1990 in US dollars.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The gross domestic product per capita of the British Virgin Islands in 1990 was $9,500. The Caribbean development bank estimate GDP per capita in 1992 to be $10,479 per capita.

Armenia

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent talks with the President of Armenia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: President Ter-Petrossian of Armenia visited the United Kingdom as a guest of the Government from 8 to 11 February. My right honourable Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs called on him on 8 February for talks which touched on the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict, economic reform, Russia and the CIS. In addition, during his visit President Ter-Petrossian had an audience of Her Majesty the Queen, lunch and talks with my right honourable Friend the Prime Minister and meetings with other members of the Government.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those responsible for making appointments of (a) chairs and (b) members of the boards to each of the executive non-departmental bodies sponsored by his Department.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year since 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each year to 1995-96 for each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by his department, as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Mr. Goodlad: Gross public spending since 1990-91 for each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, including the Overseas Development Administration, was as follows, in 1992-93 prices:

£ million

	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94 (forecast)
Britain-Russia Centre	0·232	0·208	[1]0·270	0·211
British Association for Central and Eastern Europe[1]	0·202	0·206	[2]0·231	0·226
British Council[3]	329·000	301·000	[2]292·000	254·000
Commonwealth Institutes, London and Edinburgh	3·046	2·820	3·092	3·558

Westminster Foundation for Democracy	0	0·200	[2]1·000	1·937
Commonwealth Scholarship Commission	0·04	0·07	0·05	0·05

Note: Figures for 1994-95 and 1995-96 are not shown. The former are subject to parliamentary approval of the supply estimates. It is too early to predict future years' expenditure on individual non-departmental public bodies.

[1] Includes grants-in-aid and project funding.
[2] Corrected figures: those published in "Public Bodies 1993" were erroneous.
[3] Includes an element for reimbursements by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office—Diplomatic Wing/Overseas Development Administration—for agency expenditure, transfers to third parties. This is broken down as follows, in 1992-93 prices:

	£ million
1990-91	158
1991-92	148
1992-93	141
1993-94[4]	118

[4] Forecast.

Committee of the Regions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with his opposite numbers in the European Union, concerning the democratic accountability of members of the Committee of the Regions to their respective regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Under the arrangements agreed by all member states in the Maastricht treaty—article 198—members of the Committee of the Regions "shall be completely independent in the performance of their duties, in the general interest of the European Community". The committee consists of representatives of regional and local bodies, and each British representative must be an elected member of a local authority, but

"The members of the Committee may not be bound by any mandatory instructions."

Korean Peninsula

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation on the Korean peninsula.

Mr. Goodlad: The situation on the Korean peninsula still gives cause for concern. We continue to urge North Korea to reach rapid agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency on resumption of nuclear safeguards inspections.

International Labour Organisation

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to remain in membership of the International Labour Organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no plans to withdraw from the International Labour Organisation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Loyalist Paramilitaries

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to reassure the nationalist population of Northern Ireland that links between the security forces in Northern Ireland and loyalist paramilitaries do not exist.

Sir John Wheeler: Allegations of collusion between members of the security forces in Northern Ireland and loyalist paramilitaries were thoroughly investigated in 1989 by Mr. John Stevens, then deputy chief constable of Cambridgeshire. As a result of his investigation, a number of persons were charged with criminal offences and convicted.

The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Sir Hugh Annesley, published a summary of Mr. Stevens' report in 1990. The report concluded that collusion was neither widespread nor institutionalised.

The security forces in Northern Ireland carry out their duties in protecting the whole community with absolute impartiality. This is well illustrated by the figures relating to charges for terrorist-type offences. Last year alone 230 persons affiliated to loyalist paramilitary groups were charged with terrorist-type offences. The figure for republican terrorism was 137. This very fact alone should serve to reassure the Catholic community of the impartiality of the security forces in Northern Ireland.

TRANSPORT

Railtrack

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made by Railtrack in producing charges for access to the railway network.

Mr. MacGregor: From 1 April, Railtrack will assume responsibility for the provision of railway infrastructure and will need to charge operators for access to the network. Railtrack has produced estimates of access charges for all the train-operating units that will be formed in April and will now be discussing these with local managers. Discussions will also be held with passenger transport executives and others who sponsor passenger services. The charges announced today will establish charges for the first year of Railtrack's operation. any further changes for 1994-95 will be fine tuning only, after consultation with the train operators.

The charges will reflect the true economic costs of providing rail infrastructure. They will allow Railtrack to recover its capital costs—depreciation and a return on assets—like any other business. Thus, for the first time, charges being made for track will be set in a transparent and commercially realistic manner.

The access charges are consistent with the provision for railways expenditure already announced in the unified Budget, without any adverse effects on the level of fares, services or investment. The franchising director will have sufficient grant to enable the BR train operating units which he supports to pay the new access charges. Special arrangements will apply to enable the PTEs to meet the track charges on the new basis.

Over the past 12 months, Railtrack has engaged in a detailed exercise to identify the full economic cost of running trains on the rail network. Charges take into account the costs of particular parts of the network. Railtrack's charges have been set at a level that will generate sufficient revenue to ensure that the company can cover all its costs, which include the costs of maintaining and renewing the network, plus the cost of the capital employed in the business—the rate of return. Railtrack will therefore be able to invest in and maintain the railway to meet the demands being placed on it.

Charges cover two broad elements of cost. First, are direct costs, which are the costs that operators' services impose on Railtrack. They include the cost of wear and tear, day-to-day maintenance and, where appropriate, the cost of the electricity used by electric trains. Where Railtrack is providing a section of track or other infrastructure solely for a particular operator, the full costs of renewing this element will be charged directly to that user. Secondly, there are "common costs", which are the costs that cannot be attributed to individual users—for example sections of track shared by two or more users. These costs are to be recovered from the train operating units and franchisees operating over the lines concerned according to an agreed formula which takes account of a range of factors including revenue from fares.

Charges to non-franchised operators—principally freight operators—will be subject to commercial negotiation, but must at least cover direct costs.

In common with other public sector undertakings, Railtrack's assets will be valued on a "modern equivalent asset value" basis, MEAV. The valuation will reflect the existing condition of assets and the cost of continuing to provide capacity broadly equivalent to that provided now.

The rail regulator will consider and approve all access agreements entered into after 1 April 1994.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who are the members currently appointed to the Landscape advisory committee.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year since 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each year to 1995-96 for each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department, as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Mr. Norris: The information in respect of the traffic director for London is as follows:

1992-93 prices (to nearest million)

	Year	£ million
	1990-91	0
Outturn	1991-92	1
Outturn	1992-93	2

Trinity house and the Northern Lighthouse Board are not Exchequer funded. Their operating costs are met from the general lighthouse fund which receives its income from the levy of light dues at United Kingdom and Republic of Ireland ports.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those responsible for making appointments of (a) chairs and (b) members of the boards to each of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department.

Mr. Norris: The traffic director for London is a corporation sole and has no board. The director is appointed by my right hon. Friend.

The chairman of Trinity House Lighthouse Service, THLS, is the deputy master of Trinity House and subject to annual re-election by the court of Trinity House. My right hon. Friend nominates three board members; three board members are elder brethren of Trinity House who are officers of THLS; and there are three non-voting board members who are employees of THLS.

The chairman of the Northern Lighthouse Board is elected by the board. The board of the Northern Lighthouse Board consists of the six sheriffs-principal of Scotland, two Ministers of the Crown—the Lord Advocate and the Solicitor-General for Scotland—two district council chairmen, the Lords Provost of Edinburgh, Glasgow and Aberdeen, a nominee of the Manx Government, and five members co-opted by the board. My right hon. Friend appoints the member proposed by the Manx Government representative as a constitutional convenience.

Driving Standards Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are the present salary costs for the chief executive of the Driving Standards Agency; and if he will give details of special bonus schemes in place for the incumbent and the tenure of appointment for the post holder;

(2) if he will list the special bonus payments made to the previous chief executive of the Driving Standards Agency.

Mr. Key: The chief executive of the Driving Standards Agency is employed at a salary of £47,900 per annum. In addition, he is eligible for annual performance-related bonuses of up to 15 per cent., which will depend on his meeting or exceeding specific targets. The chief executive was appointed following an open competition on 1 September 1993 for a fixed term until 22 August 1996, which may be extended.

Driver Safety Document

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the situation regarding the new driver safety consultation document; and what provisional conclusion he has reached.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friend, the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) on 9 February 1994, Official Report, columns 270-71.

Motorway Extensions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the economic and social cost of land safeguarded for possible future extensions to the motorway network.

Mr. Key: The purpose of safeguarding is to prevent development which would prove abortive if the scheme goes ahead, thus avoiding waste of resource and cost to the taxpayer. In so far as this in itself imposes economic and social costs, the statutory provisions on blight are aimed at compensating those who are affected.

Motorway Cleaning

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 97, when the central reservation of the M1 in Bedfordshire and Northamptonshire was last cleaned; when it will be cleaned; and what is the programme for cleaning.

Mr. Key: In Bedfordshire, the section between junctions 11 and 13 was cleaned during September and October 1993. South of junction 11, the motorway widening works have prevented the normal cleaning operations, but there will be a litter pick on Saturday 12 February and a full clean of the central reserve in the following week.

In Northamptonshire, daily inspections are carried out and any debris causing a safety hazard to road users is removed straightaway.

On the short intervening section of M1 in Buckinghamshire, junctions 13 to 15, the drainage channel was last cleaned in December 1993 and scavenging was undertaken on 18 to 21 January 1994.

The frequency of future cleaning will be in accordance with the code of practice on litter and refuse under the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Motorway central reservations are a special case in the code because of the difficulties of access. In practice, the frequency of cleaning is likely to be about twice a year.

Driving Theory Test

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the timetable for the introduction of the driving theory test; and which bodies will be prevented from bidding for the work associated with administering the test.

Mr. Key: The driving theory test will be introduced by 1st July 1996. We intend to contract out the operation of this test, but decisions have not yet been taken about the conditions of tendering for the contract.

A6(M)

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the time scale for completing the planning process and building the A6(M) bypass for Hazel Grove to Birmingham.

Mr. Key: Proposed changes to the scheme will require the published draft orders to be withdrawn. We are hoping to re-publish the orders later this year with a view to holding a public inquiry early next year. The time for completion will depend upon the outcome of the inquiry.

Drinking and Driving

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has commissioned in order to assess the extent to which drivers aged 50 years and over have received the message that drinking and driving is not advisable; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The reduction in drink driving by different groups of drivers is estimated by analysis of police breath test statistics and data supplied by coroners. This shows that drinking and driving among drivers aged 50 years and over has been falling at much the same rate as for drivers under the age of 50.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department first and last received representations from the British Medical Association for random breath testing as a major means of reducing drunk driving; and if he will estimate the reduction in drink drive deaths (a) during that period and (b) from the peak to the present day.

Mr. Key: Records are not available to show the date when the British Medical Association first made a representation to the Department of Transport on random breath testing.

Estimates are made annually of the number of fatal casualties in accidents where at least one driver exceeded the legal alcohol limit. In 1978, the earliest year for which reliable data are available, the number was 1,650 and numbers in each subsequent year have been below this. In 1992, the most recent year available, the provisional estimate is 610, a reduction of 63 per cent. compared with 1978.

Vehicles (Catalytic Converters)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what is the estimated number of vehicles in the United Kingdom; and what proportion of those vehicles have catalytic converters.

Mr. Key: About 25 million vehicles are currently licensed to use United Kingdom roads. Estimates based on industry sources and Department of Transport data on new vehicle registrations indicate roughly 11 per cent., or about 2·75 million vehicles are fitted with catalytic converters. Exact figures are not available.

Accident Records

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has undertaken into the effectiveness of computerised accident records in improved road safety; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Department keeps computerised records of all road injury accidents recorded by the police. These are extensively used in developing and monitoring road safety policy. These records are enhanced by linking them to coroners' records of road accident fatalities and research is under way to explore the possibility of developing a link with hospital casualty data.

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who is responsible for taking action against untaxed motor vehicles and motor vehicles that have been abandoned and are on the public highway.

Mr. Key: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, DVLA, administers and enforces the vehicle licensing regime. A pre-requisite to successful enforcement action is a formal sighting of the vehicle on a public road without a valid tax disc. The police and traffic wardens play a vital role in this process. They detect apparently unlicensed vehicles as part of their normal duties and report them to the DVLA for appropriate enforcement action.

Local authorities, together with the police, have powers under the Removal and Disposal of Vehicles Regulations 1986 to deal with vehicles that are illegally, obstructively or dangerously parked, abandoned or broken down. Their powers do not extend to vehicles simply because they are unlicensed. Where abandoned vehicles are also unlicensed, DVLA works with local authorities in identifying those persons responsible and in bringing them to book.

Truck Drivers

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport is he will delay the implementation of the EU directive on disbarring insulin-dependent truck drivers until he has analysed the report on the three-year study of the subject currently being carried out by the USA's Federal Highway Administration.

Mr. Key: The second EC directive on driver licensing has been agreed and is to be implemented by July 1996. The present advice from the honorary advisory panel on driving and diabetes is that to allow insulin-treated diabetics to drive large vehicles would constitute an unnecessary risk to road safety. The panel will reconsider this advice in the light of the USA's Federal Highway Administration's report as soon as it becomes available.

Vehicles (Rear Impact Tests)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what data his Department collects on passenger injuries resulting from impacts to the rear of vehicles;

(2) what plans he has to introduce rear impact safety tests for vehicles;

(3) what representations he has received about the safety of rear-facing children's seats in cars.

Mr. Key: The Department has two main sources for the collection of accident and injury data—the "STATS 19 Road Accident Report" which forms the basis of the Department's annual publication "Road Accidents Great Britain" and an ongoing co-operative crash injury study sponsored jointly by the Department and certain vehicle manufacturers. Details of injuries resulting from rear impacts are included as a matter of course in both. In addition the Department has recently set up a two-year study to investigate the long-term effect of whiplash injuries.

The Department is currently carrying out research into the possibility of developing a test procedure to simulate rear-end accidents which offers the prospect of a reduction in casualties.

We have not received any representations specifically about the safety of rear-facing child seats. Such restraints are the safest way of transporting very young children although their use on the front seat of a vehicle fitted with a passenger air bag is inadvisable.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many visits abroad the Minister for Roads and Traffic made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Key: My predecessor made one trip abroad in 1993.

Place	Purpose	Cost
Amsterdam	To attend the European Conference of Ministers for Transport	£341·52

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many visits abroad the Minister of State for Aviation and Shipping made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Norris: The Minister of State for Aviation and Shipping made the following visits abroad last year:

Place	Purpose	Cost (£)
Brussels	To attend EC Transport Council	567·82
Dublin	To attend meeting on shipping developments with Irish Ministers	254·00
Brussels	To attend EC Transport Council	560·00
Paris	To attend Paris air show	242·10
Paris, Amsterdam and Frankfurt	To visit European airports	874·30
Brussels	To attend EC Transport Council and various aviation visits in Brussels and Maastricht	434·38
Hong Kong	To attend conference on aviation security and various aviation and shipping visits	3,733·27
Brussels	To attend EC Transport Council	390·28

Child Accidents

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents children have had on the roads in each year since 1987.

Mr. Key: The number of injury road accidents involving children since 1987 are as follows:

	Number
1987	40,657
1988	41,430
1989	43,147
1990	43,620
1991	39,987
1992	39,340

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money his Department has spent on measures designed to prevent road accidents to children for each year since 1987.

Mr. Key: Many aspects of our road safety programme contribute to improving child road safety as well as that of other road users. In addition to measures such as cycle training or road safety education directed specifically at children, they also benefit from the construction of safer roads and vehicles and from improved driver behaviour. It is not, therefore, possible to calculate what proportion of the expenditure should be attributed to the prevention of road accidents to children.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the grounds for compassionate compensation due to the channel tunnel rail link; and what arrangements are available for appeals against decisions to refuse such claims.

Mr. Freeman: Purchase will be considered by Union Railways for homes that are likely to experience operational noise above the proposed threshold for noise insulation. There needs to be proven financial hardship in buying another property necessitated by a job move beyond commuting distance, medical problems, or family dissolution. There can be other hardship grounds and cases are looked at individually. The scheme is not a statutory requirement and decisions are entirely at the discretion of Union Railways.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to announce safeguarding arrangements for properties affected by the proposed high-speed channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Freeman: In the next few weeks.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether decisions about safeguarding and compensation for properties affected by the proposed high-speed channel tunnel rail link will be made by Union Railways, or by his Department.

Mr. Freeman: The safeguarding directions will be made by the Secretary of State with the benefit of advice from Union Railways on the land to be included in the safeguarded zone. Union Railways has said that it will accept applications for voluntary purchase of owner-occupied homes within the safeguarded zone. Outside the zone it will consider in cases of hardship the purchase of homes likely to experience operational noise above the proposed threshold for noise insulation.

Stratford

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met representatives of Union Railways to discuss the case for an international station at Stratford.

Mr. Freeman: I met representatives of Union Railways to discuss a number of matters related to the channel tunnel rail link on 2 February. At that meeting, I asked Union Railways to discuss further with the Stratford promoter group the assumptions underlying its case, and to report back to me.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated monthly loss of revenue to Eurotunnel as a result of the delay in operating services.

Mr. Freeman: This is a matter for Eurotunnel.

Road Repairs

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of what sums have been allocated in each of the last five years to highway authorities for the repair of principal roads; and what that amount represented as an overall proportion of money allocated to local highway authorities.

Mr. Key: As explained in my answer of 2 February, Official Report, column 756, transport supplementary grant and credit approvals were first allocated for structural maintenance of principal roads forming part of the primary route network in 1992-93 and were extended to cover all principal roads in 1993-94. Allocations for structural maintenance, and the proportion they represent of the total resources allocated under the TSG system, are as follows:

Stansted Airport

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will visit businesses in Cambridge to discuss the need for transatlantic air services from London Stansted airport.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has no plans at present to visit Cambridge.

Chemicals (Labelling)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made in negotiations relating to acceptance by the EU of the hazchem label; and if he will make a detailed statement.

Mr. Key: The European Commission's published proposal—COM(93) 548—for a Council directive to apply the provisions of the European agreement concerning the international carriage of dangerous goods by road, ADR, to domestic transport includes a provision which would allow the continued use of existing emergency acton codes for domestic journeys until an internationally agreed code is developed. This would allow the continued use of the hazchem placard in the United Kingdom and the Commission is known to favour this as the basis for a new international code.

Consideration of the proposed directive has begun under the Greek Presidency. We shall seek to ensure that the proposed derogation is retained in the final agreed text.

Transatlantic Air Travel

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to conclude the present round of negotiations with the United States of America regarding a new liberalised air service agreement.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the current negotiations with the United States of America on the transatlantic air travel bilateral restrictions started; and when he expects them to be concluded.

Mr. Norris: United States Transportation Secretary Pena and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met on 19 April last year and agreed to try to reach a new, more liberal agreement within a year. That is still the time scale we are working to.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the effect on revenue to United Kingdom airlines of granting United States airlines free access to United Kingdom regional airports and the effect on the economies of the regions.

Mr. Norris: The CAA has estimated that the revenue loss to United Kingdom airlines of granting United States airlines free access to United Kingdom regional airports is in the region of £23 million per annum. There are benefits to consumers and local economies in the regions although these are difficult to quantify.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what survey has been carried out by his Department or the Civil Aviation Authority on how many passengers per year from the Stansted airport catchment area fly to the United States of America from (a) Stansted and (b) other British airports.

Mr. Norris: The Civil Aviation Authority conducted an origin and destination survey at five London airports—Gatwick, Heathrow, London City, Luton and Stansted—between January and December 1991. Its findings were published in January 1993 in CAP 610, "Passengers at London Airports in 1991".

The catchment area of an airport is impossible to define with precision; this is particularly so when a number of airports serve the same locality. Of the 1·3 million passengers using Stansted to make international journeys in 1991, 18 per cent. travelled to or from points in Essex, 8 per cent. Hertfordshire, 23 per cent. East Anglia with the largest proportion, 34 per cent. travelled from or to Greater London. Comparable figures for Gatwick's 16·2 million passengers making international journeys were 4 per cent. Essex, 2 per cent. Hertfordshire, 3 per cent. East Anglia and 42 per cent. Greater London. For Heathrow's 25 million passengers making international journeys the figures were 1·8 per cent. Essex, 2·7 per cent. Hertfordshire, 2·4 per cent. East Anglia and 54·9 per cent. Greater London.

During the London survey period there were no scheduled services to the United States from Stansted. A route to Chicago by American Airlines began in June 1992 but ceased in May 1993 having carried 65,000 passengers. Some 29,000 passengers travelled on charter services between Stansted and Orlando in 1991 and 20,000 in 1992.

No specific analysis has been carried out on the proportion of passengers from the Stansted Airport catchment area flying to or from the United States.

British Rail

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has now reflected on the legal opinion quoted by the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling during the debate on the Adjournment on 13 January, Official Report, columns 425-29; and if British Rail will revise its leaflet on the subject of compensation for noise and vibration.

Mr. Freeman: I am grateful to my right hon. Friend and to Tonbridge and Malling borough council for making available a copy of the counsel's opinion.

The passages quoted from the opinion were concerned with the interpretation of section 9 of the Land Compensation Act 1973. Among other issues, that section provides in appropriate circumstances for claims to be payable in respect of compensation for depreciation in the value of properties arising as a consequence of certain railway works. These works fall into two categories: works which have been reconstructed, extended or otherwise altered after they have been first used—dealt with in subsection (1)(b) of the section—and works in respect of which there has been a change of use—dealt with in subsection (1)(c). Subsection (7) of the section goes on to state that references in the section to a change of use do not include references to the intensification of an existing use.

Counsel made the point that it follows from these provisions that changes of use which are limited to intensification of the use of existing lines do not give rise to compensation, whereas reconstructions, extensions and other alterations may do so. The Government see no reason to dissent from this interpretation. In the debate, my right hon. Friend sought to suggest that a contrary view had been taken by Ministers in previous debates in Parliament. More specifically, he referred to what I said in the debate on 19 June 1991 about provisions in the 1973 Act not applying if the amount of the traffic on a road or railway were to increase. Those comments need to be read in the context of my statement as a whole. This related to a proposal to introduce a discretionary power for the Secretary of State to pay compensation in cases of injurious affection arising from the intensification of operations by the British Railways Board. I went on to stress the clear distinction between

"the construction or alteration of public works and the intensification of use of existing works".—[Official Report, 19 June 1991; Vol. 193, c. 345-46.]

As reflected in that statement, I fully recognise that compensation may be payable where existing railway lines are reconstructed, extended or otherwise altered after they have first been used and where it can be shown that depreciation has resulted from physical factors, such as noise and vibration, caused by their use. It is for individuals to make claims where they consider that such depreciation has occurred and for the responsible authority, currently British Rail, to address those claims. In the event of a dispute, there is provision for reference to the Lands Tribunal, and the possibility thereafter of appeal to the courts.

On the question of the British Rail leaflet, the board is studying the issues which have been raised so as to determine whether to amend the leaflet. Department of Transport officials will keep in close touch with BR on this and I will make a further statement on this matter shortly.

Seat Belts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date his review of the technical and cost implications of seat belts in coaches and minibuses was announced; what is the timescale for its completion; and if he will publish the full results of this review.

Mr. Key: Work began on reviewing the full technical and cost implications of the compulsory fitment of seat belts in minibuses and coaches during November 1993. I expect to receive a report within the next few weeks. I cannot anticipate when decisions will be taken; but we shall be publishing our conclusions.

European Aviation

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the report on European aviation by the Comité des Sages; and what steps he is taking to ensure the recommendations are implemented by all members of the European Union.

Mr. Norris: I warmly welcome the publication of the report of the Commité des Sages and, in particular, its commitment to the implementation of the single market. It offers a useful assessment of the position of European air transport and emphasises a number of key areas where improvements need to be made. Specifically, I endorse whole-heartedly the report's conclusions on reducing Government intervention in airlines' commercial decisions. I also support the report's general views on state aids and have urged the Commission to ensure that these are reflected in the revision of its own guidelines on state aids in this sector. However, there are a number of other recommendations on which the United Kingdom has reservations, including the need for a new European body for air traffic control.

It will, of course, be for the Commission to take forward implementation of the report's recommendations and put forward proposals to the Council of Ministers where appropriate. I shall, however, be pressing the Commission to take action on the report's key recommendations on the implementation of the single market.

Malaysian Airways

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what compensation was paid to British Airways for giving up landing rights at Heathrow in favour of Malaysian Airways; what was the Government's role in the negotiations leading to this concession; and from what funds compensation was provided.

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom has liberal air services arrangements with Malaysia which permit the airlines of either side to operate up to a maximum proportion of the total air services operated by United Kingdom and Malaysia airlines. Following airline discussions in 1989, as commercial agreement was made between British Airways and MAS concerning the operation of a further service by the Malaysian airline. The two Governments then agreed to vary the arrangements to enable that airline to operate the further service. The Government are not privy to the details of the commercial agreement between the two airlines. No public funding formed part of the air services arrangements.

Vehicle Excise Offences

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by DVLA local office for the last five years how many excise offence reports have been received during the last year; how many have resulted in (i) out of court settlement, or (ii) a successful prosecution; and what were the amounts raised by out of court settlements and prosecutions.

Mr. Key [holding answer 9 February 1994]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Urban Air Quantity

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many copies of the second report of the quality of urban air review group on diesel vehicle emissions and urban air quality were printed; at what cost; and to whom they were distributed.

Mr. Atkins: Two thousand copies of the second report of the quality of urban air review group on diesel emissions and urban air quality were printed at a cost of £11,412. The report has been distributed to:

the Environment Select Committee,
the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution,
Chief Environment Health Officers in England, Wales Scotland and Northern Ireland,
Industry,
Environmental Interest Groups,
Respiratory Health Interest Groups,
National and motoring press,
Government Research Institutes,
Universities,
and a number of interested individuals.

Copies were also placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he or his officials have had with his counterpart in the Irish Republic over the past year in regard to the quantity and type of toxic waste imported into the United Kingdom from the Republic.

Mr. Atkins: My hon. Friend the then Minister for the Environment and Countryside met the Irish Environmental Protection Minister on 15 July last year, when a number of issues were discussed including the Irish Republic's plans for disposing of its hazardous waste.

Wind Farms

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning applications for wind farms have been (a) accepted and (b) rejected since 1984.

Mr. Baldry: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Groundwork Foundation

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of spending for 1993-94 of the grant-in-aid given to the Groundwork Foundation, showing how much money was forwarded by the foundation to Groundwork trusts and how much was used by the Groundwork Foundation.

Mr. Atkins: The Groundwork Foundation's grant allocation for 1993-94 is £5,516,000, of which the foundation expects to pay £3,792,014 in total to Groundwork Trusts. The foundation estimates that it will pay £1,994,318 as contributions towards the running costs of the trusts, £1,472,696 as grants for specific projects and £325,000 towards the purchase of computer systems. In addition, the foundation will spend £205,000 on training costs for the benefit of trust personnel. The foundation estimates that its own staffing and support costs will be £1,518,986.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the staff employed by the Groundwork Foundation in the financial years 1991-92 and 1992-93 with their annual salaries; and if he will list the dates at which new staff were taken on.

Mr. Atkins: The Groundwork Foundation employed 17 staff in 1991-92 and the total cost of salaries was £663,693. In 1992-93 it employed 33 staff and salaries totalled £888,355. I am obtaining the more detailed breakdown the hon. Member has requested and shall write to him.

Urban Development Corporation

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table indicating the number of jobs created by (a) Teesside urban development corporation and (b) Tyne and Wear urban development corporation in each year since 1987.

Mr. Baldry: The number of gross jobs, direct and indirect, created by the Teesside and Tyne and Wear development corporations is as follows:

	TDC	TWDC
1987-88	N/a	1,485
1988-89	600	7,670
1989-90	2,600	[1]387
1990-91	2,800	1,500
1991-92	3,000	4,452
1992-93	3,123	3,814

[1] The 1989-90 figure does not include shipyard and other related job losses.

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will supply for each financial year since 1987 the amount of grant aid given by his Department to (a) Teesside urban development corporation and (b) Tyne and Wear urban development corporation.

Mr. Baldry: Grant in aid paid to the Teesside and Tyne and Wear urban development corporations is as follows:

£ million

	TDC	TWDC
1987-88	5·0	4·0
1988-89	20·7	24·0
1989-90	36·0	35·8
1990-91	42·1	37·8
1991-92	56·2	40·5
1992-93	40·3	44·1

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of private sector investments was attracted by (a) Teesside urban development corporation and (b) Tyne and Wear urban development corporation broken down to show (i) United Kingdom investment and (ii) overseas inward investment.

Mr. Baldry: The amount of private secrtor investment in the Tyne and Wear and Teesside urban development corporation areas during the lifetime of the corporations up to 31 December 1993 was as follows:

£ million

	TDC	TWDC
United Kingdom investment	591	559
Overseas inward investment	77	25

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for asssessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Baldry: In the current financial year my Department has conducted two advertising campaigns with budgeted costs in excess of £10,000. These campaigns are:

Helping the Earth Begins at Home

The objective of this campaign was to create a link between domestic energy consumption and global warming, and to reduce energy use. The campaign focused on raising awareness of energy efficiency methods and encouraging energy efficient behaviour among householders.

Rent to Mortgage

The objective of the campaign was to inform qualifying tenants of the new rent-to-mortgage scheme.

The effectiveness of these campaigns was assessed by market research and coupon/telephone responses.

At the present time the only campaign planned for 1994-95 with a budget exceeding £10,000 is:

Helping the Earth Begins at Home

The Department's agencies have not run any advertising campaigns with a budget in excess of £10,000 in the current financial year and there are currently no plans for campaigns in 1994-95.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will itemise the costs of setting up each of the new regional offices under the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Baldry: The new Government offices for the regions will come into existence in April and, although detailed arrangements are still being worked out, our intention is that there should be no resultant increase in the cost of central Government.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the senior regional directors who will be running the offices which administer the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 8 February column 145.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff are to be employed in each of the new single regeneration budget regional offices.

Mr. Baldry: Some 2,752 staff are currently employed in the existing regional offices of the Departments of the Environment, Employment, Trade and Industry and Transport. This figure excludes Department of Transport staff who will transfer to the Highways Agency from 1 April. No final decision on the complement of each new regional office has yet been taken.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the salary of each regional director of the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Baldry: Each senior regional director, with the exception of the London appointee, is to be paid at the appropriate personal point on the grade 3 national pay range (currently £51,360—£59,599). An announcement about the appointment of a senior regional director for London will be made in due course.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on City Challenge.

Mr. Baldry: Thirty-one city challenge partnerships are currently implementing their five-year programmes for regeneration. At the end of the first full year of operation the key achievements of the 11 pacemaker partnerships were:

3,154 dwellings completed/improved,
2,712 jobs created/preserved,
114 hectares of land improved,
78,254 sq.m of new/improved business and commercial floorspace,
269 new business start-ups.

It is estimated that, over the five years, £1,162 million of City Challenge funding will attract private sector investment of £3,100 million.

Environmental Audits

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will specify the outstanding problems relating to the details of the EC directive on environmental audits, mentioned in his speech of 7 February, Official Report, column 78.

Mr. Baldry: There are no problems with the EC regulation on eco-management and audit. We are making good progress in setting up the arrangements to implement the eco-management and audit scheme in the United Kingdom and aim to have it fully operational by April/May 1995. My right hon. Friend's comments were made in response to a question on the EIA directive (85/337/EEC).

The Government are committed to the principle of environment impact assessment, but we are concerned about inconsistent application within the Community, as described in the Commission's five-year report on the implementation of the EIA directive. Explanatory memoranda were submitted to the House of Commons Select Committee on European Legislation on 19 May 1993 and 10 January 1994. The Government will therefore be urging the Commission to concentrate on securing fuller implementation of the directive before introducing substantial new requirements.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will provide details of the contents and date of dispatch of the United Kingdom report to the United Nations Commission for Sustainable Development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robert Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will shortly be placing a copy of the report in the Library at the time it is submitted to the United Nations Commission.

Biodiversity Action Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he proposes to ensure that the review of the Countryside Commission and English Nature does not delay the implementation of measures to conserve biodiversity in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: The Government published the first United Kingdom biodiversity action plan on 25 January. The study into bringing together English Nature and the Countryside Commission is being conducted in the light of our commitments to biodiversity and sustainable development, on which we are determined to make early and sustained progress. Bringing together these two bodies will ensure that institutional arrangements assist with the delivery of those objectives. It will be important to ensure that the study does not cause a loss of momentum in carrying forward the policies and programmes of either of the two agencies concerned. It is for that reason that I aim to complete it within six months.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, column 6, regarding the carbon dioxide emission implications of the latest GATT, if he will publish the outline of the calculations which led to his conclusions.

Mr. Atkins: As my hon. Friend the then Minister for the Environment and Countryside indicated in his answer of 11 January at column 6, the interngovernmental panel on climate change will be evaluating projections of world greenhouse gas emissions including the impact of the GATT agreement, for its second assessment report due to be published in 1995.

Council Tax

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make interest payable on overpayments of council tax where appeals have not been settled within six months.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Shredders

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the criteria used for shredding documents in departmental shredders; and how many documents a day typically are shredded.

Mr. Baldry: There are no departmental criteria: shredding provides one way of disposing of certain categories of classified documents. Information as to the numbers of documents shredded in a typical day could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will next meet the local authority associations to discuss local government finance.

Mr. Baldry: The Secretary of State expects to meet representatives of the local authority associations before the summer to discuss the local government finance settlement for 1995-96.

Deregulation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ensure that any deregulation proposals concerning the environment and land use will be subject to an environmental assessment as part of the scrutiny procedure.

Mr. Baldry: The deregulation initiative is intended to minimise the burden of regulatory controls on business, while nevertheless maintaining necessary environmental standards.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to respond to the fourth report from the Environment Select Committee of 1992-93, on energy efficiency in buildings, HC 648.

Mr. Gummer: I have today arranged for copies of the Government's response to the environment Select Committee's report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Toxic Emissions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his most recent discussions with ReChem about sources of toxic emissions.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 14 February 1994]: Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have had discussions with ReChem about sources of toxic emissions. However, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution (HMIP) has, and continues to be in regular contact with ReChem regarding the authorisation and operation of its incinerators.

Banana Producers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will press for the immediate implementation of the aid regime promised as a concomitant arrangement to the change in the banana regime for the Windward Islands, Dominica and Belize.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have been asked to reply.

There are funds for assistance in the European Community 1994 Budget, which has already been approved. We are working closely with the Commission to assess how these can best be used to assist the African, Caribbean and Pacific countries.

PRIME MINISTER

Manchester Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 414, who will be signing the reply to the chief executive of Manchester Airport plc in regard to liberalising access to regional airports; and if he will place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's private secretary replied on 11 February. It is not my right hon. Friend's normal practice to place copies of such letters in the Library.

Pan Am 103

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has had from the Government of Malta about the feasibility of staging a trial under Scottish rules of evidence of the two Libyan nationals alleged to have been involved in the destruction of Pan Am 103; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has received no such representations.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 15 February.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 15 February.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is in Moscow for a series of meetings including meetings with President Yeltsin and Prime Minister Chernomyrdin.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Committees on Telecommunications for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. McLoughlin: The members of the Advisory Committees on Telecommuncations for Scotland (SACOT), Wales (WACOT) and Northern Ireland (NIACT) as at 21 January 1994 are as follows:

Engineering Industry

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he intends to strengthen the United Kingdom's engineering industry.

Mr. Sainsbury: The engineering industry in the United Kingdom has a vital part to play in our industrial performance. Its success depends on a partnership between firms and Government. For their part, the Government are delivering low inflation, low interest rates, significantly enhanced help for exporters and a lifting of regulatory burdens. Firms in the sector are taking advantage of this positive climate by winning business both in the United Kingdom and in our overseas markets. Recent successes for the north-west include North West Water, which has just won a very large contract to help upgrade Malaysia's sewage system over the next 25 years, and the Manchester firm Crown House Engineering, which has recently won business in the United Kingdom worth £5 million.

Motor Vehicle Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was (a) the output of motor cars and (b) the balance of trade in total in motor vehicles of (i) France, (ii) Italy, (iii) Germany and (iv) the United Kingdom in (1) 1978 and (2) 1993.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information requested concerning the output of motor cars is available in "Motor Industry of Great Britain 1993: World Automotive Statistics" (Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders), a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The balances of trade in motor vehicles are shown in the table and relates to 1992 since 1993 data are not currently available.

Balance of trade in motor vehicles 1978 and 1992
($US million, current prices and market exchange rates)

	1978	1992
France	3,590	192
Italy	630	−11,627
Germany	9,994	21,946
United Kingdom	−1,050	−3,644

Note: For 1978 Germany refers to the Federal Republic of Germany. Motor Vehicles comprise Standard International Trade Classification 781 (cars), 782 (commercial vehicles) and 783 (miscellaneous vehicles).

Industry (Foreign Takeovers)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether the Government welcome the takeover of British industry by foreign firms.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government welcome foreign investment in United Kingdom industry. Mergers between United Kingdom and overseas companies can be expected to increase as markets become increasingly international. Historically the number and value of United Kingdom acquisitions abroad has exceeded that of foreign takeovers of United Kingdom companies.

Common Voltage

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 588, whether, and at what stage in the decision-making process, he opposed or demurred from the proposal to standardise on a common voltage; at what stage he consulted British manufacturers and interested parties; and what proportion of them was opposed to the proposal.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade had reservations on the proposal to standardise on a common voltage until considering the returns of the consultation exercise. Consultations with British manufacturers and interested parties were carried out between October and December 1992. Of those who responded fewer than 10 per cent. of the manufacturers were opposed to the proposal and many of the interested parties did not express any firm views.

Distance Selling

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the EC directive on distance selling is expected to come into force; and whether the Government have accepted the terms of article 11B of that directive.

Mr. McLoughlin: A European Commission proposal for a Council directive on distance selling is under negotiation in Brussels. It is too early to say when agreement might be reached on this proposal. The proposal does not contain an article 11B.

Research Establishments

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether the laboratories and research establishments of his Department are being reviewed by the efficiency unit of the Office of Public Service and Science which is reporting to Sir Peter Levene; and whether his own consultant's advice on his research establishments will be passed on to this review.

Mr. Heseltine: The answer to both questions posed by the hon. Member is yes.

Enterprise Agencies

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future of the enterprise agencies.

Mr. McLoughlin: Local enterprise agencies are independent local companies, limited by guarantee. They operate in close partnership with training and enterprise councils, chambers of commerce and local authorities to provide local business support services. They are key partners in developing the national network of business links.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those responsible for making appointments of (a) chairs and (b) members of the boards to each of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department.

Mr. Eggar: The responsibility for making appointments of (a) chairs and (b) members of the boards to the executive non-departmental public bodies of the DTI as listed in "Public Bodies 1993" is as follows:

Public Bodies 1993
British Hallmarking Council	Lord Strathclyde
Advisory Committees on Telecommunications for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland	Lord Strathclyde
Area Transport Users' Consultative Committees	Lord Strathclyde
Central Transport Consultative Committee	Lord Strathclyde
Domestic coal Consumers' Council	Lord Strathclyde
Gas Consumers' Council	Lord Strathclyde
London Regional Passengers' Committee	Lord Strathclyde
National Consumer Council	Lord Strathclyde
Post Office Users' National Council	Lord Strathclyde
Post Office Users' Councils for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland	Lord Strathclyde
Design Council	Lord Strathclyde
English Industrial Estates Corporation	Mr. Sainsbury
Hearing Aid Council	Lord Strathclyde
Monopolies and Mergers Commission	Mr. Hamilton
National Enterprise Board	Mr. McLoughlin
National Research Development Corporation	Mr. McLoughlin
Policyholders' Protection Board	Mr. Hamilton
The Simpler Trade Procedures Board	Mr. Needham
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority	Mr. Eggar

Objective 2 Status

Mr. Ashton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what considerations led to the revoking of objective 2 status for the travel-to-work areas of Bassetlaw, Nottingham, covering the Retford and Fairborough areas; and what alternative assistance from Community institutions is available to these areas.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 31 January 1994]: From Nottinghamshire, the Government proposed to the Commission that the whole of Retford, Alfreton and Ashfield, Gainsborough, Mansfield and Worksop travel-to-work areas should retain their eligibility for objective 2 grants from the European structural funds. In addition, the Government proposed that most of the Nottingham travel-to-work area, some of which had previously been eligible, should be eligible. As a result of the final decision on eligibility, taken by the European Commission on 20 January, only Mansfield and Worksop travel-to-work areas have retained eligibility.

Within the structural funds, the areas to which the hon. Gentleman refers remain eligible for objective 3 grants. They may also be able to benefit from future community initiatives, although decisions on these have yet to be taken by the Commission.

European Regional Fund

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what instructions have been issued to relevant regional offices of Government to indicate reductions in the population coverage of European objective 5b in their areas when compared to recommendations issued by the European Commission; what is his assessment of the reduction in grant, both for each area and for all affected areas, if the population coverage is reduced by 12 per cent.; and when he expects to make a statement on the reallocation of surplus grant resulting from the reduction in population coverage; and under what provisions of the structural fund regulations this can be achieved.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 18 January 1994]: In an announcement of 21 December the European Commission proposed an objective 5b population total for the United Kingdom of 2·816 million. It did not recommend precise areas for designation but invited the Government to define in detail areas within this population total.

In order to accommodate a small number of additional areas originally proposed by the Government for objective 2, and in order to express the population of all the areas concerned on a different statistical basis requested by the Commission, it was necessary to propose a marginal adjustment to many of the areas originally proposed for objective 5b.

Since at the time of these adjustments no areas had yet been designated other parts of the hon. Gentleman's question do not arise. The overall population coverage was not reduced and there were no implications for the United Kingdom's financial allocation under objective 5b.

Hearing Aid Council

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date he expects to announce his decision on the future of the Hearing Aid Council; and if he will place all submissions he has received on the future of the Council in the Library.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 10 February 1994]: The Hearing Aid Council is established under the Hearing Aid Council Act 1968. As part of the deregulation initiative we asked over 700 individuals and organisations whether they considered this legislation is still needed in its present form and whether it should be changed. I am considering the responses received, but am not yet able to say when an announcement will be made. The replies to the consultation were made in confidence to the Department.

EMPLOYMENT

Industrial Co-operation

12. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to encourage more co-operation and partnership within industry and between industry and Government.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement, "Prosperity through Skills", emphasised the importance of key partners working together to secure our economic prosperity.

Integrated regional offices and the new single regeneration budget will add significantly to co-operation and partnership between industry and Government.

Parental Leave

13. Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which European Union member states provide parental leave within the terms of the social chapter of the Maastricht treaty.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None. Where parental leave exists, it predates the coming into effect of the Maastricht treaty.

Maternity Leave

15. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to improve the employment rights to time off for maternity and paternity leave.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Under provisions introduced by the Government in the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act, all women will shortly have a new right to 14 weeks maternity leave, regardless of length of service or hours of work.

Paternity leave is, like most other terms and conditions of employment, a matter for agreement between employers and employees, without Government intervention.

Part-time Workers

16. Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of part-time workers are women.

Mr. David Hunt: In September 1993, 76 per cent. of part-time workers in Great Britain were women.

17. Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will report on the first six months of the North Norfolk Action pilot scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the first six months, 125 people have taken part in work experience projects of whom 27 have found employment or gone on to further training. During the same period 385 have received help through a series of weekly caseload interviews. Of these, 226 have achieved a positive outcome by gaining a job or joining other employment programmes.

Labour Statistics

18. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many men and how many women, in each standard planning region, were in full-time employment in June 1979 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe: Male full-time employment is not available before 1984. Total male civilian employment and full-time female civilian employment for each of the standard regions is as follows:

Civilian work force in employment[1]

Thousands

Standard regions	Male all		Female full time
	June 1979	September 1993	June 1979	September 1993

[1] The civilian work force in employment comprises employees in employment, the self employed and participants on work related government training programmes.
[2] Included in South East.

25. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give his estimate of the number of unemployed young people under 21 years.

Miss Widdecombe: Age and duration figures from the claimant unemployment count are only available in standard age bands. The nearest approximation to the figures requested are for those under 20 years of age. There were 227,208 unemployed claimants aged under 20 in October 1993, 16,720 less than 12 months ago.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the average weekly earnings of (i) full-time males, (ii) full-time females and (iii) part-time females in 1978-79 and in the latest year for which data are available in (a) Great Britain, (b) England, (c) Yorkshire and Humberside and (d) north Yorkshire; and what were (c) and (d) as a percentage of (b) in each case.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested on average weekly earnings can be found in tables 110 and 113 of part E and table 180 of part F of the New Earnings Survey for each of the years requested with the exception of that for part-time women in North Yorkshire which is provided in the following table. Copies of the reports can be found in the Library.

Redundancies

19. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he proposes to mitigate the effect of redundancies announced in the north west so far in the current year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the north west region, as elsewhere, the Employment Service and the 14 north-west training and enterprise councils will continue to deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help people find the best and quickest route back to employment.

20. Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to create jobs in the west midlands.

Miss Widecombe: The Department's aim is to promote a free and flexible labour market to encourage employment in the west midlands region as elsewhere. The Employment Service and 10 west midlands training and enterprise councils deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help people find the best and quickest route to employment.

Wages

21. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment his Department makes of wages offered by employers advertising at job centres.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: When employers notify vacancies to jobcentres, an assessment is made of the prospects of filling them. Where the wage offered appears to be below the local market rate for the occupation in question, the employer will be advised if this may cause difficulties in filling the post. However, the decision on what wage is offered is left to the employer.

Working Hours

22. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate his Department has made of the numbers of workers whose working hours would be reduced by a statutory maximum 48 hour week.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Some 2·4 million workers would be affected. The Government have no intention of introducing any such statutory controls.

Apprenticeships

23. Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received regarding his proposals for a modern apprenticeship.

Mr. David Hunt: I have received many messages of support for modern apprenticeships, from a wide range of organisations and individuals.

Deregulation

24. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what resources have been used by his Department in responding to task force proposals on deregulation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Employment Department and the Health and Safety Executive have small deregulation units which have dealt with task force proposals on deregulation in the normal course of their duties, consulting other officials when necessary.

Unemployment, Buckinghamshire

26. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures his Department is taking to assist the unemployed in Buckinghamshire.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department has a wide range of employment, training and enterprise measures to help unemployed people including jobclubs, training for work, community action, and jobsearch seminars. These are available in Buckinghamshire, as elsewhere, and are designed to take account of local circumstances to help people find the best and quickest route back to employment.

Training and Productivity

27. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received about the link between training and productivity.

Miss Widdecombe: I have received no formal representations on this issue.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what new initiatives he plans to reduce youth unemployment in Nottinghamshire.

Miss Widdecombe: Unemployment among young people in Nottinghamshire is at the lowest level since October 1991. Currently almost 7,000 young people are undertaking training in Nottinghamshire under the youth training scheme. There are a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes available to young people in Nottinghamshire. The Government intend to improve the range of opportunities available to school leavers still further in Nottinghamshire and elsewhere by introducing modern apprenticeships in 1995.

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to improve training facilities and training schemes for older unemployed people; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: As I announced at the time of the Budget, the upper age limit for unemployed adults entering training for work will be raised from 59 to 63 from 1 April this year.

Full Employment, London

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what initiatives he is taking to ensure a return to full employment in London.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 14 December at column 562.

Manual Workers (Earnings)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish a table showing for the latest available date figures for average quarterly earnings of manual workers corresponding to table 3.38 of the 27th edition of "Eurostat Basic Statistics" of the Community.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The latest available information, showing earnings at October 1991, is contained in the 30th edition of "Eurostat Basic Statistics of the Community". A copy of the publication can be found in the Library.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consideration his Department has given to employment structures as a result of local government reorganisation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department has been aware of developments at all stages of local government reorganisation. Local government staff commissions will be considering the implications of the reorganisation for all existing local government employees.

Statutory Works Councils

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to establish statutory works councils.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government support voluntary employee involvement. It will not establish statutory works councils or any other form of compulsion. In the Government's view legislation is not the way to promote effective employee involvement in the United Kingdom. Our voluntary approach has proved most successful. It has allowed companies flexibility to involve employees in ways which suit their particular needs and circumstances. Compulsion would stifle this flexibility. It would add to costs and administrative burdens, reduce competitiveness and jeopardise jobs.

School Leavers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the numbers of people of all ages who are registered unemployed and who have never had a job since leaving school; and if he will give a breakdown of this data on those having left school over a year, over five years and over 10 years ago.

Miss Widdecombe: The monthly claimant count is a by-product of the administrative system which handles the payment of unemployment-related benefits. This system does not record the previous employment history of unemployment claimants.

DEFENCE

Spent Fuel (Reprocessing)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reprocessing plant his Department uses to reprocess spent fuel discharged from pressurised water reactors powering Royal Navy submarines; and what facilities he plans to use in the future.

Mr. Aitken: Used nuclear fuel from Royal Navy submarines is not reprocessed at present. No reprocessing facilities exist for naval fuel, and we have no plans to establish any.

UNPROFOR

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will give a detailed breakdown of the salary and allowances, including additional United Nations allowances, paid to each rank of British service men serving with UNPROFOR;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, columns 112-13, if he will set out in detail the information he has received from or concerning all other countries participating in UNPROFOR giving the scale of additional United Nations allowances for their service men in pound sterling terms;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, columns 112-13, if he will set out in detail the nformation he has received from or concerning all other countries participating in the UNPROFOR mission giving the pay scales for their service men in pound sterling terms.

Mr. Hanley: The current United Kingdom rates of salary for all ranks up to and including brigadier are set out in appendix 4 to the 22nd report of the Review Body on Armed Forces Pay—HMSO Cm 2150—a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

The current annual salary of a lieutenant general, who is the only officer above the rank of brigadier serving with UNPROFOR, is £60,600 per year.

Allowances paid to United Kingdom service personnel serving overseas, including the former Yugoslavia, are largely determined by rank and marital status. Married personnel involuntarily separated for more than 30 days receive a separation allowance of £3·50 per day. In addition, both married and single personnel serving in the former Yugoslavia are exempt from local food and accommodation charges. Single personnel are also exempt from the contribution in lieu of council tax. Although the cost of living in the former Yugoslavia does not justify the payment of a local overseas allowance, personnel posted from areas such as Germany where such payments are made retain a residual allowance in recognition of their continuing financial commitments at their permanent duty station. Married personnel retain 70 per cent. and single personnel 40 per cent. All personnel also receive a telephone allowance of £13·50 per month which is designed to contribute to the cost of one three-minute phone call each week.

All service personnel, irrespective of rank and nationality, serving under United Nations auspices in the former Yugoslavia receive exactly the same United Nations allowance of $1·28 per day plus a lump sum of $73·50 towards rest and recreation leave. This equates currently to £0·82 per day and £46·90 respectively. Other national contingents serving in the former Yugoslavia do not receive any additional United Nations allowances. It would not be appropriate for me to give details of information provided on a confidential basis concerning the pay arrangements for the contingents of other countries serving in the former Yugoslavia.

Sarajevo

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British military personnel will be stationed in the demilitarised zone around Sarajevo following the handing over of control of heavy artillery; and if he will make it his policy that British troops will fulfil only the role of controlling the heavy weaponry.

Mr. Hanley: Deployment of troops on the ground in the former Yugoslavia and their precise roles in fulfilment of the United Nations mandate are a matter for the United Nations. There is already a small RAF detachment of 34 personnel in Sarajevo participating in the British humanitarian airlift operation.

Office Space

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the amount of office space owned, leased or rented by his Department and its agencies in London on 1 January in each year since 1989.

Mr. Hanley: The amount of office space on the civil estate-common user estate occupied in London by my Department and its agencies on 1 January in each year since 1989 was:

1 January	Square metres
1989	306,694·80
1990	304,716·80
1991	308,880·10
1992	304,197·80
1993	334,461·30
1994	323,712·70

This figure is due to reduce by more than half by 1 January 1997. In addition, the London weather centre occupied 652 sq m of office space in Clerkenwell road from September 1992, following relocation from its previous site in High Holborn.

Details of office space in the defence estate in London are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Front Line First

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what areas of his Department's business the front line first study is examining; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The defence costs study is examining all aspects of support to the front line. Individual studies have been established to look in detail at the following areas:

MOD head office—organisation and function
HQs/service command and top-level budget structure
MOD police
Research and development
Procurement Executive—projects and practices
Procurement Executive—organisation and function
Market-testing programme and contracting out
Financial management
Estate and property
Repairs/spares/storage/distribution and infrastructure
Naval infrastructure
Training
Recruiting/manning
Medical
Non-operational information systems and information technology
Security
Defence intelligence
RAF management structure and manning
Army management structure and manning
Navy management structure and manning
Music
Animals and vets
Catering/messes
Chaplaincy services
MOD fire services
Terminal air traffic control services
Legal services
Travel and subsistence
Costs of regulations
Meteorological Office
Radiological protection policy, advice and audit
Forms and publications
Uniforms

The studies are making good progress. Decisions taken as a result of them will be announced in due course.

Arms Sales

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will update to 1993 the figures given in his answer to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) of 19 June 1989, Official Report, column 61, regarding arms sales to Malaysia.

Mr. Aitken [holding answer 11 February 1994]: Detailed information on defence sales covered by the memorandum of understanding signed with Malaysia is confidential to the two Governments, but in the circumstances I can tell the hon. Member that contracts worth in excess of £1 billion were negotiated between 1989 and 1993.

The Enemy Within

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his definition of the enemy within; what departmental activities are related to this; at what cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 14 February 1994]: As far as I am aware, this is not a term that has been, or is being used in connection with any specific departmental activity.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the Priorities Board for Research and Development in Agriculture and Food.

Mr. Jack: There are no members currently appointed to the Priorities Board for Research and Development in Agriculture and Food. Following completion of its report the board was dissolved on 31 December 1993 pending a review now being undertaken by officials from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department and the Agricultural and Food Research Council.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the Meat and Livestock Commission.

Mr. Jack: D. T. Y. Curry, J. Baker, M. Rees, P. S. Redshaw, J. F. Royan, C. Jay, A. R. Manson, Mrs. E. Hodder, Miss B. Bloom, R. Green, C. Smith are currently appointed as members of the Meat and Livestock Commission. The post of chairman is vacant and Mr. Curry is the acting chairman.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the Agricultural Training Board.

Mr. Jack: Membership of the Agricultural Training Board currently numbers 11 persons, as follows:

Chairman:
Mr. A. S. Stewart

Deputy Chairman:
Mr. M. J. Curtis

Members:
Mrs. R. Berry
Mrs. J. Buchanan-Smith
Dr. J. Harries
Mr. V. H. Hughes
Mr. T. Jones
Mr. N. J. Mallet
Mr. I. Monkton
Mr. M. D. Pollard
Professor P. Thomas

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the Sugar Beet Research and Education Committee.

Mr. Jack: The members currently appointed to the Sugar Beet and Education Committee are:

Mr. J. H. Proctor (chairman)
Dr. M. J. Armstrong
Mr. M. F. Askew
Dr. D. J. Carmichael
Mr. C. R. A. Carter
Mr. H. R. Dyas
Mr. J. H. Hoyles
Professor R. T. Plumb

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who are the members currently appointed to the Food from Britain committee.

Mr. Jack: The members of the Council of Food from Britain are:

Mr. Geoffrey John (chairman)
Mrs. Mary Berry
Mr. Trefor Campbell
Mr. Tito Chiandetti
Mr. Alun Evans
Mr. Richard George
Mr. John Irish
Mr. Howard Mann
Mr. David Naish
Mr. Brian Nelson
Professor Susan Shaw
Mrs. Caroline Spelman
Mr. Robert Steven
Mr. John Whitehead

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list those responsible for making appointments of (a) chairs and (b) members of the boards to each of the executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by her Department.

Mr. Jack: Details of those responsible for making appointments of chairmen and members of executive non-departmental public bodies sponsored by this Ministry, as listed in "Public Bodies 1993", are as follows:

Agricultural Training Board
Horticultural Development Council
Meat and Livestock Commission
All appointments are made by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, jointly with the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales.

Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales
Chairman and independent members appointed by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, jointly with the Secretary of State for Wales. Representative members appointed by the National Farmers Union and by the Agricultural and Allied Workers National Trade Group of the Transport and General Workers Union.

Agricultural Wages Committees (England)
Chairmen and independent members appointed by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Representative members appointed by the National Farmers Union and by the Agricultural and Allied Workers National Trade Group of the Transport and General Workers Union.

Apple and Pear Research Council
Wine Standards Board of the Vintners Company
All appointments made by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Food From Britain
Home-Grown Cereals Authority
Sea Fish Industry Authority
All appointments made by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, jointly with the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Horticulture Research International
Chairman and six members appointed by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Three members appointed by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Regional Flood Defence Committees
The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food appoints the Chairman and a number of members to each of the nine executive regional flood defence committees of the National Rivers Authority (NRA) in England. In addition, the NRA is responsible for appointing two members to each committee and the local authorities are responsible for appointing the remaining members (one more than the total number of ministerial and NRA appointees on each committee).

Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew
Chairman and 10 members appointed by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. One member appointed by Her Majesty The Queen.

French Fishermen

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries, and Food what will be the cost to United Kingdom public funds and the effect on prices of the proposed additional European Community's support for French fishermen.

Mr. Jack: The European Commission's response to the difficulties on the French white fish market has been to introduce minimum import prices for certain species. As these aim to do no more than put a floor in the market at the level of the Community withdrawal price, they should work to reduce Community expenditure on market support.

Agricultural Expenditure

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate she has made of the legal limit on agricultural spending by the EC in 1994.

Mr. Jack: The limit on agricultural spending is laid down in Council decision 88/377 concerning budgetary discipline. The agricultural guideline for 1994 is 36,465 mecu. The monetary reserve is 1,000 mecu.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the legal restrictions on agricultural spending by the EC in 1993; and what was the actual sum expended by the EC in this year.

Mr. Jack: The legal restrictions on agricultural spending by the EC in 1993 were contained in Council decision 88/377 concerning budgetary discipline. The level of the agricultural guideline was 36,657 mecu. The monetary reserve was 1,000 mecu. The provisional out-turn of expenditure is 35,095 mecu.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what extent the agricultural policies of the EC are designed to ensure that legal limits of spending are maintained; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Expenditure on the CAP is constrained by the requirements of Council Decision 88/377 concerning budgetary discipline. Article 5 of this decision requires the Commission's price proposals to be consistent with the limits laid down by the agricultural guideline.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many units of livestock have gone through British slaughterhouses in each year since 1985.

Mr. Soames: The number of cattle, including calves, sheep and pigs slaughtered for meat in the United Kingdom over the period 1985 to 1993 are given in the table. The equivalent number of livestock units slaughtered in each year is also given. This is based on one livestock unit equalling one adult bovine or calf, seven sheep or three pigs.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many cases of BSE were (a) confirmed, (b) reported and (c) slaughtered in the United Kingdom for each month of 1992 and 1993;

(2) how many cases of BSE were confirmed in the United Kingdom for each month of 1992 and 1993 in cattle that were (a) under two years of age, (b) aged two to three years, (c) aged three to four years, (d) aged four to five years, (e) aged five to six years, (f) aged six to seven years and (g) aged seven or more years;

(3) how many cases of BSE were confirmed in the United Kingdom for each year from 1985 in cattle that were (a) under two years of age, (b) aged two to three years, (c) aged three to four years; (d) aged four to five years, (e) aged five to six years, (f) aged six to seven years and (g) aged seven or more years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [pursuant to her answer, 17 January 1994, col. 428]: The information is given in the tables.

This shows the age of cattle by date of confirmation of BSE for the months concerned. It should be noted that the four-year-old group will still include cattle with potential dates of birth before 18 July 1988 when the ruminant feed ban was introduced. Although the table shows a declining number of confirmed cases in the groups less than four years old, and to a degree the four to five-year-old group, it is not a table of age-specific incidence which sorts age groups by age at onset of the disease. Furthermore the 1993 data set is incomplete.

Numbers of BSE cases confirmed in the United Kingdom by age and year for each year since 1985 as at 14 January 1994

[1] The disease was not notifiable until June 1988 so these figures cannot be further broken down as specific dates of confirmation are not available. It should be noted that the four year old group will still include cattle with potential dates of birth before 18 July 1988 when the ruminant feed ban was introduced. Although the table shows a declining number of confirmed cases in the groups less than four years old, and to a degree the four to five year old group, it is not a table of age specific incidence which sorts cases by age at onset of the disease. Furthermore the 1993 data set is incomplete.

WALES

Sustainable Development

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he intends to hold discussions with the Wales Confederation of British Industry and other representatives of Welsh industry to promote the need for the concept of sustainability to characterise future industrial developments.

Mr. Redwood: The need to involve industry in action to promote sustainable development is fully recognised in the recently published United Kingdom strategy and related reports. It is expected that Wales CBI will be among those to be consulted on the membership and mode of operation of the national round table. Meanwhile copies of the sustainable development strategy have been sent to them and other business interests in Wales.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance he has given to his non-departmental executive bodies to ensure that they take full account of the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development, the United Kingdom programme on climate change, the United Kingdom action plan for biodiversity and the United Kingdom programme for sustainable forestry.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The preparation of the sustainable development strategy, the programme for climate change and the biodiversity action plan involved extensive consultation, which includes the main non-departmental public bodies in Wales. They have been sent copies of the reports of most relevance to their operations and will be appropriately involved in the follow-up action planned by the Government.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for an advisory panel on sustainable development in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by me on 7 February 1994, column 94.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that public and private bodies in Wales play their full part in delivering more sustainable forms of development.

Mr. Redwood: The Government's plans for involving the public and private sectors in progress towards sustainable development are described in the recently published United Kingdom strategy. This has already been circulated to key Welsh interests; and the Welsh Office will be seeking to ensure that organisations and individuals in Wales play an appropriate part in the follow-up action planned on the strategy, for example, via the round table and citizen's environment initiatives.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further guidance will be given on schools' environmental management practices as indicated in the sustainable development strategy.

Sir Wyn Roberts: As indicated in the United Kingdom strategy on sustainable development, work is in hand to develop a simple environmental audit scheme which schools can carry out themselves to evaluate and improve the environmental impact of their school buildings and grounds.

The scheme is to cover issues such as energy usage, water economies and landscaping. It is based very much on work done by the Building Research Establishment.

It is planned to publish this scheme later this year and I hope that as many schools as possible in Wales will participate.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to promote the active participation of people in Wales in sustainable development strategies to reduce the burden placed on the environment by human activities.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government's plans for promoting the concept of sustainable development among the public are described in the recently published United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development. As part of this, the citizen's environment initiative will extend to Wales.

Environmental Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish guidance to advise schools of good practice in teaching about the care of the environment;

(2) if he will encourage all schools to appoint a co-ordinator for environmental education;

(3) what plans he has for schools to have a policy for environmental education guaranteeing provision and continuity between different subject areas of the curriculum;

(4) what plans he has for providing guidance to schools on delivering environmental education on biodiversity and sustainable development.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Every maintained school is responsible for providing a curriculum which must satisfy the statutory requirements of the national curriculum. Guidance on environmental education as part of the national curriculum has been provided to schools in Wales by the Curriculum Council for Wales. The council has also published an advisory paper and in-service training materials to support schools' delivery of environmental education.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase the provision of initial and in-service education for teachers in environmental education.

Sir Win Roberts: We have no plans to increase such provision. Schools are free to include reference to the importance of developing pupils' awareness of the environment in the statement of the school's ethos and values included in their prospectuses, if they so wish. Environmental education is addressed through the statutory subjects of the national curriculum: schools themselves are responsible for how environmental education is delivered.

The Government already provide specific grant to support expenditure on the national curriculum which is devolved mainly to schools to spend on books and equipment or training. It is for schools and LEAs to decide what priority to give to particular subject areas and to make detailed plans in the light of their own staff development needs.

We seek to ensure, through our criteria for the approval of initial teacher training, that courses give a thorough preparation for teaching the national curriculum. The detailed content of courses is a matter for ITT providers and not Government.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to implement the recommendations for environmental education in further and higher education of the report of the Toyne committee.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Toyne report contained a specific recommendation that each further and higher education institution should adopt a policy for the development of environmental education. A copy of the report was sent to all FHE institutions in Wales in February 1993. It is for individual institutions to judge how to take this recommendation forward.

Agenda 21 Programmes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to hold discussions with local authorities on the drawing up of local agenda 21 programmes.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Progress on the local agenda 21 initiative has been, and is being, discussed within the central and local government environment forum, which brings together Environment Ministers and the leaders of the local authority associations. The Welsh Office is also planning to sponsor a seminar on "green" purchasing as part of the local agenda 21 programme.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sites exist in Wales licensed for the disposal of low-level nuclear waste; and if he will place in the Library a list of the location of each.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Apart from some very low-level nuclear waste which is incinerated at the Wylfa and Trawsfynydd sites no nuclear waste is disposed of in Wales.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year from 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each of the national health service bodies (Wales) as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is as follows:

Health authority	Gross expenditure (at 1992-93 prices)			Projected expenditure
	1990-91 £ million	1991-92 £ million	1992-93 £ million	1993-94 £ million
Health authorities	1,156	1,271	1,308	1,341
Family health service authorities Wales	418	454	454	471
Health promotion authority for Wales	3	3	4	4
National health service trusts	—	—	38	661
Welsh health common services authority	33	35	50	54

Source:
Health authorities and Pembrokeshire NHS Trust Annual Accounts.
Notes:
(i) Gross expenditure relates to actual outturn figures, whereas the figures that appear in Public Bodies 1993 are provisional due to the timing of the publication.
(ii) Figures in respect of Family Health Service Authorities exclude GP fundholders.
(iii) Pembrokeshire NHS Trust established 1 April 1992.
A further 13 NHS Trusts were formally established on 1 April 1993.

GDP

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current gross domestic product per head by county in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: The latest available figures, for 1991, are published in the December 1993 edition of "Economic Trends (CSO)", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mink Farm, Llanybdder

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, columns 190-1, for how long the mink farm at Llanybdder, Dyfed, was allowed to operate pending a decision on the licence application after the mink farm had withdrawn its licence application; and for how long the mink farm had been allowed to operate pending a decision on the licence application.

Mr. Redwood: The mink farm ceased to operate at about the same time as the licence application was withdrawn. The farm had been operating for about 11 months pending a decision on the licence application.

Assisted Places

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what level of fee is charged by each institution in Wales covered by the assisted places scheme in the current academic year.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information is as follows:

School	APS fee[1] £
Christ College, Brecon	5,484
Howell's, Denbigh	5,556
Howell's, Cardiff	3,309
Rydal School, Colwyn Bay	5,531 (preparatory) 6,396 (senior)
Penrhos College, Colwyn Bay	5,280 (mid) 5,655 (upper)
Monmouth Boys	4,419
Monmouth Girls	3,594 3,900 (VI)
Llandovery College	4,696 (junior) 5,129 (mid) 5,259 (VI)

[1] As at September 1993.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of state for Wales what safeguards are used by the Welsh Office to ensure that schools covered by the assisted places scheme meet recognised educational standards.

Sir Wyn Roberts: All schools participating in the assisted places scheme have had to satisfy stringent criteria before being accepted. Ongoing monitoring of standards is carried out by members of the office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales. The Department also collects the examination results of pupils at the individual schools.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment the Welsh Office has made of the assisted places scheme.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Some 700 pupils are currently receiving education at one of the participating schools in Wales whose parents would not otherwise have been able to afford it. Almost all available places for 1993-94 have been taken up and the examination results of APS pupils are consistently good.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the schools in Wales which have pupils under the assisted places scheme in the current academic year; how many pupils are supported at each institution; and how much it has cost the Welsh Office to provide this support.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information is as follows:

School	Number of APS pupils in scheme September 1993	Expenditure Financial year 1992-93 £
Christ College, Brecon	87	359,755
Howell's, Denbigh	72	310,222
Howell's, Cardiff	165	399,642
Rydal School, Colwyn Bay	46	228,082
Penrhos College, Colwyn Bay	61	273,711
Monmouth Boys	137	434,415
Monmouth Girls	71	200,728
Llandovery	52	250,671
Total	691	2,457,226

Estimated expenditure for the financial year 1993-94 is £2,616,000.

Mostyn Dock

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to make an announcement with regard to his decision on the future progress of the planning application at Mostyn dock, Mostyn, Clwyd.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The procedure to be adopted for the determination of the planning application at Mostyn dock, Clwyd, will be reached as quickly as possible. I will write to the hon. Member when a decision has been made.

Quangos

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the guidelines that apply to quangos in respect of the participation of board members in the decisions on the authorisation of foreign travel and participation in overseas conferences by senior management; what representations he has received on this issue; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The standard guidance to board members of non-departmental public bodies is that they have an overall responsibility for supervising the direction and management of the body and need to ensure that judgments are exercised in the public interest; and that they are guardians of the public interest in the body's activities and in the discharge of its statutory duties. The chief executive is usually the accounting officer responsible for ensuring compliance with policies and rules.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 16 February 1994

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court of Appeal

Ms Hoey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) whether either or both of the parties in the case Martin v. Watson in the Court of Appeal on 21 January were in receipt of legal aid;

(2) how much time was taken in the Court of Appeal on 21 January by the Martin v. Watson case.

Mr. John M. Taylor: In the Martin v. Watson case in the Court of Appeal on 21 January, neither party was in receipt of legal aid. The judgment, which counsel had already seen, was handed down and the question of costs was dealt with. This occupied 10 minutes of court time.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average cost per hour of a case in the Court of Appeal.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The average cost per hour of a case in the Court of Appeal is not known. However, the average hourly cost of a bench in 1993 consisting of three Lord Justices of Appeal and necessary supporting court staff is estimated at £694 per hour. It does not include the costs of accommodation and other overheads.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EU Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the matters discussed and decisions taken at the EU Foreign Affairs Council in Brussels on 7 February.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I attended the Foreign Affairs Council on 7 February.

The Foreign Affairs Council began with an open session on Presidency priorities. A copy of the intervention by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will be placed in the Library of the House as part of the new procedure of depositing video recordings of Presidency open sessions.

The Commission introduced the draft work programme of follow up action on the growth White Paper. The Council noted that the group of personal representatives of Heads of Government, established to review work on trans-European networks, would decide on priority projects and discuss financial requirements, and would submit an interim report to ECOFIN on 8-9 April. The Council agreed the Commission's 19 nominations to the high level group on information infrastructures; the United Kingdom representatives are Peter Bonfield (ICL) and Peter Davis (Reed Elsevier). It was agreed that ECOFIN, and other Councils which have a role to play, would monitor progress of follow up activity.

The Council approved the nominations of six members of the Court of Auditors.

A ministerial meeting of the accession negotiations with Austria, Finland, Norway and Sweden took place on 8

February. In preparation for this meeting, member states agreed a common position on agriculture and regional policy aspects of the negotiation.

The Council agreed to a decision on the ombudsman, together with the text of a letter to the President of the European Parliament outlining the Council's concerns that the EP's rules of procedure on the ombudsman go further than the treaty. The Council also agreed a short statement on the Commission's legislative programme.

In order to inform the Council's review in Janaury 1995 of the application from Cyprus to join the European Union, the Council agreed to appoint a Commission official, Mr. Serge Abou, as the Union's observer on Cyprus. He will report periodically to the Council on the implications of political developments in Cyprus for this 1995 review.

Following a discussion of the latest events in the former Yugoslavia, the Council issued the following statement:

"The European Union expresses its revulsion at the renewed brutal shelling of civilians in Sarajevo which has taken place in recent days.

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, the decisions of the North Atlantic Alliance most recently reiterated at the NATO Summit of 11 January and the recent request of the Secretary-General of the United Nations, it supports a very early meeting of the North Atlantic Council. In concert with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, the aim should be to bring about the immediate lifting of the siege of Sarajevo, using all means necessary including the use of airpower.

The measures taken would be the first step in the implementation of the action plan of the European Union. The Council of the European Union reiterates its support for the efforts of the co-chairmen to place the administration of Sarajevo under the authority of the United Nations."

A co-operation council with Algeria was held in the margins.

The Council agreed the EC's negotiating mandate for the mid-term review of the fourth Lomé convention. The mandate contains provisions to strengthen the human rights elements of the convention, and to make the convention work more effectively. It includes a commitment to help the African, Caribbean and Pacific countries benefit more from the trading advantages available to them under the convention. Negotiations with the ACP countries will begin in May and must be finished by March of next year.

The Council agreed by qualified majority a package of measures to implement parts of its 15 December decision on trade policy instruments. The United Kingdom voted against the package, as our concerns on imports of toys and shoes from China, and on changes to certain decision-making procedures were not met. But the package included some welcome features, notably the lifting of some 6,000 member state national quantitative restrictions on imports from third countries.

The Council adopted a declaration reaffirming its desire to see Russia admitted to the Council of Europe as soon as the criteria for membership have been met.

The Council adopted a statement welcoming the Ukrainian Parliament's approval of the tripartite agreement on nuclear weapons.

The Council announced the European Union's willingness to facilitate an observer mission to the forthcoming elections in Ukraine on 27 March.

The Council approved negotiating directives for EC free trade agreements with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Visits Abroad

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visits abroad each Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg), made 20 official visits abroad to 33 countries during 1993 at a total cost of £27,667. Ten visits were for bilateral discussions, five for international conferences and five for European Community meetings.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Watford (Mr. Tristan Garel-Jones) made 11 official visits abroad to 17 countries during 1993 at a total cost of £20,550. Five visits were for bilateral discussions, three for European Community meetings, two for international conferences and one to the European Parliament.

My hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) made 19 official visits abroad to 23 countries during 1993 at a total cost of £21,504. Ten visits were for European Community meetings, eight for bilateral discussions and one to the European Parliament.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), made eight official visits abroad to 14 countries during 1993 at a total cost of £46,090. These visits were primarily for bilateral discussions but included attendance at one international conference.

I made eight official visits abroad to 11 countries during 1993 at a total cost of £29,147. Six visits were for bilateral discussions and two for international conferences.

FCO Ministers are always accompanied by an official or officials whose costs are not included in these figures. Details of the overseas visits made in 1993 by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will be given in answer to the hon. Member's separate question on that subject.

Paedophiles

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, column 123, when was the last occasion that Ministers or officials of his Department discussed with members or officials of the appropriate foreign Government the problem of British paedophiles visiting (a) Sri Lanka, (b) Thailand and (c) the Philippines to abuse children.

Mr. Goodlad: We have a regular dialogue with Thailand and the Philippines on the problem of the sexual abuse of children.

Most recently, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health discussed the problem when she visited Thailand in September 1993. Her Majesty's chargé d'affaires in the Philippines raised the issue with the Department of Social Welfare and Development in Manila on 21 January 1994.

We last discussed the issue with the Sri Lankan authorities in 1987—the year in which the latest known case involving a British citizen occurred.

British Virgin Islands

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many companies were registered in the British Virgin Islands at 31 December 1993; and how many companies were registered there for the first time between 1 January and 31 December 1993.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: On 31 December 1993 there were approximately 110,000 companies registered in the British Virgin Islands, of which 30,000 were first registered between 1 January and 31 December 1993.

External Relations Budget

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the main heads and amounts of the other external relations budget of his Department; from which heads in this budget he is proposing to reduce expenditure in each of the next three years; and what criteria he has adopted in deciding to reduce expenditure in that budget.

Mr. Goodlad: The main heads and amounts of class II, vote 2 (Foreign and Commonwealth Office: Other External Relations) for 1993-94 (total provision, including supplementary estimates) are as follows:

	£ thousand
Section A
Grants and subscriptions, etc. to international organisations	303,690
Section B
General expenses and grants, etc. to non-governmental and statutory organisations	7,274
Section C
General expenses	37,409
Section D
Military assistance	13,800
Section E
Unallocated	0
Other expenditure not included in the control total:
Section F
Reimbursement of certain duties, taxes and licence fees	39,884
TOTAL	402,057

Against the background of increased subscriptions to international organisations and higher priority claims on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's resources, I decided that the grant-in-aid to the Commonwealth Institute should cease after 1995-96.

Kashmir

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's current policy on Kashmir.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our current policy on Kashmir, reiterated by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs during his visit to India in November, consists of three points on which we believe there should be simultaneous progress—a dialogue between India and Pakistan as provided for under the Simla agreements; an improvement in human rights in Kashmir and a genuine political process there; and a clear cessation of external support for violence in Kashmir.

Bananas

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what considerations underlie the differences between the treatment of Martinique and Guadeloupe as compared with Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean in respect of imports of bananas into the EC.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Martinique and Guadeloupe are Overseas Departments of France and are therefore part of the European Community. The Commonwealth countries of the Caribbean are not.

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Goodlad: The following items of equipment have been reported stolen from the FCO and ODA in the past three years:

Items	£
2 keyboxes (£245 each)	490
2 answering machines (£60)	120
1 mobile telephone	200
1 lap top computer	3,500
4 standard telephones (£22 each)	88
1 Superset telephone	322
TOTAL	4,720

Liberia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring of the activities of the Economic Community of West African States ceasefire monitoring group have been undertaken by Her Majesty's Government in partnership with the United Nations, the European Commission or directly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: ECOMOG is deployed in Liberia on behalf of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), and is working in cooperation with the UN observer mission (UNOMIL). The UN Secretary General's special envoy for Liberia provides regular reports to the UN Security Council on the progress of the peace process. We support strongly all the efforts to achieve a peace settlement in Liberia.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representation Her Majesty's Government have in Liberia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We closed our embassy in Monrovia in 1991 and we therefore have no resident representation. Non-resident coverage is provided by our embassy in Abidjan.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions have been taken by Her Majesty's Government to hasten a ceasefire in Liberia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have given strong political support to the efforts of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) and the United Nations (UN) to achieve a negotiated settlement of the conflict in Liberia.

We have contributed US$1 million, earmarked for humanitarian purposes, to the trust fund which the UN has established to support the peace process. Since 1990 we have separately given some £8·8 million of humanitarian assistance to help mitigate the effects of the conflict.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have been held with representatives of Charles Taylor's forces in Liberia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We wish to see a settlement of the appalling conflict in Liberia, and have listened to views from a number of those most concerned. The last meeting with one of Mr. Taylor's representatives was in May 1993, when his then spokesman for Defence met FCO officials in London.

PRIME MINISTER

Advisers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister which advisers to his office since 28 November 1990 have been seconded from other organisations; and what were the organisations and the lengths of the secondments.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister on 4 February at column 970. In addition, Alan Rosling served on secondment in the policy unit, from Hanson plc, for the period 1991-93.

European Funds

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the representations he has made to the European Union for funds and support in each of the last four years and state (a) how much was claimed for each project, (b) the programme under which the claim was being made and (c) the amount of funds received by the business;

(2) if he will list the names of the chairman and directors of each company on behalf of which he has made representations for funds from the European Union, in each of the last four years;

(3) how many representations he has made to the European Union for funds (a) for England as a whole and (b) for specific projects in the past four years.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

So far as I am aware, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has made no representations to the European Union in relation to the structural funds.

Cabinet Ministers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister which Cabinet Ministers have served in the armed forces.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

Five Cabinet Ministers have served in the armed forces.

Upper Limb Deformities

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 736, concerning children born with upper limb deformities, what discussions he has held with the Secretary of State for Health about a national study of these defects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's private secretary has written separately to the hon. Member on this subject, following my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's oral answer on 1 February at col. 736.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) gave to the hon. Member for Easington (Mr. Cummings) on 11 February, Official Report, columns 537-38.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits (Administration)

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the impact on the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration of the privatisation of the assessment of benefits, Giro order book issue and national insurance contribution recording.

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her on 8 February at column 212.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many visits abroad the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Scott: I made two journeys abroad.

The details are in the table:

Place	Purpose	Date	Cost (£)
China Hong Kong	Visit counterpart Minister of State for Disabled. Meeting with Mr. Patten. Visit to Rehabilitation Services for Disabled. Meeting with Secretary of State for Health and Welfare of Hong Kong.	27 May to 6 June 1993	13,926·30
Brussels	Informal meeting of Social Affairs Council.	9 to 10 November 1993	550·62

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, column 215, about applications to the Independent Living Fund turned down, in which local authority each of the applicants who were refused assistance reside.

Mr. Scott: I am informed by the director of the Independent Living (1993) Fund that the 11 individuals whose applications to the fund were unsuccessful on the grounds that their existing or proposed care package was valued in excess of £500, are resident in the following local authority areas (one person resident in each).

Norfolk	Essex
Lambeth	Brent
Clwyd	Tameside
Hammersmith	East Sussex
Devon	Barnet
Bolton

Incapacity Assessment

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has had from the Terrence Higgins Trust in regard to the Consultation Panel of 80 (Incapacity Benefit); what reply he is sending; what action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The Terrence Higgins Trust has written to me asking why no member of the assessment panel has experience of medical incapacity for work in relation to people with AIDS or symptomatic HIV infection. I have explained that the new medical incapacity test will assess the effects of all medical conditions. It is not based on particular diagnoses. The members of the panel have been selected for their individual expertise, not as representatives of particular organisations.

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Hague: This Department does not separately maintain centralised records of individual items stolen. Losses due to theft, fraud, arson or sabotage are recorded in a single category. The number of individual losses within this category, and the total value for each of the last three years for which information is available, is as follows:

Financial year	Number of individual cases	Total value
1990-91	364	89,799
1991-92	411	72,315
1992-93	94	84,500

Correspondence

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Caerphilly may expect a reply to his letter of 23 August 1992 in respect of Mr. A. J. Silcox, of 3 Bryn Huelog, Penyrheol, Caerphilly.

Mr. Hague: I have no trace of this outstanding correspondence. If the hon. Member will provide me with further details I will look into the matter.

Child Maintenance Deductions

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents in receipt of income support are currently having deductions made from their benefit in respect of child maintenance.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for East Kilbride (Mr. Ingram) by the Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency on 9 February at columns 377-80.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how many people the Child Support Agency has recently increased its staffing level; and for what reasons.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the Chief Executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 16 February 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about staffing levels in the Child Support Agency.

Recruitment of staff to the Agency has continued during 1993/94 in order to meet a projected staffing level of 5,220 by the end of March 1994. At 31 December 1993, there were 4,982·5 whole time equivalent staff in post.

I hope you will find this reply helpful.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 68, regarding the water projects funded by the Overseas Development Administration in Indonesia, which companies have won the contracts for work on the water projects.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The company which is implementing the general research programme into canal system maintenance in a number of countries, including Indonesia, is Hydraulics Research Limited, Wallingford. No companies are involved with village-based water schemes as they are being undertaken by local communities.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which water projects the Overseas Development Administration has funded in Indonesia over the last five years; which companies have won those contracts; what was the value of those contracts; and which of those projects were funded under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The following water projects in Indonesia have been supported with bilateral aid over the last five years:

— Project management of the Madura Groundwater project. Company: Groundwater Development Consultants (International) Ltd. Value: £2·99 million (all but some £500,000 of this expenditure occurred before 1989).

— Water Quality Improvement Planning Study for the Kali-Sunter River. Company: Binnie and Parners Ltd. Value: £0·60 million.

— Lake Toba Water Level study. Company: Institute of Hydrology. Value: £0·10 million.

— Research into canal system maintenance (part of a wider project involving a number of countries). Company: Hydraulics Research Ltd. Wallingford (covering all the countries involved). Value: £0·46 million.

Eighteen projects were jointly funded with non-governmental organisations during this period at a total cost of £137,000. In addition, 11 small water projects were funded during this period at a total cost of £42,000. No companies were involved with these 29 projects as they were small, mainly village-based, schemes undertaken by local communities.

None of the projects mentioned was funded under the aid and trade provision.

Malaysia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration he has given to the eligibility of the proposed construction of a second airport at Kuala Lumpur for support under (a) the aid and trade provision and (b) the United Kingdom aid programme.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Government are still considering the request from the Malaysian Government for grant finance from the aid and trade provision budget to develop a new airport at Sepang.

Aid Targeting

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will consider targeting aid to countries which renounce the arms trade.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We target aid on countries which need it and can use it effectively in support of sound policies for economic and social development and the reduction of poverty. Most of our bilateral aid goes to countries with which we have close historical ties. It is for each country to assess and provide for its own legitimate defence needs.

The United Kingdom actively supports the increased emphasis placed by the International Monetary Fund and the World bank on analysing the implications for economic and social development of the composition of public expenditure. We consider the setting of an appropriate level of military expenditure to be an important part of good government. It is one of the factors we take into account when deciding our allocations of bilateral aid.

Russian Federation

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out details of the disbursements from the sum of £11,201,000 which was allocated to the Russian Federation during 1992-93.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A list of all know-how fund projects to date, including disbursements under the 1992-93 programme for Russia, was recently placed in the Libraries of the House. Details of know-how fund activities are placed in the Libraries on a regular basis.

Madagascar

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will allocate emergency relief for the people of Madagascar, following the cyclone resulting in deaths and homelessness.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In addition to a donation of 500,000 ECU by the EC, we have provided the non-governmental organisation CARE with a grant of £31,267 in support of its emergency programme of agricultural rehabilitation in Brickaville. We are ready to consider any further requests.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Cloisters (Allocation of Areas)

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what is the policy and intention of the Committee on the allocation of areas in the Cloisters for (a) hon. Members and (b) secretaries.

Mr. Ray Powell: The Accommodation and Works Committee has yet to reach firm decisions on the use of accommodation released by recent additions to the parliamentary estate. Proposals for the future of the Cloisters and other areas will be included in that consideration.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Newton: There is no record of any equipment having been stolen from the Privy Council Office in the last three years.

TRANSPORT

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who are the members currently appointed to Trinity house.

Mr. Norris: The current membership of the board of the Trinity House Lighthouse Service is as follows:

Captain P. M. Edge—Chairman, and Deputy Master of Trinity House
Captain D. J. Orr—Chief Executive
Captain N. MacD Turner RD
Captain P. H. King
Mr. W. A. C. Thomson
Captain M. J. F. Rawlinson OBE, RN
Mr. M. J. Faulkner
Mr. K. W. Clark FCA
Mr. D. A. S. Vennings BSc (Eng), C Eng, MICE

A further appointment is pending, following the retirement of Sir Michael Colman Bt.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who are the members currently appointed to the Northern Lighthouse Board.

Mr. Norris: The current membership of the Northern Lighthouse Board is as follows:

Mr. J. Hann CBE (Chairman)
Sheriff-Principal R. C. Hay CBE, WS
Mr. T. Macgill
Captain A. F. Dickson, OBE, RD, FRIN
Mr. A J. Struthers
Sheriff-Principal N. D. MacLeod QC
The Rt. Hon. Lord Rodger of Earlsferry QC, Lord Advocate
Mr. W. F. Hay CBE
Sheriff-Principal C. G. B. Nicholson QC (Vice-Chairman)
Sheriff-Principal J. J. Maquire QC
Sheriff-Principal D. J. Risk QC
Sheriff-Principal G. L. Cox QC
Captain D. N. Cowell (Isle of Man)
Mr. T. Dawson QC, Solicitor General
The Rt. Hon. Norman Irons, Lord Provost of Edinburgh
Mr. W. A. E. Fraser, Provost of Inverness
The Rt. Hon. Robert Innes, Lord Provost of Glasgow
Mr. J. Wyness MA, Lord Provost of Aberdeen
Mr. G. McMillan, Chairman of Argyll and Bute District Council

Air Misses

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many air misses there have been in each of the last five years involving aircraft taking off from or landing at each of (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick, (c) London City and (d) Birmingham airports.

Mr. Norris: According to the records of the Civil Aviation Authority, reports of air miss type incidents submitted by pilots and air traffic controllers over the past five years, involving aircraft taking off from or landing at the airports in question, are given in the table. These figures include all reports, including those which were subsequently judged to involve no risk of collision:

	Year
Airport	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993
Heathrow	3	5	8	7	4
Gatwick	3	3	4	5	1
London City	0	0	0	1	0
Birmingham	1	2	1	0	2

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Norris: The following publicity campaigns costing more than £10,000 have been or are being carried out in the current financial year by the Department and its agencies.

TV Advertising	Radio Advertising	Newspaper Advertising	Other Promotional Campaigns
Department of Transport
Road Safety Campaigns
Drink Drive	None	None	Coastal Safety
Kill Your Speed			Marine Safety
Rear Seat Belts
			Other Road Safety Topics
			Booklet to complement the BBC 'Drive' programme
Department Agencies—DVLA
Road Tax Evasion	Road Tax Evasion	Road Tax Evasion	None
Vehicle Registration Numbers	Vehicle Registration Numbers	Vehicle Registration Numbers	None

The objectives for road safety campaigns are to reduce road casualties by a third by the year 2000. Coastal and marine safety campaigns are designed to promote sea safety messages and awareness of coastguard services. The road tax and sale of vehicle registration numbers scheme campaigns are intended to encourage people to re-license their vehicles and to increase the sale of personalised numbers. The Department commissions independent research on all major campaigns to establish the effectiveness of its advertising.

For 1994-95 the Department plans to run television advertising on Drink Drive and Kill Your Speed and promotional campaigns on other road safety topics.

The Department's agencies plan to run television, newspaper and radio advertising on road tax evasion and sale of vehicle registration numbers and promotional campaigns on coastal and marine safety.

London Transport Projects

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the Government's principal proposals for new (a) rail, (b) underground, (c) road and (d) river projects in London; and on which of them progress is expected in 1994.

Mr. Norris: On Network SouthEast, work continues on the Kent link route modernisation at a total cost of £800 million, involving infrastructure upgrading and rolling stock replacement. On the London, Tilbury and Southend line, an £83 million contract for the major physical works on the line was signed with GEC Alsthom Signalling Ltd. in January last year. An £85 million re-signalling scheme on the Great Eastern is steadily being extended on lines out of Liverpool Street. We expect good progress to be made on all of these schemes in 1994, including the completion of the Kent link and much of the London, Tilbury and Southend work.

On the existing London Underground network, further progress is being made on a range of schemes in 1994 including the £750 million modernisation of the Central line and the train refurbishment programme. Construction of the Jubilee line extension is under way, and we expect the Crossrail Bill to continue its passage through Parliament, with a view to the project proceeding as a joint venture with a substantial private sector contribution. The DLR extension to Beckton is expected to open by the end of March, and the Lewisham extension is being taken forward as a private finance initiative.

Progress with implementing the London trunk road schemes in "Trunk Roads, England: Into the 1990s" is continuing. The A406 Harrow road and A40 Long lane trunk road schemes will be completed this year. The Department has also let contracts for the advance and main works on the A13 Thames avenue to Wennington scheme, two of the three main contracts have also been let for the A406 Silver street to Hall lane scheme and the main works contract has been let for the A406 east of Falloden way to east of Finchley road scheme. Implementation of the 315-mile red route network will begin later this year. We are conducting a review of the trunk road programme, and we shall make an announcement when the results of the review are known.

The River Thames working group, which I chair, is examining the benefits and potential of maximising transport on the Thames. I hope to publish a report of the group's findings in the summer. The Thames festival is now being planned for 1995 by the London Arts Board and the London Council for Sport and Recreation, with Government support towards the planning stage. This will be a major cultural and recreational celebration embracing many events on the River Thames and its banks.

A303 (Stonehenge)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he is giving to the proposal advanced by English Heritage, the National Trust and the Council for British Archaeology to tunnel the A303 trunk road under the Stonehenge world heritage site.

Mr. Norris: I am considering the proposal for a tunnel very carefully and the implications of its construction and future maintenance for the world heritage site. At more than 4 km, it would be the longest road tunnel in the United Kingdom by a substantial margin.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what objections he has received to his proposals to upgrade the A303 road at Stonehenge in respect of (a) the yellow route and (b) the grey route; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Our public consultation in 1993 has attracted many helpful comments which are now being analysed. The question of objections does not arise since no draft orders under the Highways and Acquisition of Land Acts have yet been published. The next step is the announcement of the preferred option on which further development work can take place.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many metres of tunnel there are on the channel tunnel rail link in Kent; what percentage of the channel tunnel rail link route length in Kent this represents; and if he will list, with their lengths, the channel tunnel rail link tunnels in Kent.

Mr. Freeman: The route of the channel tunnel rail link to be safeguarded very shortly has the following tunnels in Kent:

	Metres
Thames tunnel (portion in Kent)	1,505
North Downs tunnel	3,175
Park Wood West tunnel (Boxley)	330
Hollingbourne tunnel (Eyhorne Street)	240
Sandway tunnel (under Headcorn road)	170
Tunn : Church Road, Mersham	160
Sandling Park tunnel	90

Decisions will follow on the route at Pepper Hill and Ashford which may involve further tunnels. The route for consultation issued last year had the following tunnels at these two locations:

	Metres
Pepper Hill tunnel	910
Tunnel at Ashford Junction (Leacon Lane)	205
Tunnel at Ashford Junction (A20)	450
Sandyhurst Lane tunnel	135
Willesborough Lees tunnel	1,150

The total length of tunnels on the route in Kent, including the 1993 route for consultation at Pepper Hill and Ashford, is approximately 8,520 metres. This is 11.3 per cent. of the total length of the route in Kent.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the minimum length of a tunnel on the channel tunnel rail link is for it to be defined as a tunnel, rather than a bridge.

Mr. Freeman: The terminology chosen by Union Railways defines a tunnel as any structure over the railway longer than 50 metres. Shorter structures are defined as bridges.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the organisations which made representations to his Department in support of the Boxley long tunnel on the channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Freeman: The organisations which in response to an invitation for formal comments made representations to the Department in favour of a long tunnel in mid-Kent were as follows:

Kent County Council
Tonbridge and Malling Borough Council
Maidstone Borough Council
Kent Association of Parish Councils
Aylesford Parish Council
Boxley Parish Council
Detling Parish Council
Thrunham Parish Council
Bearsted Parish Council
Bluebells Action Group
Kits Coty Action Group
North Aylesford Action Group
Boxley and Penenden Heath Rail Concern
Detling Rail Action Group
Thurnhan Action Group
Sandling Residents' Association
Cuxton and North Halling Rail Action Group
Association of Men of Kent and Kentish Men

Kent Action Group
Council for the Protection of Rural England (Kent Branch)
Kent Trust for Nature Conservation

Public Transport (Financial Inducements)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to give travellers financial inducements to use public transport in line with Her Majesty's Government's policy.

Mr. Freeman: It is not Government policy to offer travellers direct financial inducements to use public transport. The Government believe that the prices people pay for transport should reflect the costs and benefits of their use. However, local authorities have discretion to provide concessionary fares for pensioners and some other groups of people, which are funded with central Government assistance.

There are also substantial grants and subsidies available to public transport operators. In 1992-93, British Rail received £1·15 billion in PSO grant, representing an increase of 40 per cent. in real terms on 1991-92. The 1993 autumn Budget settlement will provide nearly £3 billion in support to London Transport over the next three years. This includes funds for the Jubilee line extension.

The bus industry will also benefit from fuel duty rebate. In 1993-94 this will total around £200 million. Bus operators can also reclaim all VAT paid on the pump price of fuel provided they are VAT registered. VAT on passenger transport is zero rated. The Government are also working with the bus industry and local authorities on ways to make bus travel more attractive, for example through traffic management measures to speed up journey times.

The Government have also introduced other measures which should indirectly encourage the use of public transport services. These include the commitment in the 1993 autumn Budget to increase road fuel duties in future Budgets by at least 5 per cent. in real terms which should act as an incentive to road users to minimise their transport costs through the use of more fuel efficient vehicles and, where appropriate, the use of public transport alternatives.

In addition, central Government and local authorities are carrying out research on the feasibility of city congestion charging. If implemented this could significantly improve the viability and attractiveness of public transport.

London Underground

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he has had discussions with the chairman of London Underground on improving the service on the Central line.

Mr. Norris: I regularly discuss a wide range of issues with the Chairman of London Underground.

Blackwall Third Crossing

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement about the Blackwall third crossing.

Mr. Norris: I will make an announcement once I have considered all the views put to me.

East London Line

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further work he expects to be undertaken in the next year on plans for the extension of the east London line.

Mr. Norris: London Underground Ltd submitted an application to the Secretary of State for an order under the Transport and Works Act 1992 to grant it powers to construct the proposed northern extension to the East London line on 30 November 1993. If powers are granted, it is envisaged that the scheme would be taken forward as a joint venture with the private sector.

Traffic Growth

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will specify the range of measures to reduce environmental impacts of transport and influence traffic growth that the Government are pursuing.

Mr. Key: In the November Budget speech, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced an 8-10 per cent. increase in road fuel duties. He also announced that in future Budgets he will increase duty on all road fuels by at least 5 per cent. in real terms. This will encourage all motorists to use fuel more wisely.

Tight new EC emission standards for both cars and lorries are coming in over the next few years. Most new cars have needed catalytic converters since the beginning of 1993. These reduce harmful emissions by about 80 per cent.

The MOT emissions check introduced for cars in November 1991 is helping to reduce emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons. Since 1 September 1993 there has been a metered smoke test in the annual test for heavy diesels. Since 1 February 1994 there has also been a metered smoke test for diesel cars.

Measures to reduce congestion in urban areas will also help—these involve a mix of traffic management, parking controls and better public transport. The Department is undertaking a programme of research on congestion, which includes an assessment of the possible role of road pricing.

In London, for example, the Department is introducing a network of red routes designed to improve the movement of traffic. Journeys on these routes will be smoother with less stopping and starting. This will mean less pollution. Associated traffic management and parking guidance includes proposals for moderating traffic growth and the opportunities for parking in London which have a part to play in containing pollution.

The introduction of the "package approach" encourages local authorities to develop a coherent strategy for dealing with urban traffic problems and provides more flexibility for funding between modes.

Carbon Dioxide Emmissions

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what initiatives he is taking in the transport sector which, although primarily designed to achieve other ends including reducing traffic congestion or improving road safety, will have a beneficial effect on carbon dioxide emmissions.

Mr. Key: The most important measure to reduce carbon dioxide emissions from the transport sector is the commitment to raise fuel duties by at least 5 per cent. in real terms. This will save some 2·5MtC in the year 2000.

Other measures which will have a beneficial effect on carbon dioxide emissions include the introduction of an emissions check into the MOT test which encourages people to keep their engines in tune.

We have required speed limiters for new heavy lorries since August 1992 and for many of the heaviest existing lorries from August 1993.

We are also discussing with our partners in the European Union how best to encourage manufacturers to produce more fuel efficient cars.

The Government are supporting high investment in rail and it is working with the bus industry and local authorities on ways to make bus travel more attractive eg through traffic management measures to speed up journey times.

Together with the Department of the Environment, we are together looking at how planning controls can encourage new development to be located where it can reduce the need for car travel and increase transport choice.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who are the members currently appointed to the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Norris: The current members of the board of the Civil Aviation Authority are:

Executive members

The right hon. Christopher Chataway (Chairman)
Mr. Thomas Murphy, CBE
Mr. Michael Willett
Mr. Cliff Paice
Mr. Derek McLauchlan

Non-executive members

Mr. Raymond Birdseye
Mr. Leslie Priestley
Mr. Richard Sturt
Mr. Peter Grant
Captain Gilbert Gray
Ms Ann Burdus
Mr. Anthony Blackman, OBE
Air Vice-Marshal Bertrand Brownlow, CB, OBE, AFC
Mr. Frank Vibert
Mr. Roderick Lynch

London Underground

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing, separately for men and women and as an overall total, the number of incidents of (a) violent crime and (b) sexual assault on London Underground for 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Norris [pursuant to his answer, 31 January 1994, col. 505]: There were some errors in the figures quoted for violent crimes and sexual offences on London Underground in 1992 and 1993. The correct figures are shown in the table.

	Violent crimes		Sexual offences		Overall
Year	Robbery	[1]Assault	Male	Female	total
1992	479	636	11	251	1,377
1993	495	628	7	248	1,378

Source: British Transport Police figures supplied to London Underground.

[1] Figure includes all assaults on passengers, staff and the police (not all of which in the latter category being necessarily of a violent nature).

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

West Midlands Serious Crime Squad

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the cases still pending before the Court of Appeal involving members of the West Midlands serious crimes squad.

The Attorney-General: Currently, there are five cases before the Court of Appeal. They are as follows:

Martin P. Foran
Roy Meads
Anthony M. Jones
Trevor McCalla
Abdul Rasheed

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 833, if he will list the cases involving members of the West Midlands serious crimes squad where convictions have been quashed on appeal.

The Attorney-General: The 23 appellants whose appeals have been allowed by the Court of Appeal are as follows:

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Attorney-General how many documents, and how many pages, have now been submitted to the Scott inquiry by the legal secretariat to the Law Officers.

The Attorney-General: A total of 288 documents, amounting to 1,697 pages, have been submitted by the legal secretariat to the Law Officers.

Combat 18

Mr. Madden: To ask the Attorney-General if he will refer to the Director of Public Prosecutions publications issued by Combat 18 which urge the public to make nuisance telephone calls to named individuals, with a view to prosecuting those responsible for publishing and printing such publications.

The Attorney-General: I understand that the police service, which is responsible for the investigation of alleged criminal offences, is aware of the activities of Combat 18, including the publications to which the hon. Member refers. The role of the Crown Prosecution Service, when involved at the investigation stage, is to provide legal advice to the police relevant to their inquiries, and thereafter to conduct any criminal proceedings which may be appropriate.

Equipment Theft

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Attorney-General if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from the Law Officers' Departments in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

The Attorney-General: No equipment has been stolen from my own office during the last three years. Equipment stolen from the Treasury Solicitor's department, the Serious Fraud Office and the Crown Prosecution Service is listed in the table.

Date	Items	Approximate value of items (£)
July 1991	1 Video recorder	400
October 1991	1 Personal computer and 5 Printers	8,300
January 1992	4 Personal computers	7,250
February 1992	4 PC system boxes	4,700
March 1992	1 Personal computer	1,000
May 1992	1 Facsimile machine	1,400
July 1992	2 Dictaphones	100
August 1992	3 Printers and 1 Dictaphone machine	3,009
September 1992	1 Laptop computer	300
December 1992	11 Personal computers and 1 Printer	17,250
January 1993	1 Personal computer, 1 Printer and 1 Telephone handset	2,130

March 1993	1 Personal computer, 2 Printers and 1 Video recorder	3,45
April 1993	1 Computer monitor	200
May 1993	1 PC system box	600
June 1993	6 Dictaphones	600
August 1993	3 Calculators	12
December 1993	4 Personal computers, 4 Printers and 1 Facsimile	9,000
January 1994	4 PC system boxes	2,400
	Total	64,101

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Appointments

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the Agriculture and Food Research Council.

Mr. Waldegrave: The current members of the Agricultural and Food Research Council are as follows:

Sir Alistair Grant (Chairman)
Professor T. L. Blundell, FRS
(Secretary and Deputy Chairman)
Dr. P. J. Bunyan
Mr. C. R. Cann
Professor E. C. D. Cocking, FRS
Professor J. R. Coggins, FRSE
Professor P. James, CBE
Sir Sam Edwards, FRS
Mr. D. F. R. George, OBE
Mr. A. B. N. Gill
Professor R. M. Hicks, OBE
Professor G. Horn, FRS
Mr. R. M. Knapman, MP
Professor J. R. Krebs, FRS
Professor C. J. Leaver, FRS
Professor R. Leech
Dr. T. Little
Professor T. A. Mansfield, FRS
Mr. K. MacKenzie
Mr. J. L. C. Provan
Mr. G. T. Pryce
Dr. D. W. F. Shannon
Professor W. V. Shaw

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the various sources used to compile the public appointments unit central list, what categories are used by the public appointments unit to sort these names and if he will list them by percentage; and what per cent. of the names on the public appointments unit central list are self-nominated.

Mr. David Davis: The public appointments unit receives names of suitable candidates for registration on the central list in a number of ways including nominations from other Government Departments, professional and representative organisations, and recommendations from individuals including Members of Parliament from all parties, who know of the work of the unit. Self-nominations are also welcome and account for 38 per cent. of the names on the list. The categories used to sort the names are as follows:

Source of nomination	Percentage of names on the central list (February 1994)
Self-nomination	38·3
Departmental	32·6
Professional/representative organisations	16·1
Personal recommendation	11·6
Ministerial, MPs and political groups	1·4

Executive Agency Chief Executives

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list all executive agency chief executives, their age on appointment, their current salaries, including bonuses, and the salaries of analogous civil service grades.

Mr. David Davis: A list of all agency chief executives is reproduced in the table. The national salary ranges of grades 1A to 6 are as follows:

Grade 1A	£82,925
Grade 2	£64,307-75,328
Grade 3	£51,360-59,599
Grade 4	£44,390-53,740
Grade 5	£36,019-53,740
Grade 6	£27,660-46,122

Information on the age of chief executives on appointment and their current salaries is not held centrally.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Insurance Premium Tax

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has for the expenditure incurred in administration and collection of insurance premium tax.

Sir John Cope: It is a priority in the implementation of insurance premium tax to minimise the compliance and administrative costs associated with it, recognising that there are a wide range of interests within the insurance sector. Discussions since the Budget between Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and representatives of the insurance industry have been very much directed toward this end. When firm conclusions have been reached on the actual operation of the tax, a revised compliance cost assessment will be issued. However, it is clear that in terms of the likely costs of administration by Customs the tax will be highly cost effective; whilst the compliance costs of the insurance industry should not in practice prove burdensome.

Division of Telecommunications

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to respond to the claim presented by Civil Service Unions for Treasury underwriting of the severance terms for Home Office DTELS employees when that division is privatised; and if he will make it his policy that DTELS employees are offered the same severance and redundancy terms as PSA employees and Forward Catering employees have been offered.

Mr. Dorrell: I understand that my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has responded to the civil service unions' representations.

On the second point, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 8 February 1994 at column 120.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pages of evidence have now been provided by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise to the Scott inquiry.

Sir John Cope: Customs and Excise has to date supplied in the region of 15,100 pages of evidence to the Scott inquiry.

Domestic Fuel Consumption

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the reductions in consumption of domestic fuel resulting from the imposition of value added tax.

Sir John Cope: It was estimated that over the next two years imposing VAT at the standard rate on domestic fuel and power would reduce consumption by around 3 per cent. overall.

Public Appointments

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total number of public appointments which he makes.

Mr. Nelson: Details of the number of public appointments which my right hon. and learned Friend makes are listed in the publication "Public Bodies", which is available in the Members' Library.

Exchange Rate

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect the takeover of British industry by foreign firms has on the exchange rate.

Mr. Nelson: The effect is uncertain. The purchase of British assets by foreign firms will tend to raise sterling. Similarly, when United Kingdom firms acquire overseas assets, this will tend to lower the exchange rate. In the 10 years to 1992, the most recent complete year for which data are available, direct investment overseas by United Kingdom residents has been £122 billion, while direct investment in the United Kingdom by overseas residents has been £91 billion.

Caribbean (Offshore Companies)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reports (a) the Treasury and (b) the Bank of England have prepared in the last five years on banking, financial services or offshore companies operating in British dependent territories in the Caribbean; what recommendations were made in those reports; what action has been taken on the recommendations; and if he will ensure that a copy of each of those reports is placed in the Library.

Mr. Nelson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has responsibility for offshore financial regulation in the Caribbean Dependent Territories. It published a Survey of Offshore Finance Sectors in the Caribbean Dependent Territories in 1990. A copy is in the House of Commons Library. Work is proceeding on enhanced regulation in the offshore finance sector to which both Her Majesty's Treasury and the Bank of England contribute.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the gross domestic product per head in each county for each of the last five years.

Mr. Nelson: Estimates for gross domestic product by county are only calculated for years when there is an Annual Census of Employment. The latest available information for GDP per head by county is for 1987, 1989 and 1991 which was published in the December 1993 issue of Economic Trends, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Inheritance Tax (Works of Art)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list of those works of art which must be made available for public access by reason of inheritance tax exemption.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 28 January 1994 at column 454.

Taxpayers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number and percentage of taxpayers who had incomes of (a) £5 million or more, (b) between £1 million and £5 million, (c) between £500,000 and £1 million and (d) between £100,000 and £500,000 in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Dorrell: Reliable estimates are available only for the numbers of taxpayers with incomes in excess of £100,000 and are as follows:

	Total number of taxpayers	Number of taxpayers with incomes[1] in excess of £100,000	Percentage of taxpayers with incomes[1] in excess of £100,000
	Thousands	Thousands	Per cent.
1991-92	25,700	100	0·4
1992-93[2]	25,100	110	0·4

[1] Total income for income tax purposes
[2] Provisional

British Aerospace

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what United Kingdom tax regime will apply to any payment received by the chairman of British Aerospace as a result of the increased value of his shareholding with that company.

Mr. Dorrell: For reasons of confidentiality, I cannot make any comment on the specific tax affairs of any individual.

Banks

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the legal restrictions governing the use of the term "bank".

Mr. Nelson: The statutory restrictions governing the use of banking names and descriptions, including the use of the term "bank", are contained in sections 67-73 of the Banking Act 1987, as amended by the Banking Co-ordination (Second Council Directive) Regulations 1992 (SI 1992/3218).

Tax Changes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing for each region the change in total tax in each year since 1978-79 as against the 1978-79 indexed regime broken down into the top 1 per cent., 5 per cent., 10 per cent., and bottom 70 per cent., 50 per cent., 30 per cent. and all taxpayers, giving the number of taxpayers in each category.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 14 February 1994]: Available information was provided in the answers which I gave to the hon. Member on 20 January at column 777 and to the hon. Member for Hartlepool (Mr. Mandelson) on 29 November 1993 at columns 337-38. The analysis sought for the earlier years is not available and the analyses for the earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pensioners

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to write to every pensioners group in the country giving details of the compensation package he announced in the Budget for all pensioners as a consequence of tax increases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 15 February 1994]: Efforts were made on Budget day to make the details available to pensioner groups.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to publicise the compensation package he announced in the Budget for all pensioners as a consequence of tax increases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 15 February 1994]: The package of assistance with fuel bills announced in the November Budget was the subject of a press release, and has received widespread publicity at the time of the Budget and since. All pensioners will have received notification of the increase in the state retirement pension by 1 April 1994.

Leaflets offering information on the home energy efficiency scheme (HEES), which is to be extended to cover all pensioners, are supplied free of charge to local authorities, housing benefit offices, housing associations, citizens advice bureaux, the Benefits Agency, jobcentres, Age Concern and other organisations which have contact with HEES client group. The Energy Action Grants Agency (EAGA), which is responsible for administering the HEES, also encourages installers to promote HEES locally by means of advertising, press publicity and distribution of their own leaflets.

The Department for National Savings ran advertisements in the national press for the new pensioners' guaranteed income bond between 21 January and 13 February. The prospectus for the bond is available from all post offices and on request from the DNS office in Blackpool.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) who are the members currently appointed to the Board of the Registrar of Public Lending Right;

(2) who are the members currently appointed to the Advisory Committee for the Public Lending Right.

Mr. Sproat: There is no PLR board, since the registrar (appointed by the Secretary of State) is a corporate sole. The current registrar is Dr. James Parker.

The public lending right (PLR) advisory committee advises the Secretary of State and/or the registrar on PLR matters.

The present members of the committee are:

Philip Ziegler CVO (Chairman)
Lee Langley
Keith Crawshaw
Clive Grenyer
Janet Hurrell
Gillian McClure
Roger Palmer
Lavinia Trevor

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who are the members currently appointed to the board of the Wallace collection.

Mr. Sproat: The members of the board of trustees of the Wallace collection are:

Hon. Simon Sainsbury (Chairman)
Lord Egremont DL
Prof. Francis J. H. Haskell FBA
James Joll Esq
Dr. Jennifer I. R. Montagu FBA
Lady Shaw-Stewart.

Consultants

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1992, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Sproat: My Department and its two agencies have awarded consultancy contracts to the value of £5·13 million in 1992-93 (£5·3 million at constant 1994 prices) and £3·15 million in 1993-94.

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Sproat: Since the establishment of the Department of National Heritage on 13 April 1992 we have had one lap top personal computer stolen. The approximate value was £2,500.

British Library

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what is the estimated completion date for the British library project;

(2) if he will publish the report of his Department's consultants, Kennedy and Donkin, into the British library project.

Mr. Brooke: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 7 February at column 40.

Royal Parks

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was his Department's total expenditure on the royal parks in each year from 1978-79 to 1991-92.

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Welch to Mr. Nick Raynsford, dated 11 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for National Heritage has asked me to reply to your Question of 9 February 1994 about expenditure on the royal parks for the period 1978-879 to 1991-92, originally addressed to the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Prior to 1988-89 Royal Parks was not separately accounted for so expenditure figures before this date are not available. However, the figures for spend from 1988-89 to 1991-92 are as follows:

	£ million
1988-89	16·2
1989-90	16·0
1990-91	20·1
1991-92	25·4

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was his Department's total expenditure on the royal parks in 1992-93 and 1993-94; and what is the budgeted expenditure for 1994-95, 1995-96 and 1996-97.

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Welch to Mr. Nick Raynsford, dated 11 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for National Heritage has asked me to reply to your Question of 9 February 1994 about expenditure on the royal parks.

The figures for spend on the Royal Parks are as follows:

	£ million
1992-93	[1]22·80
1993-94	[2]22·91
1994-95	[3]23·87

1996-97	[3]25·75

[1] (Outturn).
[2] (Forecast outturn).
[3] (Planned).

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to commission a research study into useage of the royal parks from the University of North London; and what will be (i) the cost, (ii) the duration and (iii) the terms of reference of the research.

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Welch to Mr. Nick Raynsford, dated 11 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for National Heritage has asked me to reply to your Question of 9 February 1994 about a research study into usage of the Royal Parks.

In December 1993 the Centre for Leisure and Tourism studies, University of North London, won a competitively tendered three year contract to undertake a market research study of people using The Royal Parks. This will cost £94,600 in year one. The terms of reference include estimation of visitor numbers, development of a questionnaire, interviews and production of reports. The volume of work to be ordered in years 2 and 3 of the commission will be influenced by the results obtained during the first year.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much his Department has spent on (i) consultancy and (ii) research relating to the royal parks in 1992-93 and 1993-94; and what is the budgeted expenditure for 1994-95, 1995-96 and 1996-97.

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Welch to Mr. Nick Raynsford, dated 11 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for National Heritage has asked me to reply to your Question of 9 February 1994 about spend on consultancy and research.

The Royal Parks figures for spend on consultancies, including market research, are as follows:

Year	£000
1992-93	[1]749
1993-94	[2]744
1994-95	[3]760
1995-96	[3]750
1996-97	[3]750

[1] Outturn.
[2] Forecast outturn.
[3] Planned.

The Royal Parks do not currently intend to spend any moneys on research other than the £95,000 market research to be carried out by the University of North London during 1994. The response to your Question of the same date as this one refers.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year since 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each year to 1995-96 for each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department, as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Notes:
i. From 1 April 1994 responsibility for the Scottish and Welsh Arts Councils will be transferred from the Secretary of State for National Heritage to the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales respectively. Whilst the above figures take account of all three Arts Councils for the years prior to 1994-95, from that year they represent the Arts Council of England only.
ii. The British Library figures include payments in relation to the building of the new British Library, St. Pancras.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each one the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Sproat: My Department has conducted no advertising or other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 in the current financial year. For 1994-95, the Department is planning a programme of civilian events to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the D-day landings on 6 June 1994.

I have asked the chief executives of the Historic Royal Palaces and Royal Parks Agencies to write to the hon. Member about the position in their agencies.

Letter from Mr. D. Welch to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 10 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for National Heritage has asked me to reply to your Question of 8 February 1994 about advertising and promotional campaigns, in so far as the question relates to this Agency.

Neither in the current financial year nor in our 1994-95 plans do we have any advertising or other promotional campaign that will cost over £10,000.

Letter from Mr. D. Beeton to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 14 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for National Heritage has requested me to reply to your Written Question as far as it affects my Agency.

I am enclosing a schedule setting out the requested information. These promotional campaigns are aimed at protecting and enhancing our business income, which is forecast to total £28 million in 1994-95, having risen from £11 million on the establishment of the Agency in 1989-90.

In answer to your written Parliamentary Question, please find below a list of all television advertising, newspaper advertising and other promotional campaigns for Historic Royal Palaces, with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 in the current financial year, and those planned for 1994-95:

1993-94

TOWER OF LONDON

To contribute towards target visitor numbers of 2·32 million;

To continue to reposition the Tower to the domestic audience.

Campaigns:

1–30 April—cross track poster campaign on the London Underground; Total budget £100,000 (includes production).

27 July–12 August: London radio campaign on Capital FM: Total budget £40,000.

2 August–11 September; London television advertising campaign; Total budget £215,000.

Evaluation:

Advertising Track Study set up to evaluate the effectiveness of the television advertising against objectives by means of an omnibus survey. Conducted by BMRB Research.

Analysis of visitor numbers.

Annual Summer Visitor Survey comprising 300 on-site face-to-face interviews with visitors.

1994-95

TOWER OF LONDON

To contribute towards achieving target visitor numbers of 2·5 million

Campaigns:

12 July–30 August; London Television advertising campaign. Total budget £190,000.

26–31 December; London Television advertising campaign. Total budget £36,000.

Evaluation:

Advertising Tracking Study set up to evaluate the effectiveness of the television advertising against objectives by means of an omnibus survey conducted by BMRB Research.

Analysis of visitor numbers.

Annual Summer Visitor Survey comprising 300 on-site face-to-face interviews with visitors.

1994-95

HAMPTON COURT PALACE

Advertising objectives:

To contribute towards achieving target visitor numbers of 586,000.

Planned campaigns:

10–28 August; London Television advertising campaign: £92,000. Please note: neither budget nor timing confirmed.

Evaluation:

Advertising Tracking Study set up to evaluate the effectiveness of the television advertising against objectives by means of an omnibus survey conducted by BMRB Research.

Analysis of visitor numbers.

Annual Summer Visitor Survey comprising 300 on-site face-to-face interviews with visitors.

1993-94

CORPORATE SALES PROMOTION—Total budget £100,000

The corporate sales promotion activity comprised the Royal Pass, entitling visitors to entry to all the Palaces for £15, plus a souvenir guidebook, the joint Palaces leaflet promoting the Royal Pass and the Sovereign Trail competition.

Evaluation:

H H & S, the incumbent sales promotion agency, provide analysis of results based on targets agreed at the outset.

1994-95

CORPORATE SALES PROMOTION—Total planned budget £86,000

Pitches yet to be received from competitive tendering exercise. However, plan to further consolidate the Royal Pass, improve the design and usefulness of the joint Palaces leaflet, i.e. multilingual and develop appropriate business partnerships.

Evaluation:

Selected consultancy will be asked to provide detailed evaluation of their campaigns against targets set at the outset.

I do hope this answers your questions.

Royal Palaces

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total rent received for accommodation provided at Kensington palace and St. James's palace.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 10 February 1994]: The total annual rent receivable at the present time from this accommodation is £26,348.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will place in the Library a list of all the tenants of the grace and favour accommodation in the occupied royal palaces and of the offices these tenants held or hold.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 10 February 1994]: I refer to the answer that I gave to the right hon. Member on 19 January at column 652 in response to a similar question.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Sexual Harassment

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (i) Government and (ii) Government-funded voluntary sector resources currently available for victims of sexual harassment.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Government funding helps the victims of sexual harassment in a wide variety of ways.

I understand from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment that the Equal Opportunities Commission incurs legal expenses for the purpose of giving advice and assisting those who have been discriminated against on grounds of sex to seek redress in industrial tribunals. Some of the assistance goes towards sexual harassment cases. Examples of Government funding, where violence occurs, include the criminal injuries compensation scheme, victim support schemes and police and health service facilities.

It is not, however, possible to identify separately the extent of Government funding, whether direct or through the voluntary sector, in support of victims of sexual harassment.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to continue funding projects currently in receipt of section 11 funding; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received with regard to the future of section 11 funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have received many representations about section 11 funding from local authorities and associations, teaching unions, ethnic minority communities and other interested parties, mainly supporting its continuation. Commitments to projects currently in receipt of section 11 funding will be honoured. In the future the particular needs of ethnic minorities will be met either through section 11 funds, or through wider regeneration programmes under the single regeneration budget.

Sexual Offences

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many sexual offences were committed by people under the age of 16 years in each year since 1987.

Mr. Maclean: The readily available information for 1987 to 1992 on the number of offenders aged under 16 years found guilty or cautioned for sexual offences is given in the table.

Prison Food

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will publish the cost of food per prisoner week by prison in England;

(2) what is (a) the cost of food per prisoner week at the Wolds private prison and (b) the cost standard required in repsect of Doncaster prison when that becomes privately managed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange to a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond dated 16 February 1994:

Cost of food for prisoners

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your two recent Qeustions about the cost of food for prisoners at both publicly and privately managed prisons in England.

The information requested in respect of prisons whose management has not been contracted out is given in the attached table.

Contracts applying to those prisons managed by the private sector, including Wolds and Doncaster, do not directly specify the cost of food for prisoners. Contracts specify outputs and the requirements and standards which contractors much meet, rather than inputs which are left to contractors to determine.

The requirements and standards laid down are set out in the operational specification and performance criteria contained in the invitation to tender (ITT) documents issued to each bidder and subsequently in the contracts themselves. A copy of the operational specification from the ITT for each prison whose management has been contracted out has been placed in the Library of the House.

The requirements include the provision of three meals a day, one of which must be hot; a choice of dish for the main meal of the day; a hot meal for all reception prisoners; and suitable refreshment for prisoners at court or on escort outside the prison. In addition, meals must meet the daily amounts of food, energy and nutrients, recommended by the Department of Health; modified diets must be provided as necessary for medical, religious or other reasons; and food must be prepared and served to high standards of food handling and hygiene to ensure proper temperature, appearance and palatability.

Performance to the standards required is monitored by the on-site Prison Service Controller. Remedies for failure to deliver the required standards include withholding payment of part of all of the contractor's management fee. This is a powerful incentive for contractors to maintain standards and is one which is not available in the publicly managed part of the service.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his policing priorities for the Metropolitan police authority for 1994.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend's policing priorities for 1994 are reflected in the Metropolitan police corporate strategy priorities document which he announced on 7 February at col 22.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits abroad each Minister of State made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Howard: The cost and purpose of each visit made by the Ministers of State for the Home Department during 1993 were as follows:

Date	Minister	Cost £	Purpose
27-28 May	Peter Lloyd	1,703	Italian ministerial conference on European drug trafficking routes, Rome.
1-2 June	Charles Wardle	875	TREVI/immigration ministerial meeting, Copenhagen
28-29 September	David Maclean	441	European ministers of justice meeting, Brussels.
21-22 October	David Maclean	792	Third European ministerial conference on equality between men and women, Rome.
17-19 November	Charles Wardle	903	5th conference of European ministers responsible for migration affairs, Athens.
28-29 November	Charles Wardle	527	Interior/Justice Council meeting, Brussels.

Police Authority Members

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now make it his policy that all members of a police authority shall be elected representatives.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No.

Traffic Police

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to contract out any of the functions currently discharged by the traffic police.

(2) what plans he has to contract out the convoy escort service for very heavy vehicles.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The possibility of using private escorts is being examined with the Association of Chief Police Officers as one way of reducing the police's involvement in the escorting of abnormal loads of up to 150 tonnes. There are no current plans to change the escort arrangements for very heavy loads of over 150 tonnes. However, as part of the review of police core and ancillary tasks there is to be a review of traffic policing whose terms of reference are:

> To review the role of the police in enforcing the traffic laws and, taking account of the impact of new technology on the most cost effective use of resources, to consider what changes are desirable consistent with the maintenance of high standards of road safety and traffic management.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) the Home Office and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Howard: In the current financial year advertising campaigns for the Home Office costing in excess of £10,000 are:

(a) Home Office

Television
- Electoral Registration
- Smoke Alarms
- Crime Prevention
- Special Constables Recruitment

Press

Campaigns planned for 1994-95 are:

Press
- Fire Safety
- Police Graduate Recruitment

Special Constables Recruitment
Crime Prevention

Television
Special Constables Recruitment

Table A lists campaign objectives:

TABLE A

Electoral Registration
Increase awareness of the need to register in order to vote, especially among young people and ethnic minorities.

Smoke Alarms
Increase to 70 per cent. the number of households fitted with working smoke alarms.

Car Crime Prevention
Raise awareness among motorists of the need to take preventative measures; encourage a partnership approach to fight crime; stimulate business support; help encourage car manufacturers to improve vehicle security.

Passport Renewal
To encourage renewal of applications during the Autumn period.

Special Constables Recruitment
To increase the numbers of Specials.

Police Graduate Recruitment
To increase the numbers of recruits.

With the exception of passport renewal and police graduate recruitment, campaign effectiveness is measured by independent survey research and a range of other relevant measures which demonstrate response to advertising.

The effectiveness of the buying efficiency of television advertising is independently audited.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who are the members currently appointed to the Commission for Racial Equality.

Combat 18

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what reports he has received from the chief constable of West Yorkshire about police action being taken to stop Combat 18 from issuing publications inciting the public to make nuisance telephone calls;

(2) what representations he has received about the activities and leadership of Combat 18; what complaints have been made under the Public Order Act or other legislation against Combat 18; what reports he has received about publications, issued by Combat 18, inciting the public to cause a nuisance against listed individuals and organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no reports from the Chief Constable of West Yorkshire Police about Combat 18. I understand that the Chief Constable has received a letter from the hon. Member and that he will be investigating the complaint it contains. The West Yorkshire Police have received no other complaints. My right hon. and learned Friend has received 10 representations from hon. Members and a number of letters from the general public about the undesirable activities of Combat 18.

Fire and Civil Defence Authorities

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what penalties are incurred by a fire and civil defence authority which exceeds its capping limit in the necessary pursuit of its statutory responsibilities;

(2) what action he intends to take to ensure that the Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority is financially able to fulfil its statutory duties;

(3) what was (a) the budgetary requirement and (b) the provisional standard spending assessment for 1994-95 of the Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority's budgetary requirement for 1994-95 is a matter for the authority. Its standard spending assessment for next year is £46·116 million. It is for the authority to set its budget taking account of all appropriate considerations including its statutory duties. Under the provisional capping criteria announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 2 December, Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority would be able to increase its budget by 1¼ per cent. Any major precepting authority which is required to set a substitute budget as a result of capping may be liable for any administrative expenses incurred by a billing authority as a consequence of that substitute budget.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the report of the inspection by Her Majesty's inspector of fire services of the Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority which took place on 5 July 1993 was published; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the value of annual inspections carried out by Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services when its findings can be reversed by another inspection team within a period of five months;

(3) in what circumstances the findings of an annual inspection by Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services in respect of a particular authority may be reversed, following inspection by another team in the period before the next annual inspection; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what representations he has received about the inspection carried out by Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services which reversed within five months his professional assessment of the establishment requirements of the Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The report of the special inspection of the Merseyside fire brigade which took place during the week commencing 5 July 1993 was published on 11 January. My right hon. and learned Friend does not accept that the report reverses the findings of Her Majesty's inspector of fire services' 1993 annual inspection of the Merseyside fire brigade. Annual inspections of fire brigades serve the purpose of reporting to my right hon. and learned Friend and informing the fire authority on how effectively the brigade concerned is carrying out its statutory functions.

The 1993 annual inspection of the Merseyside fire brigade identified a number of concerns about the way in which the brigade was carrying out its functions, and about its financial position. The special inspection was carried out in the light of those concerns, and of the concerns of the Merseyside fire and civil defence authority itself about the brigade's financial position in the 1993-94 financial year. The special inspection was carried out by a team led by the inspector who had conducted the 1993 annual inspection. The detailed findings of the special inspection reflect the fact that the enlarged inspection team, which included independent financial and accountancy consultants, was able to examine the brigade's organisation and effectiveness in considerably greater detail than is possible in annual inspections of fire brigades. My right hon. and learned Friend has received correspondence from a number of hon. Members about the special inspection.

Inspectorate of Fire Services

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate a thorough audit of the role and functions of Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No. My right hon. and learned Friend is satisfied that the role and functions of Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services are appropriate and that the inspectorate carries them out effectively.

Police Duties

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to define the core duties of the police service.

Mr. Howard: I have asked for a review of policing duties to be undertaken in consultation with the police service and police authority representatives. I share the concern of the police service that the extent of the burdens being placed on them needs examination. I have made it clear that I want to see a police service freed from non-essential tasks so that officers may have the time to concentrate on the tasks which really matter to the public. I shall want to listen very carefully to what the police have to say about the extent of the work they are asked to carry out, and how it might be organised differently.

I expect to receive a report on this exercise in the autumn. I shall consider the impact of any changes proposed on operational efficiency and the quality of service that the police offer the community. I shall also wish to consider how best to consult the public if any changes are proposed that would affect the police interface with the public.

Remand

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for the latest year available, how many people were remanded in the west midlands area; and how many were (a) black males and (b) black females.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 15 February 1994]: Reliable information on the total numbers of defendants remanded in the west midlands is not available centrally. Neither is any regular information collected regularly on the ethnic origin of those proceeded against in court. Some information on the ethnic origin of those remanded in custody in the west midlands was given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Fareham (Mr. Lloyd) in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) on 25 January at columns 155-56.

Cannabis

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each police authority area, the number of people arrested for possession of cannabis in each year since 1989; and what percentage of those was (a) prosecuted and (b) cautioned.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 2 February 1994]: Information on the number of persons arrested for possession of cannabis is not collected centrally. Information on the total number of persons dealt with for the offence of unlawful possession of cannabis, and the percentage of those persons who were cautioned, from 1989 to 1992, the latest year for which figures are available, is given in the table.

Police Officers

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the number of police officers per 100,000 population for each year since 1979 for the South Wales, Thames Valley, Kent, Lancashire, Avon and Somerset and Hampshire police authority areas; and what were the comparable totals for all non-metropolitan and Welsh non-metropolitan police authority areas.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on ratios of police officers to population levels are contained in the appendices to the annual reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary, copies of which are in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Boundaries

17. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what submissions he has received on the local government boundaries for Somerset and Dorset.

Mr. Curry: We have received a large number of representations about the Local Government Commission's recommendations for Somerset, Avon and Gloucestershire.

Submissions about the boundaries for Dorset are at present a matter for the Local Government Commission, which began its review of the area on 13 December 1993.

Council House Rents

18. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes have taken place since 1979 in real terms in the average rent per dwelling per week of council houses.

Sir George Young: The average weekly rent for local housing authority dwellings in England increased from £6·41 in April 1979 to £33·50 in April 1993, an increase of 98 per cent. in real terms.

London Policy

19. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has had to the consultation document on London policy.

Mr. Gummer: Approximately 10,500 completed questionnaires from "London—Making the Best Better" have been returned and I have also received over 250 letters in response to the publication.

City Challenge (Leicester)

20. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the progress of the city challenge project in Leicester so far; and what communication he has received from board members or employees of city challenge which may cast doubt on its future success.

Sir George Young: My Department has monitored the progress of the Leicester city challenge action plan since it was approved last March. A mid-year progress review meeting in October identified a number of problem areas which required action. These issues will be discussed further at the formal annual review on 28 February with the sponsor Minister, my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade and Technology. Future funding will depend on the outcome of the annual review.

Cash Incentive Scheme

21. Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the operation of the cash incentive scheme.

Sir George Young: Cash incentive schemes grants are a cost-effective measure which enable local authorities to improve the supply of affordable housing for rent to people in need. They also provide a boost to the housing market. Since its introduction in 1989 the cash incentive scheme has created over 8,000 vacancies by reletting, and enabled the same number of households to buy their own home.

Building and Construction Industry Activity

22. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest assessment of activity in the building and construction sector and prospects for the short and medium term.

Mr. Baldry: There are some grounds for optimism in the construction industry. The fall in output has halted. New orders are enjoying their best period of growth for years, with figures for the three months to December up 34 per cent. against the previous year.

Plymouth (Regional Sub-office)

23. Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will establish an integral regional sub-office in Plymouth; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: We will consider this and other possibilities for the location of the new integrated regional offices in the South West.

EC Water Directives

24. Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement concerning the future of the EC bathing and drinking water directives.

Mr. Atkins: The European Council in December asked the Commission to bring forward as soon as possible four framework directives to replace parts of existing Community water legislation. These would include replacements for the drinking and bathing water directives.

I understand that the Commission today agreed the text of a proposal for a revision of the Bathing Water Directive. The United Kingdom fully supports the move towards updating Community water legislation. We will now be examining the proposal to ensure that it meets the requirements of subsidiarity, up-to-date science and cost-effectiveness, and that it reorients the new directive towards essential quality and health parameters.

Social Housing Sector

25. Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for extending shared ownership in the social housing sector.

Mr. Gummer: The Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme for 194-95, announced in December of last year, will provide £191·1 million for shared ownership schemes. This is expected to rise to £316·6 million in 1996-97. This will represent 21 per cent. of the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme compared with only 7 per cent. in 1992-93.

The Housing Corporation estimate that this will enable them to provide between 8,500 and 10,500 new homes under shared ownership in 1994-95 rising to between 11,700 and 13,900 by 1996-97. In many cases existing housing association and local authority tenancies will be released for reletting to people in housing need.

Local Authority Housing

26. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authority dwellings have been built in the last year, to the latest possible date; and what were the comparable figures for 1978.

Sir George Young: Provisional figures show that in England in 1993 there were 1,200 housebuilding completions for local authorities. The comparative figure in 1978 was 83,700.

Housing associations are now the main providers of new social housing. 57,600 units of new provision made available with Government help are forecast for 1993-94, compared with 23,800 in 1978-79. Local authorities also sponsor housing associations, and so far in 1993-94 4,400 units of new provision have been made available in this way.

The number of new local authority and housing association lettings in 192-93 was, at 321,000, almost the same as in 1978-79, when there were an estimated 323,000.

35. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how his proposals in the consultation document "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies" will help local authorities carry out their duties under the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Gummer: As the consultation paper makes clear, providing suitable accommodation for families will remain a priority for housing authorities.

36. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many organisations have been invited to respond to his Department's consultation paper, "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies".

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Construction and Inner Cities gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 9 February at column 299.

Local Government Finance

27. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the representations he has recently received from local authorities on the standard spending assessments.

Mr. Curry: During the recent period of consultation on the provisional revenue support grant settlement for 1994-95 we received representations on a wide range of issues from 142 local authorities. My right hon. Friend considered carefully all those representations and any other relevant information before taking his final decisions on the revenue support grant settlement for 1994-95.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will meet the leaders of Liverpool city Council to discuss the standard spending assessment for 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Planning met a delegation from Liverpool city council on 17 January to discuss their provisional standard spending assessment for 1994-95. My right hon. Friend considered carefully all the representations made to him, including those from Liverpool, before taking final decisions on the revenue support grant settlement for 1994-95, which was approved by the House on 3 February.

Hedgerows

28. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he intends to take to provide enhanced protection against removal of hedgerows.

Mr. Atkins: The Government are committed to bringing forward measures for the protection of hedgerows when parliamentary time permits.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

29. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to encourage councils to extend compulsory competitive tendering to as wide a range of services as possible.

Mr. Baldry: We have already announced a detailed programme for extension of CCT to local authorities' professional and corporate services, to housing management, and to three further blue-collar services. I would encourage authorities to open up their services to competition wherever possible, and I am gratified to see that an increasing number of authorities are voluntarily subjecting a wide range of services to competitive tendering, ahead of the statutory timetable.

32. Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about his plans for the application of compulsory competitive tendering to housing management.

Sir George Young: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 26 November 1993 at column 264; to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 15 December 1993 at column 733; and to my hon. Friend the Member for Havant (Mr. Willets) on 21 January 1994 at columns 872-73.

Ofwat

30. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will next meet the Director General of Ofwat, to discuss water disconnections and compulsory metering of domestic households.

Mr. Atkins: I shall be having a meeting shortly with the Director General of Water Services to discuss matters of a current mutual interest.

34. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met representatives from Ofwat to discuss water charges.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met Mr. Byatt, the Director General of Water Services, on 26 July 1993 to discuss Mr. Byatt's periodic review of water price limits.

Local Government Review

31. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Local Government Commission for England concerning the progress of the local government review.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State holds regular meetings with Sir John Banham, the chairman of the Local Government Commission, to discuss all local government reorganisation issues, including the commission's progress. My right hon. Friend last met Sir John formally on 18 January 1994. I last met Sir John on 8 February.

Housing Association Houses

33. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's latest estimate of the number of new housing association houses to be completed in 1993-94, 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Members for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. Burden) and for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron) earlier today.

Water Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the landfill sites in Cambridgeshire, Norfolk and Suffolk where the pollution inspectorate or the National Rivers Authority have detected pollutants and dangerous chemical substances in nearby groundwater since 1991.

Mr. Atkins: Under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 the licensing and monitoring of landfill sites is the responsibility of waste regulation authorities, in this case Cambridgeshire, Norfolk and Suffolk county councils. Where the NRA has carried out monitoring, relevant results are available on the public register for the NRA's Anglian region.

Species Action Plans

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the basis of his estimate of a period of 10 years in order to complete and put into implementation the species action plans.

Mr. Atkins: The commitment to complete and put into implementation plans for at least 90 per cent. of the presently known globally threatened and threatened endemic species within the next 10 years was agreed with the territorial Departments and the statutory conservation agencies as a target which was achievable by the United Kingdom as a whole. It may prove possible for some countries, such as England, to improve upon this timescale.

Biodiversity Action Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes in Government energy policy will follow from the linkage of energy use and biodiversity conservation expressed in the biodiversity action plan.

Mr. Atkins: The Government's energy policy aims are already pursued in the context of other Government policies and commitments including those relating to the environment. The biodiversity action plan will inform the further development of these policies.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received following his announcement on THORP on 15 June 1993.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations.

Recycling

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities who (a) submitted and (b) did not submit to him a draft recycling plan by January 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: All English local authorities apart from Brent and Wolverhampton have submitted a draft recycling plan.

The Secretary of State for the Environment is considering the use of his powers under section 49(7) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to require those authorities to produce a draft plan.

All Scottish and Welsh authorities apart from:
Caithness
Dunfermline
Lochaber
Motherwell
Nairn
Sutherland
Western Isles
Wigtown
Alyn and Deeside
Brecknock
Radnorshire

have submitted draft recycling plans. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales are responsible for the submission of recycling plans in Scotland and Wales respectively.

Sewage Discharge Consents

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in upgrading sewage treatment works were in breach of their discharge consents at the time of privatisation of the water industry.

Mr. Atkins: The water industry's investment programme is making good progress. The latest figures available demonstrate a continuing improvement in the operational performance of sewage treatment works. In 1992 the proportion of works complying with their consent standards was more than 95 per cent. compared with 83 per cent. in 1988.

Miners' Welfare Schemes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what support has been provided to local authorities where they have taken over miners' welfare schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: No specific support has been provided to local authorities for this purpose. The support of miners' welfare schemes is a matter for British Coal and the Coal Industry Social Welfare Organisation.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue further guidelines to the Local Government Commission.

Mr. Baldry: We have no plans to issue further guidance to the Local Government Commission.

Councillors (Directorships)

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department has about the number of authorities which appoint councillors as directors of companies who have contracted-out services for local authorities.

Mr. Baldry: The Department does not collate information on this subject.

Local Authority Reorganisation Costs

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources will be made available to authorities in Cleveland and the Isle of Wight for reorganisation costs incurred by them in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: We propose, on the basis, inter alia, of information provided by the authorities themselves, the Government's public expenditure plans and progress on implementing the review of local government, to issue to authorities in Cleveland and the Isle of Wight Supplementary Credit Approvals, subject to a maximum, to enable them to borrow to meet certain start-up costs which will be incurred in 1994-95 before they are reorganised. Once reorganised, the Government expects that, in general, early revenue savings and capital receipts from reorganisation will significantly reduce the need for further transitional assistance and will provide resources to repay borrowing undertaken in reliance on these SCAs. For 1994-95 the maximum amounts proposed for authorities in Cleveland and the Isle of Wight are as follows:

Authority	SCA maximum amount £K (rounded)
Isle of Wight
Isle of Wight County Council	1,370
Medina Borough Council	80
South Wight Borough Council	30
Cleveland
Cleveland Borough Council	1,060
Hartlepool Borough Council	1,680
Langbaurgh on Tees Borough Council	2,000
Middlesbrough Borough Council	1,040
Stockton-on-Tees Borough Council	1,740
Total	9,000

Electrical Wiring

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many accidents in the home each year result from faulty electrical wiring; and what steps the Health and Safety Executive is taking to ensure high standards of electrical installation.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 February 1994]: Between 1988 and 1992 the average number of deaths in the home due to receiving an electrical shock were 28. Of these less than 3 per cent. resulted from faults in fixed electrical wiring.

As a result of representations from: the deregulation task forces, the Electrical Contractors Association and others, my Department, in conjunction with the Department of Trade and Industry and the Health and Safety Executive, is looking at the desirability and practicability of including electrical safety within the Building Regulations. My Department has also recently accepted an invitation to join other Government bodies on the board of the National Inspection Council for electrical Installation Contractors. Inspectors of the Health and Safety Executive and of local authorities enforce the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989 which govern the safety of electrical installations in workplaces.

DEFENCE

Defence Weapons Establishment

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if live horses have been used in the tests carried out at the defence weapons establishment at Porton Down into the efficacy of whips on horses;

(2) which organisation has commissioned the defence weapons establishment at Porton Down to conduct tests on the efficacy of whips on horses;

(3) what is the purpose of testing of the efficacy of whips on horses at the defence weapons establishment at Porton Down;

(4) on what date tests commenced at the defence weapons establishment at Porton Down on the efficacy of whips on horses; and on what date they finished or will finish.

Mr. Hanley: These are matters for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down—CBDE. I have asked the Chief Executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. G. Pearson to Mr. Edward O'Hara, dated 16 February 1994:

1. Your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence asking about the testing of whips involving the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down have been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. In June 1993 the Stewards of the Jockey Club established a Working Group to assess whether the current Rules of Racing were adequate to control whip abuse. The Terms of Reference of the Working Group are to promote and co-ordinate further research into the specifications and design of the whip together with methods of assessing possible injury. Because of CBDE's expertise in the development of protective equipment for Service personnel against impacts and explosive blast we were invited by the Animal Health Trust on behalf of the Jockey Club to advise the Whip Working Group on the probable biomechanical principles of impacts to skin by whips and to recommend a simple, objective and scientifically credible test method that can be used to rank whips submitted to the Jockey Club. The Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is acting in a purely advisory role and will not be undertaking the tests on the whips submitted to the Jockey Club. Live horses are not used in any of this advisory work being carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment. The tests will be carried out by the Jockey Club or their agents.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the policy of the Royal Air Force towards officers and men who fall into debt as a result of increased maintenance payments set by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Hanley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) on 2 February 1994 at columns 713-14.

Low Flying

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of booked low flying hours in the United Kingdom low flying system in 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The total number of hours booked at low level in the United Kingdom low flying system in 1993 was 107,220. This figure does not include the hours booked in the recently created low flying area 10 as this information is not yet available.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the southerly directional flow control for low flying aircraft was introduced between Penrhyndeudraeth and Trawsfynydd.

Mr. Hanley: The flow control was introduced on 10 August 1992.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying sorties were undertaken in the United Kingdom low flying system in the years 1989, 1990 and 1993, calculated on the pre-1985 basis of estimating sorties from numbers of movements.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Year	The approximate number of sorties using the pre-1985 method
1989	121,088
1990	125,210
1993	[1]105,189

[1] This figure does not take account of movements flown within LFA 10 as this information is not yet available.

In addition, I regret that the answer given to the hon. Member on 2 April 1993 at column 505 did not take account of the number of night movements flown in 1991 and 1992. Revised figures for the approximate number of sorties flown using the pre-1985 method in 1991 and 1992 are as follows:

1991—102,460
1992—115,573

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying movements were recorded over Wales in 1993.

Mr. Hanley: It is not our practice to publish detailed information on activity in individual low flying areas.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations and dates of currently planned presentations by the Ministry of Defence low flying presentation team.

Mr. Hanley: Presentations by the Ministry of Defence low flying presentation team are currently planned to take place on Thursday 24 February at Barnard Castle, County Durham and on Monday 28 February at Llandrindod Wells, Powys.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the impact of the concentration of RAF fast jet advanced flying training at RAF Valley on the amount of low flying in north Wales; and what research was carried out by his Department, prior to the decision to concentrate training at Valley, on (a) the effects on air traffic density and air safety and (b) the noise disturbance.

Mr. Hanley: Although every effort will be made to spread low flying sorties throughout the United Kingdom flying system, it is inevitable that with the concentration of fast jet advanced flying training at RAF Valley more use will be made of the airspace over north and mid Wales. Revision of procedures for the management of the local airspace will ensure that the effect of this increased air traffic is minimised and that air safety is not compromised.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints about low flying were received by his Department from addresses in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland in each months since March 1993.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of inquiries or complaints relating to military low flying training which my Department received during the period April 1993 to January 1994 from addresses in England, Wales and Scotland were as follows:

Month	England	Wales	Scotland
1993
April	263	30	84
May	404	54	118
June	541	53	105
July	666	83	92
August	566	70	108
September	403	70	70
October	259	35	94
November	164	29	73
December	193	34	49
1994
January	237	27	31

Aircraft Movements

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft movements (a) by Hawk aircraft and (b) by other types of aircraft were recorded at RAF Valley in each of the last four years; and what is the projected number of Hawk movements per annum at RAF Valley after the transfer there of all RAF fast jet advanced flying training.

Mr. Hanley: Records of aircraft movements at RAF Valley are designated as either fixed-wing aircraft or helicopter. It is therefore not possible to give a precise figure on the number of movements recorded solely by Hawk aircraft during the last four years, although in the figures shown in the table for fixed-wing movements, the majority were flown by Hawks:

	Movements
1993	46,007
1992	60,771
1991	66,469
1990	62,007

The number of movements flown by helicopters at RAF Valley during the last four years were as follows:

	Movements
1993	5,410
1992	6,827
1991	12,813
1990	14,846

When advanced Hawk training is transferred to RAF Valley, the projected number of Hawk movements per annum will be in the order of 65,000.

Institute of Community and Occupational Medicine

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the titles of all survey and research reports produced by the Royal Air Force Institute of Community and Occupational Medicine since 1989.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1989 the RAF Institute of Health and Medical Training (RAF IHNT), formerly known as the Royal Air Force Institute of Community and Occupational Medicine (ICOM), has issued about 280 reports covering an extensive range of occupational and public health issues affecting the Royal Air Force worldwide. They include classified, in-confidence or otherwise sensitive subjects. All were produced solely for internal use within my Department and it would not be appropriate to release a complete list of titles.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current and planned activities of the Royal Air Force Institute of Community and Occupational Medicine relating to aircraft noise.

Mr. Hanley: The RAF Institute of Health and Medical Training's current research activities include investigation of the noise levels surrounding helicopter landing sites and development of criteria for classifying the effect of night-time helicopter noise. The institute is undertaking research with Salford university into the noise effects of light aircraft operations. It also provides a member for a working group which is examining the feasibility of a study to investigate the possible effects on health of noise from low flying aircraft.

The institute has a number of research tasks planned in addition to the routine surveys of the noise contours around operational airfields. Future tasks include incorporating helicopter noise data into the AIRNOISE computer model and the calculation of noise from Chinook auxiliary power supply engines.

Nuclear Test Participants

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will commission a health study of British nuclear test participants and their families in order to compare health and genetic records with the general population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has no plans for further studies regarding the British nuclear test veterans. As the recent National Radiological Protection Board report indicated that there was no risk to test participants, any effect on their families is therefore extremely unlikely.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he will take to ensure that cases of leukaemia and myeloma among British nuclear test participants are included in the studies of the National Radiological Protection Board.

Mr. Hanley: The recently published NRPB study took account of cases of leukaemia and myeloma among British nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he proposes to take following the recent publication of the National Radiological Protection Board report into mortality and incidence of cancer in British nuclear test participants.

Mr. Hanley: We have noted the recent NRPB report, which concluded that there was no health risk to test participants.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what efforts have been undertaken to assess the health risk to persons (a) not wearing protective equipment, (b) with a blue book entry and (c) present at the time of explosion, in connection with studies by the National Radiological Protection Board into British nuclear test participants.

Mr. Hanley: The recent NRPB report concluded that participation in the test programme had no detectable effect on participants' expectation of life or on their overall risk of developing cancer or other fatal diseases.

Armed Services Personnel

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel there were, for each year since 1979, in each of the armed services operating in and from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of United Kingdom regular forces and Gurkhas stationed in the United Kingdom (as at 1 July 1993) were as follows:

Year	United Kingdom regular forces			Gurkhas	Total including Gurkhas
	Royal Navy services	Army	Royal Air Force
1979	66,588	92,899	72,741	742	232,970
1980	65,631	96,363	76,066	905	238,965
1981	70,526	96,653	77,862	1,258	246,299
1982	66,727	90,127	75,102	596	232,552
1983	66,257	88,977	73,605	1,167	230,006
1984	62,644	92,278	75,523	1,226	231,671
1985	60,300	93,021	76,230	1,226	230,777
1986	59,899	92,093	76,285	1,300	229,577
1987	60,899	90,616	76,578	1,201	229,294
1988	58,704	91,560	75,902	1,342	227,508
1989	58,131	88,481	73,583	1,170	221,365
1990	54,957	88,290	72,668	1,437	217,352
1991	53,512	82,392	71,982	1,373	209,259
1992	53,884	85,951	70,835	1,346	212,016
1993	52,805	82,605	66,775	1,397	203,582

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

RAF Saxa Vord (Sewage Treatment)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much public money has been spent by the Ministry of Defence in maintenance, monitoring and repair of the sewage treatment works at RAF Saxa Vord since its completion in 1989.

Mr. Hanley: Some £31,000 has been spent by the Ministry of Defence for the maintenance, monitoring and repair of the sewage treatment works at RAF Saxa Vord since its completion in 1989.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to the RAF of the installation of the sewage treatment plant at RAF Saxa Vord completed in November 1989.

Mr. Hanley: The cost to the RAF for the installation of the sewage treatment plant at RAF Saxa Vord was approximately £55,000.

Noise Pollution (Compensation)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy with regard to compensation of residents living in close proximity to RAF bases in respect of increased or excessive noise pollution and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1985, following a detailed examination of noise created by military aircraft, it has been my Department's policy to offer sound insulation grants to the owners/occupiers of houses in the vicinity of operational airfields which fall within certain scientifically defined noise contours. In cases where noise exceeds a higher level, the Department may offer to acquire the particular property concerned. There is also scope to provide compensation for the depreciation in value of property resulting from the bringing into use of new public works.

The Department's compensation scheme is a voluntary one but follows closely statutory schemes of the Department of Transport at civil airports.

To date, more than 30 such schemes have been introduced; these are reviewed at five-yearly intervals unless operational changes are such that an earlier review is warranted.

Nuclear Defence Capability (Test)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the United Kingdom's nuclear defence capability, in money terms and as a percentage of his Department's budget, for (a) his Department as a whole, (b) the Royal Navy, (c) the Army and (d) the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

	Estimated financial year 1993-94 outturn £ million	Relevant percentage of grouping/total budget
Royal Navy	[1]1,200	22·00
Army[2]	—	—
RAF	[3]20	0·36
Total	[4]1,820	7·80

Notes
[1] Direct capital and operating costs of Trident and Polaris.
[2] The Army does not operate nuclear weapons.
[3] Non warhead equipment, security and operating costs of the WE177.
[4] Includes RN and RAF costs as shown, plus £600 million which falls to the Procurement Executive and Research Grouping.

Civil Defence Force (Medals)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether members of the Civil Defence Force, 1939-45, are entitled to wear the defence medal; and to which other medal they are entitled.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have been asked to reply.

Anyone who undertook certain civilian service in one of 50 different categories in the United Kingdom for a period of not less than three years between September 1939 and May 1945 may qualify for the defence medal; and these categories include relevant service in a number of organisations with the words "civil defence" in their title. I am arranging for copies of leaflets giving full details of those who may qualify to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Service qualifying for the defence medal does not as such confer entitlement to the award of any other medal.

Communications Satellite

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the present position with regard to the United Kingdom military communications satellite; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: A contract worth some £300m has been awarded today for the development, production and delivery in orbit of two Skynet 4 stage 2 military communication satellites. These will replace the existing Skynet 4 stage 1 satellites as they approach the end of their operational life.

British Aerospace is prime contractor for this work. The main sub-contractors are Matra Marconi Space (UK) for satellite communications payload work and McDonnell Douglas and Arianespace for the launch vehicles. This is an important contract which will ensure the well-being of the United Kingdom's space industry and contribute to its long-term future.

Mr. Gordon Foxley

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), of 26 November, Official Report, column 240, if he will publish, or place in the Library, a copy of his letter on Mr. Gordon Foxley.

Mr. Aitken: Copies are now available in the House Library.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were in temporary employment; and what percentage they represented of total employees, in each region in each year since 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: For years 1984 onwards, this information is available from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) and can be obtained via the Quantime LFS service available in the Library.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons in receipt of unemployment benefit within the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Port Glasgow have been unemployed for (a) more than six months, (b) more than 12 months and (c) more than two years; and if he will give these figures for (i) men and (ii) women for each month since 1992.

Miss Widdecombe: A count of the numbers of people claiming unemployment related benefits, by duration, is available on the unadjusted basis only. Information for the months of January, April, July and October can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in (a) Lewisham and (b) London were in temporary employment at the latest available date; and how many of them were women.

Miss Widdecombe: Latest estimates from the Summer 1993 Labour Force Survey show that there were 196,000 people in temporary employment in Greater London, of which 109,000 were women. No information is available on the numbers in temporary employment in Lewisham.

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his current estimate of the number of people in (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is shown in the following table:

Work force in employment: Great Britain
(Seasonally adjusted)

Thousand

	Full time	Part time
September 1993	17,427	6,941

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many 16 to 18-year-olds were undergoing apprenticeship training in (a) Lewisham and (b) London during each calendar year from 1990.

Miss Widdecombe: Information for the South East (which includes London) and for London separately on the estimated number of apprentices in spring of each year is given in the following table. No information is available for the Lewisham area.

Number of 16 to 18-year-olds undergoing apprenticeship training ('000s)[1]

Source: Labour Force Survey
[1] This is based on the number of people reporting they were doing a recognised trade apprenticeship at the time they were interviewed.
[2] Less than 10,000 in cell; estimate not shown.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the trend in the number of people in (a) Lewisham and (b) London availing themselves of youth training, including credits and training for work schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The number of people on youth training and training for work including predecessor programmes in 1991, 1992 and 1993 is given in the following table:

Participants on training (inc predecessor) programmes 1991-1993

	13 October 1991	11 October 1992	10 October 1993

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest figures for the percentage of young people aged 16 to 19 years who are (i) in full-time education, (ii) in training schemes, (iii) employed and (iv) unemployed in (a) Lewisham and (b) London.

Miss Widdecombe: Latest estimates from the summer 1993 Labour Force Survey (LFS) show that of all 16 to 19-year-olds in Greater London: 59 per cent. were in full-time education; 4 per cent. were employed in Government employment and training programmes; 17 per cent. were otherwise employed and not in full-time education; and 13 per cent. were ILO unemployed and not in full-time education. The Labour Force Survey also estimates that 76 per cent. of 16 to 19-year-olds in the London borough of Lewisham were in full-time education. The numbers of 16 to 19-year-olds in Lewisham sampled in the Labour Force Survey are too small to provide a reliable breakdown of their economic activity.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people would be registered as unemployed in January if the figures were treated on the same basis as 1978.

Miss Widdecombe: No official estimate is available and to produce one would involve speculation about economic, demographic and social changes that would serve no useful purpose.

Industrial Accidents, Injuries and Illness

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many industrial accidents, injuries and illness were recorded as requiring admission to hospital in each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not collected annually but a special study of accidents collected in the General Household Survey during 1986-89, published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys "Home and Leisure Accident Research, 1991 data" indicates that each year, in Great Britain, the accident and emergency departments in hospitals treat around 1·6 million people who are injured during working activities, including driving to work. There is no information on the number of industrial illnesses requiring admission to hospital.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many working days were lost due to accidents, injuries and illness, which were work related, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Current occupational injury reporting legislation does not require information on the actual length of absence from work to be reported. However, the Health and Safety Executive sponsored a supplement of questions on workplace injury and ill health to the 1990 Labour Force Survey. It is estimated that in Great Britain, workers were incapacitated for work for 23·2 million days in the year to spring 1990 due to workplace injury. Of these, 22·8 million were lost due to injuries reported under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrances Regulations. For work-related ill health, an estimated 750,000 workers were incapacitated for a total of 13 million days.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the annual cost, in lost production, benefit payments and lost revenue arising from industrial injuries, accidents and illness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Estimates of annual costs in benefit payments and lost revenue arising from industrial injuries, accidents and illness are not available.

Jobcentres

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the number of job vacancies referred to jobcentres by employers.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: On the seasonally adjusted basis there were 196,000 vacancies notified to United Kingdom jobcentres in January 1994. In the United Kingdom jobcentre vacancies account for about a third of the total.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the number of vacancies referred to jobcentres which are filled within (a) a day, (b) a week, (c) a month and (d) three months; and what significant regional variations there are in these average figures.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the proportion of vacancies at any one point in time held by jobcentres.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It is estimated that nationally Jobcentre vacancies represent about one third of all unfilled vacancies.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many visits abroad the Minister of State made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newport, East (Mr. Hughes) on 3 November 1993 at column 268 and to my subsequent letter to him of 17 January 1994, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

The information given to the hon. Member for Newport, East included information up to and including 26 October 1993. Since then, I have undertaken two further engagements overseas. The first to deliver the keynote address and attend a Council of Europe meeting in Malta at a cost of £5,451; the second, to accompany my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to a Social Affairs Council meeting in Brussels at a total cost of £3,403. These figures include the costs of accompanying officials.

Aero-generators

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many jobs are currently supported by (a) aero-generator manufacture, (b) aero-generator construction and (c) aero-generator operation and maintenance in the United Kingdom.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is not available separately. However, the latest census of employment results show that there were 156,000 people employed in the aerospace equipment manufacturing and repairing industry in the United Kingdom in 1991.

EC Structural Funds

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what the money aimed at long-term unemployment from the EC structural funds will be spent on.
